Then when an employer made a contribution to a pension plan and deducted contributions from the employee's salary cheque, the employee would have to go into the central fund.

Mr. Gordon Hughes (CCF — Port Arthur) said the $25-a-month basic pension for CNR employees should be raised in line with the increase in the cost of living.

The committee adjourned until next Tuesday to review Trans-Canada Air Lines accounts and budgets.

SHUCKS, I WAS KIDDING — Mrs. John Weir puts her hands to her head as milkman Dean Trojicek surprises her family with a real live cow in Falos Verdes Estates, Calif. Seems Mrs. Weir left a note for the milkman saying that the whole family uses milk it might be better to just leave a cow. With an assist from the dairy association, he did just that—bringing this Holstein "Corny" to the front door. Mrs. Weir decided she'd rather just have the nine quarts of milk delivered to the door every other day. So, Corny went back to the farm, along with milking machine (lower right). (AP Wirephoto).

Economic Want, Unrest On March in Latin America Seen in Stevenson's Visit

Editors' note: What kind of a job did Adlai Stevenson do in his "fact-finding" trip? Max Harrison, the AP's ace U.S. correspondent who accompanied him on the tour, looks at the assignment and his behind-the-story.

By MAX HARRISON

WASHINGTON (AP) — The interest on Adlai Stevenson's South American tour still is incomplete but he seems to have succeeded in achieving at least one broad objective of his special presidential assignment.

Stevenson, United States ambassador at the United Nations, arrived home Thursday night from his tour of 10 South American countries and said he will report to President Kennedy today that economic want and unrest are the two main trends in that continent.

The main goal of this mission, although never stated in these precise terms, appears to have been to convince South American leaders that the Kennedy administration is giving Latin America a high level priority in its foreign policy.

The 18,500-mile Stevenson trip was intended to call attention to the United States' new hemispheric problems and to dramatize the president's alliance-for-progress program to raise living standards of Latin American people.

There is little doubt that he did a good selling job on the Kennedy program and it seems to have been received with enthusiasm at a meeting in Uruguay to consider the alliance-for - progress plan. It will strike a popular note in Latin America.

But one big minus was his failure to interest some of the key countries in a political program to halt the spread of communism in the hemisphere.

He found most of the leaders too preoccupied with their own leftist groups or with serious internal economic and political problems to embark on any joint program now.

As a result he reluctantly concluded that it would not be worthwhile to call for a Latin American political conference at least until after the results of the Uruguayan economic conference are known. It is hoped that once the alliance-for - progress program has been launched the climate might be more suitable for political action.

DISPELLED IDEA

On communism, Stevenson said:

"If there was any idea that communism was not a problem for the United States, I believe we dispelled this illusion."

Palmer, Pal Top Field In Western

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) Arnold Palmer and Al Geiberger of Santa Barbara, Calif., led a mass assault on par Thursday as both carded 65s—six under par — in the opening round of the Western Open golf tournament.

The touring pros found the rolling 6,790 - yard Blythefield Country Club course to their liking as nearly 30 of the 148-man field played par or better golf.

Palmer made a spectacular bid for the $5,000 top prize in the $30,000 tournament.

He collected an eagle on the 535 - yard par five 10th hole and added six birdies during his round. He went over par on two holes, once when he was trapped, the other when he glanced a shot off a tree.

Gary Player toured the course in 67.

THEY RE-GREW HAIR!

IN 12 MONTHS IN 3 MONTHS

Hair Specialist Here Saturday

Will Show Men and Women How to Save Hair and Prevent Baldness

OTTAWA, Ont. New home treatment methods for saving hair and restoring its growth will be demonstrated in Belleville Saturday, June 24 at the Hotel Quinte.

Trichologist R. G. Lang will be in charge, representing the dynamic Roberts Hair & Scalp Specialists organization. He will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 11.00 to 7.00 p.m.

This new treatment is neither "mail order" nor "cure-all". It is adapted to the individual after a personal examination and progress is checked at regular intervals by a Roberts Specialist.

Who Can Be Helped?

Will the new Roberts treatment cure baldness? "No!" For we cannot help men and women who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But if you still have fuzz and your scalp is still creating hair, you can at least save and thicken what you have. Some conditions, such as "spot baldness" usually have complete coverage if caught in time!

Other conditions that usually bring on excessive hair-loss—dandruff, itching, over-oiliness or dryness, follicle clogged with sebum or seborrhea— can be corrected by the Roberts home treatment if caught in time.

"DON'T WAIT UNTIL IT'S TOO LATE"

Baldness won't wait for doubters to be convinced, you are going to keep right on losing hair 'til you're bald —unless you get your scalp in healthy, hair-growing condition again.

Examine You Free

We want to make it clear that you incur absolutely no charge or obligation by coming in for an examination.

Your only obligation is to yourself. We do not accept cases that will not respond.

Guarantee Satisfaction

The Roberts Specialists will give you a written guarantee that you must be satisfied within 30 days or it will cost you nothing.

For a free examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the desk clerk for Mr. Lang's room number. He does not make appointments, so come in at your convenience. Examinations are given in private.

Favored to Win Detroit Memorial

Hayward Driving Thrills Yanks

He didn't register the fastest time but the Americans are still talking of Bobby Hayward's run in "Miss Supertest" in the Detroit Memorial Race trials.

Don Wilmot and "Miss U.S.I." averaged 107.886 miles an hour around the Detroit river three-mile course to post top speed.

Hayward's speed of 102.857 was the second best, followed by Bill Cantrell in "Gale V" with 102.681 and Chuck Thompson in "Miss Detroit" in a sputtering 101.312.

"At 101 165 miles an hour on the backstretch and I topped 130 on the straightaway along the Detroit shore," he said.

"But," he added, "I know I wasn't coming out of the turns the way Supertest did."

Hayward, "first driver to take his trial around the three-mile raceway, seemed to lose as he posted his 103-plus average. "Miss Supertest's" engine purred as Hayward took the Canadian boat in and out of the turns without any great loss of straightaway speed.

"The way 'Miss Supertest' was running Hayward could have set his own qualifying speed," commented a veteran driver.

"Miss Detroit" and "Gale V" were plagued by carburetion troubles in their trials. Chuck Thompson made three runs but finished the third.

Cantrell qualified on his second appearance but Gale V also balked with carburetion trouble. He turned in laps of 92 and finally 102 mph.

The first heat of the Detroit Memorial Regatta is scheduled soon tomorrow. "Miss Supertest II" looms as the big favorite.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Theo Geo and Castlebury finished in a dead heat for first place Thursday in the Burnaby Claiming Purse at Woodbine. Theo Geo, owned by Mrs. B. S. Chris of Kitchener, was ridden by Jimmy Parnell. Castleberry, owned by J. E. Fyvie and Sea-gram of Waterloo, was ridden by Jim Fitzsimmons of Calgary. They ran the distance in 1:10.8.

Theo Geo was odds-on favorite and, as a result of the dead heat, paid only $2.60, $2.00 and $2.40. Castleberry, second choice in the wagering, paid $3.80, $4.20 and $3.10.

Plagal won the featured Clarkson Purse and paid $4.70, $2.70 and $2.10. Plagal combined with Queen's Tour for a quinella of $24.

There was a daily double of $145.60 when the long - priced Kate Kirk won the second race after the favorite, Big Native, scored a handy win in the first race.

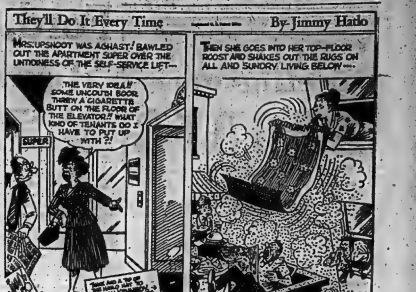
You Can't Get 'Em Out With Walks

PHILADELPHIA (AP)— Someone asked Elroy Face when he was going to walk another batter.

"You never know, I may never walk another man," replied the doughty relief pitcher of Pittsburgh Pirates.

Face, who by the way, is as stingy with words as he is with walks, hits and runs, walked just one batter in 37 innings of pitching by Thursday.

Wahl's the secret, Roy? How do you manage to keep that ball over the plate?



"It's just natural," he said.

Face, who last year walked 29 in 115 innings, says he has no secret for good control.

"I work on the theory that if they hit the ball you got a chance to get 'em out. If they walk there isn't a thing you can do about it."

Lacrosse

Niagara Falls Scobies won their first game of the Ontario Lacrosse Association senior season Thursday night and the victory was usshred in with unscheduled fanfare.

Tensions that had been building up throughout a rough game exploded in the final 11 seconds when a 15-11 Niagara Falls victory over Whitby Hillgreen had been assured. The scrap, including half a dozen or more flat fights, emptied both benches and took 15 minutes to quell.

At Port Credit, the Sailors moved into a first - place tie with Brampton Ramblers by downing the Ramblers 12-4. Whitby Red Wings edged St. Catharines Athletics 12-10 in a junior game.

Ed Crogan of the home team was felled in the second minute of play at Niagara Falls with a broken jaw. Later, Stoney Isaacs was cut on the mouth and Rod Smith and goalie Seymour Thomas were dropped by Brooklin crosschecks. The brawl began when Brooklin's Roy Woods charged in on Thomas.

Four majors and a minor were handed out when order was restored.

DELAYS ACTION

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Fluoridation of London's water supplies will not come about this year. A motion that the question be reopened and placed on the agenda for the next meeting was lost at a city council meeting Thursday for want of a two - thirds majority. This means the subject cannot be considered again this year.

Tigers Retain Game Lead

By ED WILES
Associated Press Sports Writer

What with Whitey Ford the top winner in the majors, and Roger Maris and Mickey Mantle 1-2 in home runs, about the only thing New York Yankees are missing these days is a top seat in the American League pennant race. And they could grab that his weekend.

The second - place Yankees are one game behind Detroit at the moment. And while the Tigers open a four - game struggle at Cleveland against the third-place Indians tonight, the Yanks play the first of three at Minnesota against the ninth place Twins, who have lost seven in a row to New York.

Detroit retained its slim edge and moved three games ahead of idle Cleveland with a 5-4 victory at Washington Thursday night. The Yanks romped 9-3 over Kansas City with Ford winning his 12th and Maris crashing his 27th homer.

Baltimore battered Minnesota 9-3 and Boston got past Los Angeles Angels 2-1 in the only other games scheduled.

NEARS RECORD

Maris got a pair of doubles and a single in addition to the homer, in three - run shot off loser Norm Bass (4-6) that capped a five - run second inning for the Yankees. Maris' 15th home run in June, three shy of the major league record for one month set by Rudy York of Detroit in 1937.

Roger drove in four runs for the night, tying Norm Cash of the Tigers for the major league lead with 48.

Ford (13-3) needed relief help from Luis Arroyo in the eighth after blanking the A's on three hits through seven innings. Whitey gave up six hits altogether and walked three while fanning nine, upping his AL-leading strikeout total to 93.

Consecutive doubles by Rocky Colavito and Cash cracked a 4-4 tie in the seventh inning for the Tigers, who twice had to come from behind before handing the Senators their sixth straight defeat. Terry Fox (3-0) was the winning pitcher, blanking the Senators on three hits in four innings of relief. Bennie Daniels (5-4) was the loser.

Gus Triandos drove in five runs with three hits, two of them doubles, as the Orioles beat the Twins and southpaw Jim Kaat (5-7). Milt Pappas (3-3), pitching his first complete game since April 29 after a start with arm trouble, was the winner. He allowed eight hits, but had a shutout until Harmon Killebrew hit a two-run single in the seventh.

There were 15 bases on balls but only five hits in Boston's squeaker at Los Angeles. The Red Sox, behind the two - hit pitching of rookie Galen Cisco and winner Mike Fornieles (5-3), won it on a third-inning single by Chuck Schilling. Ryne Duren (3-4) was the loser, giving up all three Boston hits.

Jets Clip Wings 6-5, Leafs Split

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

One good way for a pitcher to become a big winner is to have his club's heavy artillery hits his opponent.

That's what happened to Bob Veale of Columbus Jets Thursday night as he became the International League's biggest winner this season, racking up victory No. 8 in beating Rochester Wings 6-5.

The all star lefthander didn't pitch what might be called a masterpiece, allowing 13 hits, including five for extra bases, and six walks. But his league-leading teammates slugged nine hits, including three homers and a pair of doubles that accounted for five runs.

The victory increased the Jets' first-place margin to one game over Charleston Marlins, who split a doubleheader against Toronto Maple Leafs. The Leafs won the opener 5-3 but Charleston came back to win the 14-inning nightcap 3-2.

Richmond Virginians posted an 11-inning verdict in the nightcap of a twi bill against Syracuse Chiefs 8-5, while the Chiefs took the opener 8-4. Jersey City and Buffalo split a doubleheader, was rained out.

Veale, 8-5 and leading the league in strikeouts with 103, got home - run support from Jerry Lumpe, Gordy Coleman, John Schalex and Dick Gray.

Ron Plaza's single drove in Charleston's clinching run in the 14th after Ed Olivares singled in the ninth to tie the game 2-2. Lou Johnson homered for Toronto in the nightcap, won by Joe Marlins' Bob Dullin in relief. A single run in the fifth inning by the Leafs broke a 2-2 count in the opener, fashioned by the Marlins' Bobby Morgan's homer with a man on.

Willie Miranda's error led in a Richmond's decisive run in the nightcap following successive singles by Tex Brash and George Risley. Jess Gonder of the Virginians hit a three - run homer in the eighth inning.

Frank Lajs homered with two men on for the Chiefs in the opener in a four-run fourth inning that nailed down Ted Sadowski's first victory. Ken Shearer and Jim Piscoi hit four-baggers for the Virginians as Frank Carpin lost his fourth game of the season.

Ontario Open

Knudson Shoots Sensational 64

By AL MARTELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ISLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Young George Knudson continued his defence of the Ontario open golf championship today, three strokes to the good after a record - smashing performance in the first round.

The 25-year-old product of Winnipeg links, now as assistant professional at Toronto's Oakdale Club, tore the Islington Golf Club layout apart Thursday with an eight-under-par 64, one stroke better than the competitive course record.

A formidable field was bunched behind him as 137 competitors—the top 120 and ties—prepared to tee off for the second 18 holes of the 72-hole test. The weather outlook was unsettled, warm but with the possibility of showers, in contrast to Thursday's ideal conditions.

Knudson took the lead with an collected a birdie on the first. He eagled the second and birdied the fifth, sixth, 11th, 13th and 15th.

Within reaching distance was Alvie Thompson, formerly of Vancouver and now assistant pro at Northwood in Toronto, whose 67 was good for lead position until late in the day. Thompson, 28, normally at rated a "comer" in golfing circles.

Close behind him was Bob Rose of Toronto, a new member of the pro ranks who carded a 34-34—68 Thursday to tie amateur Nick Weslock of Port Credit, first.

Five strokes back of 69 were two amateurs, Bruce Castator of Weston and Dave Moriarty of North Bay, and two pros, Dick Swatek of Atcaster and Irv Lightstone of Downsview.

After the 18 holes today the field will be pared to the low 60 scores and ties, with the final 36 holes to go Saturday.

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

A sports-hungry citizen couldn't ask for more diversified fare than will be dished up in the city and district this weekend.

There is persistently everything on the menu except hockey, tiddly-winks, jai alai, Russian roulette, and spin-the-plate.

Wrestling addicts get their fill of roughage tonight at Memorial Arena when Dick "Bulldog" Brower, the "Chad Gable" from Delaware, hopes to take Farmer Boy Townsend apart and let the pieces fall where they may. They might have a job trying to get the 24-armed Farmer Boy together again. The "Bulldog" is everything the name suggests.

The clean-cut speedsters, Timmy Geohagen and Tony Marino take on the tag-team champions, Man Mountain Campbell and Stan Stasiak and this could end up in a bamboozy hassle. Gino Marello, the 346-pound youth, tangles with backman Prince Nero in the opening bloodletter.

City softball squads hit the road over the week-end with the Bobcats being hosted by the RCAF Fivers tonight in Trenton and Joyce's Rest Eaters trekking to Cobourg tomorrow, starting at 8.15. The game could be a battle for top spot in the league standing.

It's a big weekend, too, for the lawn bowlers. Gerry Hyde, FLSA District 15 head man, has a big knockout rinks tournament arranged for the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club on Sunday that should attract the cream of the district's green keepers. Tomorrow Campbellford hosts the boys at the Canada Packer Cup doubles.

Horse lovers should get their show and performance appetites satisfied at the Charity Horse Show slated for the Fair Grounds saturday starting 10.30 a.m. The show is sponsored by the Belleville Lions Club with the proceeds going to the Retarded Children's Association branch here.

If you like "Karting", about 75 drivers from the United States and Canada will compete in the 1,000 Islands International Karting Championship races to be run at Alexandria Bay, N.Y., on Sunday.

The Belleville Kosmers will be seeking their fourth and fifth straight victories in the Lakeshore Intermediate Baseball League series over the weekend. Tomorrow night they go to Peterborough to take on the Faunings of that city in an 8.30 tilt, while Sunday they entertain Newcastle at the Fair Grounds starting at 2.30.

Stock car drivers readying for the opening races at Dick Burrowes' Shannonville Speedway Parkland on July 1st, can exercise their entries at the track on Sunday. Stock car racing is being revived here and should once again prove the popular sport it was a few years back. There's karting for the kiddies every day at the Parkland. Nice spot for a Sunday family picnic, too.

If you are a sports car race enthusiast, a field of 33, including the world's three top ranking drivers, will be in the grid at Mosport Park, near Bowmanville, tomorrow, for the start of the international sports car race. Five-foot for top spots are British Stirling Moss, Belgium's Olivier Gendebein and Sweden's Joakim Bonnier. It's a 200-mile race with $10,000 at the end of the racing rainbow.

There's a big day at the Bay of Quinte Golf and Country Club, Sunday. The annual "Mr. and Mrs. Tournament" gets under way with Picton, Napanee, Trenton and RCAF CFD clubs on the invitation list.

South Hastings Baseball Leaguers go to the mat three times with Latta at Shannonville and Camithan at Read, Saturday night starting 8.45, while Sunday, Belleville Kosmer Bees go to Foxboro with game time at two o'clock.

Commercial softball saw a rained-out game played between Rollins Construction and Lightfoot Construction Sunday evening at the Alemite Field starting six o'clock.

Eye-Cut Stops Fight

Cleroux TKO's Miteff

By MARVEN MOSS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—Bob Cleroux slashed open the cut-prone area above Alex Miteff's left eye Thursday night for a seventh - round technical knockout over the dark - haired heavyweight from the Argentine.

A crowd estimated at 8,500 paid between $3 and $7 for the soldout - crammed match — a scheduled 10-rounder — at the Forum.

Dr. Emile Thomas, ringside physician, ordered the fight stopped after the sixth round ended and Miteff came back to his corner, the left side of his face smeared with blood.

The gash, an old ring wound, was reopened by Cleroux's gifted belts in the fourth round and the Montreal-Montrealer went to work on it with right crosses in the next two.

But in Miteff's dressing room afterward, his manager Freddy Pierce of New York, tried to pass off the TKO as brought on by something other than the cut.

MANAGER WORRIES

He was apparently concerned about Miteff's fast-growing reputation as an easy bleeder and how Thursday night's outcome would affect a match he has lined up in Louisville, Ky., July 24 with Cassius Clay.

Pierre claimed he had refereed a Bobby Leatham to stop the bout because Cleroux's body blows had severely bruised Miteff's ribs on the right side and the Argentinian was in pain.

Leatham, a former Canadian bantamweight champion, flatly denied it. He said he asked Dr. Thomas to examine the cut over the eye and the doctor ruled the cut was too severe to allow the fight to go on, risking aggravation.

It was a gash in the same area that halted the 26-year-old Miteff's last bout. He lost on a TKO to Cleveland Williams in Houston, Tex.

A probable entry in this year's International Speedboat races at Picton, on Aug. 5-8, is Bobby Hull, of the world championship Chicago Black Hawks' team. Hull has been working out in Picton harbor with a 36 cubic inch "B" class outboard and expects to drive one of the racing craft in the cup competition during the four-day speedboat racing program. Dodgers Lose, Braves Win

Redlegs Whip Cards, Stretch Lead

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

After a month - long three-way jam at the top, there's finally some daylight showing between the leaders in the National League as the season's first half nears a two - game lead into the center of a three - game series with the visiting champs, place The Angeles, Dodgers tonight.

The Reds, winning eight of nine, padded their lead with a 7-4 victory over Lou Thume day night after the Dodgers had lost 7-6 to Chicago Cubs. Milwaukee dropped third - place to San Francisco four games back, tied by whipped the Giants 9-6.

That two - game lead by the Reds may not be much, but no leader has had a larger lead than in almost four weeks in the NL. And it's the first time all season that the first place club has been more than three games away from the base.

Fourth - place Pittsburgh is six games behind after whipping Philadelphia 8-1.

ROBINSON CLICKS

The Reds, outhit 9-6 by the Cards, came from behind with two unearned runs in the fourth inning, then wrapped it up with a three - run sixth off loser Larry Jackson (3-7). The Reds, who'll start Frank Robinson drove in three runs, one with a homer, for 10 RBI in the two - game series (3-0) was the winner.

George Alman, Billy Williams and Jerry Kindall hit home runs and drove in two runs apiece for the Cubs who gave the Dodgers for only the third time in 13 games. The Dodgers, who had homers by John Roseboro, Daryl Spencer and Duke Snider, fell to 4-6 last.

The Cubs, after losing five in a row, crawled to 5-5 with two runs in the eighth on a triple by Al Heist, Williams's single and a sacrifice fly by Alman. Barney Schultz (1-1) was the winner and Dick Farrell (5-5) the loser, both in relief.

TWO FOR THOMAS

The Braves hammered five home runs, two by Frank Thomas, while putting away a three - game sweep over the Giants. Thomas drove in four runs, bringing the winner across with a single in the fifth. Frank Bolling, Hank Aaron and Glen Crandall hit the other homers—the fifth for Crandall since 1938.

Right - hander Bob Buhl (4-5) was the winner, but gave up two home runs by Willie Mays. Mays, now has 16 home runs for the season and 10 the last week against Milwaukee. Juan Marichal (6-4) was the loser.

Two home runs by catcher Smoky Burgess drove in the Pirates' first four runs. Both shots were off John Buzhardt (3-6), who left Burgess with an automatic 350 "baseball" due by umpire Chris Pelekoudas. Burgess smashed the plunk ruling, but then let the game when a foul tip caught a finger on his right hand. Bob Friend (8-7) was the winner.

HAVEN'T SIGNED

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts, preparing to open their training camp July 1, still have'n't received signed contracts from backfield trades Cookie Gilchrist and Bill Stribling. Gilchrist is reported to fail he rates more pay than managing director Lew Hayman has offered. Stribling is reported looking for a no-cut contract, something Hayman declines to give. The club hasn't heard from him for a month and Hayman said he doesn't know whether Stribling will report.

Second Win of Week
Flyers Ground Joyces 1-0

By GARRY ALEXANDER

RCAF Flyers combined Bob Butterfield's two-hit pitching and a first-inning run to defeat Joyce Real Estate 1-0 in a Belleville and District Softball league game at the Fairgrounds last night.

The Flyers' victory was their second of the week and lifted them into a tie with Bobcats and Pickton, each with six points. Joyces and Cobourg have ten points apiece.

Butterfield mastered the Joyce batters in good form and received fine support afield and at the plates. He drew Joe Mastriofrancesco to end the game's lone run on Doug Alexander's single to left field.

The winners came close to adding to their total a couple of times in the sharp batting by Kingston, Goyer and Elliott prevented further scoring. A hit by Hicks and the loser's two errors in the fourth nearly upset the score. Leadoff hits by Hughes and Ogden in the sixth looked like trouble until Goyer and Kingston pulled a neat double play to cut the rally short.

Joyce's best chance came in the third when Soule singled, Austin's sacrifice bunt was bobbled and Carr walked to load the sacks. Two runners were cut down at the plate in force plays as the Joyce big hitters failed to come through.

Single hits gained creditable ball in a losing cause, allowing eight hits, well scattered, while striking out four and passing two.

Ron Taylor and Johnny Hughes shared batting honors for the improved RCAF club. Taylor hit a double and two singles while Hughes rapped three straight singles. Doug Alexander and Don Ogden had the other base knocks.

George, only child of Mrs. Georgie Munock, a widow, had been a player in the league for close to two years.

Ernest Temple, district representative for little leagues, said it was the first fatal accident since the movement began in Canada 10 years ago.

Wayne and Shuster Now Starring in Situation Comedy

By CYNTHIA LOWAY

NEW YORK (AP) — Wayne and Shuster, the team of Canadian comedians who made their U.S. debut as proteges of Ed Sullivan, now star in a situation comedy beginning Tuesday night under the wing of Jack Benny.

The two comedians play social directors at a resort, one of those setups close to the heart of Hollywood comedy writers because it opens the door on a wide variety of situations. Holiday Lodge is made by Benny's production company and will be his summer replacement.

"We aren't completely sold on the Holiday Lodge title," Johnny Wayne says: "We thought it would be helpful if we could call it The Jack Benny Show."

A BIT DUBIOUS

The team also is a little dubious about the format.

"What we really wanted to do," Frank Shuster says, "was an underwater western set in the 1620s. That would have caught on."

The team has specialized during their long career in Canada, where they are important TV stars, but only sketches and this is a real departure."

"But in Hollywood they tell you that satire is something that closes in Philadelphia," Wayne says. "Besides, we thought we was about time to try something else. We've worked in the American TV variety shows Sullivan, of course, and Dinah Shore. But we felt that we'd like to move in another direction."

But they are moving cautiously. Neither comedian was pulled out of his home town, Toronto where they live. During the shooting of the first four shows, the pair commute weekly between Los Angeles and their homes. Now they have rented houses for their families in Hollywood for the summer.

Movie - making has been a most enlightening experience for the team that has worked together since 1940 when they met as boy scouts.

In the past they have written all their own material as well as acted it out.

"We're not writing this, and we're just actors," Wayne says.

"Anyway, it's an interesting experience."

And, undoubtedly, a profitable one.

Canadian Army Major Says Congo Life Good Except for Heart Cases

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—Should trouble develop with the Congolese National Army, chances are the call will go out for Maj. Clement Bouffard of Quebec.

The 38-year-old bachelor, his thick mustache bristling, has been in and out of every Congolese army camp in Leopoldville and visited nearly every major trouble spot outside the Congolese capital.

He maintains: "Life is good in The Congo because there's never a dull moment. Mind you, it's not a good place for heart cases."

Bouffard's ability to get along with Congolese army leaders has landed him a new job—United Nations liaison officer with the Armee Nationale Congolaise.

As liaison officer, he is in constant touch with top ANC officers, smoothing over the endless difficulties that arise between the UN and the Congolese army and "helping them and the UN to achieve a better understanding."

IN DEMAND

Bouffard is one of three UN officers, all Canadians, who are in continual demand for liaison work with the ANC. All have special passes for entry into Congolese army camps, the only such passes issued to UN personnel.

Maj. Roger Monette, 37, of Montreal and Ottawa has been on several such jobs since he arrived in March from Canada to work for UN military information.

Capt. Mario Cole, 36, of Chicoutimi, Que.—like Bouffard a bachelor, a member of the Royal 22nd regiment and a UN operations officer—began Congo service last fall with the 57 Canadian signal unit before joining operations and sharing liaison work with Bouffard.

In the seven months Bouffard has been in The Congo, he estimates he has visited ANC camps on no less than 90 occasions.

He has not only smoothed over misunderstandings, but also freed dozens of UN personnel being held prisoner, reclaimed scores of UN cars and other vehicles, and rescued other equipment and weapons seized by Congolese soldiers.

He credits his success to personal contacts with Congolese officers that go back almost to Bouffard's first day on the job at military operations. About one - quarter of the telephone calls were from French-speaking Congolese, and the Canadian major was then the only person in the office who spoke French.

"In this way I came into contact with many Congolese and they gained confidence in me," he said. "And often, to solve the problems, I had to go to see these people and got into most of the army camps."

NEVER HARMED

Bouffard has made flying visits with other UN officials or with Congolese officers to trouble spots throughout the country — Bona, Matadi, Mwanda, Bananan, Bukavu, Luebusburg, Port Francqui, wherever trouble broke out.

In all his trips, the major said, he has never been harmed.

"There were times when things were not looking too good for me, but I never got pushed around. Either events would take me away from the trouble in time or, the situation would change."

Bill Holden Explains Why He Has Changed Residence

By BOB THOMAS—

STOCKHOLM (AP) — The voice had the familiar, warm tone. But William Holden seemed to have an added quality of worldly awareness.

"I hadn't seen him in three years. During that time he had chosen, like many creative Americans, to be an expatriate. But unlike the Hemingways and Fitzgeralds, his absence has brought storms of protest.

Bill Holden prowled his hotel suite and explained why he has changed his residence from Toluca Lake, Calif., to St. Prex, Switzerland.

Some of his arguments were familiar—that the central Swiss location gives him more home life between his farming enterprises—a safari club in Kenya, radio station in Hong Kong, acting jobs all over. For instance, he will stop at home between finishing Counterfeit Traitor here and starting The Devil Never Sleeps in London.

It is no accident that Bill's picture have an international flavor.

"That's what interests me, that's where I think I can do some good," he said. "The countries I look for are ones that show an American in an international situation. They've seen that make money, and I'm not out to make producers love me.

SUZIE MAKES MONEY

"I've tried the strictly American films like Toward the Unknown and The Horse Soldiers. They don't sell. But something like Suzie Wong, which some people scoffed at, is headed for $10,000,000."

Holden lives in a chalet with his wife, Ardis, and their two sons, Scott, 15, and Scott, 12. They host and water ski, attend parties in near-by Lausanne but see few movies—"they're dubbed in French and are pretty miserable."

The boys go to a Swiss school. The plan is for them to return to the United States for two years of college, then get their degrees in Europe.

"They could represent American firms in Europe," Holden said. "That interests them, and I think it would be a good idea for the companies. Most of them hire foreigners to handle their interests anyhow."

Then the Holden boys would be a second generation of a new breed, the International American. Holden is sold on the life, and it is doubtful if he would return to any permanent residence in his native land.

CLAIMS FLEMING

Mr. Pickering(ll, former minister of transportation, slugged hard in his 35-minute speech. Mr. Fleming's budget was just a pale imitation of the Coyne statement last week outlining measures that the government has submitted earlier this year to the government.

The exception was the depreciation of the Canadian dollar which Mr. Fleming had described as a "great gamble with the taxpayers' money only a year ago."

CLAIMS CRED FUND

He said it was public fact that Mr. Fleming had been using the exchange fund on the government since last December to force down the dollar and had spent $130,000,000 for that purpose without telling Parliament.

Let the ministry deny it, he said.

It is silly to talk about spending and you know it," Mr. Fleming countered.

"That is a false statement," interjected Mr. Fleming, when Mr. Pickeregill said the minister had "deliberately misled" it was contrary to the International Monetary Fund forces driven the value of the Canadian dollar as was proposed—using foreign exchange fund economics to buy U.S. dollars."

What conduct could be expected from a minister who had acted as Mr. Fleming had on the exchange fund.

"It is all of a piece with this distinguished record that he has built—with - Parliament attitude that the minister has taken. . . . He has consistently misled this Parliament with the utmost contempt."

Walter Harman (New Party—Peterborough) said for the first time Canada has had budgets down within the same week—Mr. Fleming's and Mr. Coyne's. Examination showed the two men were not so far apart. Investors knew.

By what right did Mr. Fleming demand the resignation of Mr. Coyne when there was no evidence of lack of co-operation on the government's part?

SHOWN LACK

The budget was a Conservative budget, one which showed a total lack of confidence in government action being effective.

F. G. Allmark (PC—Kingston) said many of his constituents are critical of Unemployment Insurance and "handouts."

Many opposed wives drawing benefits when their husbands were making $4,000 or $5,000 a year. He saw no justification, he said, for sailors earning $6,000 to $10,000 a year drawing benefits in the off - season winter months.

But these same people are good Canadians who are just taking what the law provides, Mr. Allmark said.

CONVICTED

the latter apparently caused by lymph glands."

Kolesnik asserted that none of the 171 prisoners who participated in the cancer test have developed any cancer or any "major or serious reaction" to it.

July 4, 1864, Mrs. Marilyn Sheppard, 31, and expecting her second child, was bludgeoned fatally in the bedroom of her suburban Bay Village home in suburban Cleveland.

Sheppard, then 32, has since been acquitted and obtained a "trashy haired intruder" killed him with.

Sheppard was convicted of second-degree murder and sentenced to life.

TOO MANY COOKS?

EAST MEADOW, N.Y. (AP) When Richard Wintersdorf got "that feeling" her expectant husband called a few people in to help. In addition to the doctor who delivered Mrs. Wintersdorf's daughter, the 7-pound baby girl at her home Thursday, on hand were: Twenty-five firemen, a police chief, two policemen, one ambulance driver, one next-door-in-law, one neighbor, one letter carrier, and one worried father.

What we can do when we're near the North Pole with a sensitive instrument that needs a magnetic part? In this story, a Canadian Press reporter tells how scientists at the Polar Continental Shelf project laboratory in Isachsen keep the operation on schedule.

By JIM WHELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ISACHSEN, N.W.T. (CP)—You may not have thought so, but you can fix a broken vertical-fluxfluxion vapor magnetometer with an old ballpoint pen.

When Dr. W. N. English of Vancouver did it, the temperature was 30 below zero and he was about 600 miles from the North Pole. He is the deputy superintendent of the defence department's Pacific Naval Laboratory at Esquimalt, B.C., and since March he has been working with the Canadian Polar Continental Shelf project at Isachsen on Ellef Ringnes Island, some 2,300 miles north of Winnipeg.

What is a varian rubidium vapor magnetometer anyway?

It's an experimental machine for studying the earth's magnetic field and the one Dr. English is using is the only one in North America near the north magnetic pole. The magnetic pole, once thought to be a point in the Arctic Archipelago, has been shown by recent investigations to extend across the Canadian passing close to Isachsen and terminating in the Taimyr peninsula in Siberia.

PEN WAS BENT

The machine charts the magnetic field with a tiny drawing pen on a moving roll of graph paper. During flight turbulence the pen was bent and eventually stopped marking altogether.

Dr. English found that if he held his mouth just right, he could "fix the 50-cent end of our $10,000 instrument" by replacing the drawing pen with a ballpoint pen refill. The makeshift kept the chart rolling during the three weeks before a new replacement could be flown in.

Much of the story of Canada's most northerly research project is the story of man's ingenuity in continuing work despite breakdowns or shortages. Elliot Bilsgaer is one engineer for unavoidable pack ice the year round and supplies cannot be taken there over water when the icebreaker CCGS Camsell flies supplies to Isachsen from Resolute, on Cornwallis Island, the most northerly shipping port, and from farther south but these supply missions last only a few days in spring and fall.

Anything needed between these missions can be flown in by chartered aircraft providing it is not too heavy but because of the small number of aircraft chartered, the distance involved and the vagaries of the weather, delivery may take as long as a month.

Since the project operates only through the continuous daylight months of March to September, a month is too much to lose.

One day in April, an oceanographic crew working on the ice of McClure Strait, between Melville and Banks Islands, found their ice drift wouldn't work.

The drill seemed essential to their job of getting through the six-to-nine-foot thick pack ice to measure the Arctic Ocean's temperature, depth, salinity and oxygen and animal content.

But an ice chisel was found among the party and they began the tortuous work of cutting through the big floe. That, it was the final day on the ice for the party if they could complete the last few holes through the ice and make a final measurement just beyond the point where the continental shelf dropped into the Arctic basin.

They did it and were ready when one of the project's two tightly stuffed Otter aircraft alighted on the ice to return them to Isachsen.

"We were on our bellies on the ice and leaning down the holes, one of the party said afterward, "and if the ice had been just two inches thicker we couldn't have done it."

Not all of the project's problems can be so handily solved. STUCK IN MUD

Late in the summer of 1960, one Otter with four men aboard got stuck in mud on the island, about 70 miles from Isachsen. Attempting a take-off, it damaged a propeller. A propeller from the second Otter was flown out by helicopter but still mud filled the aircraft to the ground.

Then the fog began to ground the supply helicopters while the stranded men dug into their emergency rations. More than two weeks after they became stranded the fog lifted and the Otter, using its own floorboards as a runway, lifted into a strong wind and made it safely back to Isachsen.

Ice-laden buck struck twice in a week of late April this year. Once a helicopter of the RCAF transport aircraft, one of the last of the spring airlift, circled the base in thick fog, a crash in which a whip antenna under the moving main rotors of the Bell helicopter.

Damage to the reinforced plastic rotors was estimated at $12,000, not including lost flying time and the cost of shipping new rotors from Eastern Canada.

Such accidents call for a different kind of ingenuity in rescheduling flight plans for the aircraft which remain serviceable and this work is shared by project co - ordinator Dr. Frederick Roots and Fred DuVernet, a Second World War navigator, both from Ottawa.

Toughest problem of 1960 came in May when a Mayday international distress signal was received from one of the chartered McMurray Air Service Otters flown by Bert Burry of Strathcona City, Sask.

The five-plane search for the Otter and its three passengers and pilot was given priority over all other projects and within 24 hours the plane was found. It was hanging through the Arctic Ocean ice by its wingtips, 175 miles north of Isachsen. The four men were brought back alive and well.

The aircraft, however, couldn't be economically salvaged and until a replacement arrived the pilot shelf service just kept on proving they could do with one aircraft what every one thought required a minimum of two.

Proposed Swap Of Tractors For Prisoners Dead

U.S. Committee Accuses Castro of Killing Deal

DETROIT (AP) — The proposed swap of American tractors for Cuban invasion prisoners is dead, and the Tractors for Freedom Committee accused Cuba's Fidel Castro of killing the deal.

The committee in a statement Friday night said it was folding up because Castro's demand for $28,000,000 in cash, credit or tractors-ground only to be interpreted as a move "calculated to destroy the possibility of agreement." The committee called Castro's proposal for a delegation of prisoners to negotiate release terms ludicrous.

The Cuban prime minister's rejection of the committee's terms to exchange 500 farm tractors worth about $2,000,000 for 1,200 captured rebels was blamed by the committee for the breakdown of negotiations. Castro had called the committee's conditions ridiculous.

The private citizens' group, headed by Walter Reuther, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Dr. Milton Eisenhower, said it didn't intend to give up or return to those with return addresses on envelopes the 4,000 letters it received from its appeal for funds to pay for the tractors. The letters however were opened so there's no way of determining whether any money was sent to Post Office, Box Freedom 500.

WORLD PLAY NO PART

Tractors for Freedom Incorporated was organized to carry out a promise by President Kennedy. But Kennedy made it clear the U.S. government would play no part in any exchange.

The committee dismissed Castro's proposal of Friday in these words:

"The last proposal by Dr. Castro that a delegation of prisoners whom he holds captive under the threat of penalty of death or long imprisonment can negotiate the terms of their own release is ludicrous.

"It is further evidence of his brutality in cynically playing with the lives of 1,200 prisoners, men and their relatives."

The committee said Castro reneged on his original offer to release 1,214 prisoners for 500 tractors. Castro's latest proposal, it said, the committee said, demanded "the return of 500 heavy-duty equipment or 1,000 small tractors.

"It can but hope 16, bring freedom to the prisoners and to much more food to the 7,000,000 hungry within Cuba," the committee said.

GOAL IMPOSSIBLE

"It is with deep sorrow and disappointment that we learn of Dr. Castro's rejection of our committee's sincere efforts to make possible the speedy liberation of our humanitarian goals."

The committee said Castro had agreed to the 500 heavy tractors and made stronger demands Fat the last minute moment we felt there was hope for reaching an understanding on that type of tractors to be delivered."

Castro said Friday the committee's offer "has no other purpose but to break off the negotiations and blame the Cuban government for it."

Workers Dig Through Night To Reach Miners

PETROS, Tenn. (AP)—Men dug through a debris - choked coal mine shaft high on the face of a mountain today in an agonizing effort to reach three trapped miners.

"Get me out," pleaded one of them—Herly Carroll, 18—from beneath the rubble more than nine hours after the old mine caved in on eight miners Friday night as they began their work day an hour before they were to start a two-week vacation.

Federal mine inspectors Steve Bukovich said there was no hope of finding Charles Setzer, 23, and Charlie Kennedy, 28, alive.

A doctor used a hacksaw to amputate the arm of Robert Woods, 18, pinned between the rocks and a coal car. He was taken to an Oak Ridge hospital in serious condition.

Woods' father, Claude Woods, 47, suffered a fractured pelvis. The other three miners escaped serious injury.

The mine, 2,300 feet up on the face of Pork Mountain in the Cumberland Mountains of east Tennessee, had been closed several years. The miners were shoring up the mine, a laboratory to reconditioning it for the Fork Mountain Mining Company.

"It happened all at once," said Billy Sk. "When we heard the noise we all started running and I passed one boy. And the rocks caught me. As soon as the rocks stopped I was up the other 'elbows came back to help us out."

The cave-in shale covered an area about 100 feet long, 30 feet wide and eight feet deep about 400 feet from the mine entrance, which is reached by an incline railway.

Only three or four rescue workers, using hand tools, could get in the shaft at one time.

Liberal Leader Does Not Expect 1961 Election

WOODSTOCK (CP) — Liberal Leader Pearson told a press conference Friday night he saw little in this week's budget to indicate a 1961 election.

Canadian dollar's trial practice abroad has been harmed by both the rapid devaluation of the dollar's and the lowering of Canada-Minister Fleming and Bank of Canada Governor Coyne, Mr. Pearson said.

Mr. Pearson, here to address the annual meeting of the Oxford County Liberal Association, said the unbalanced budget, with its heavy deficit spending, is four years too late.

"This is not a deficit that is going to stimulate Canadian business," he said, "It's not going to do the trick."

Mr. Pearson said "one thing" is a good thing for Canada to reduce the premium on the dollar, but it should be done carefully by lowering the incentive for the wrong type of investment.

FLEMING CALLED HIGH PRIEST OF HIGH INTEREST

Govt. Members Refuse to Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal W. H. McMillan said in the Commons Friday that Finance Minister Fleming almost wrecked the national economy during his term as "the high priest of high interest rates in Canada."

The MP for Welland said Mr. Fleming's budget proposal to lower interest rates "amounts to a deathbed confession."

He spoke during the second day of debate on the 1961-62 budget, which was presented Tuesday night. The Commons switches to a study of health department spending estimates today and will not resume the budget debate until Tuesday.

At the opening of Friday's sitting Mr. Fleming introduced the government motion for removal of James E. Coyne as governor of the Bank of Canada. Debate on it is the first order of business Monday.

NO DEBATE

Opposition critics had the floor to themselves as government supporters refused to take part in the debate.

Liberal and CCF members didn't waste the opportunity to twit government supporters for their reluctance to get involved in a debate which may not last its scheduled six days.

Near the end of the second day, the Commons defeated by a vote of 132 to 98 a CCF non-confidence motion. The Conservatives swamped 28 Liberals and two Social Credit members.

The CCF motion said the government has "failed" to undertake the social and economic planning necessary to maintain full employment, provide full employment and improve social security measures.

KEPT RATES HIGH

Mr. McMillan charged that the government deliberately kept interest rates at a high level to recent years and must take responsibility for the economic slowdown.

He said that the prime minister and the finance minister "are on a trail to high interest rates . . . and have now attempted to cover up this fact by erecting a smokescreen" between them.

John R. Matheson (L—Leeds) used his first major speech to assail Mr. Fleming's dollar-devaluation policy as a major blow to the future of Canada.

Mr. Matheson, elected in a May 31 byelection, also said the government is getting rid of the "best possible officers" appointed by the Liberal administration.

Mr. Matheson, 44-year - old crippled war veteran, said the bill to fire Coyne is sad and

DISMISS TRACTOR SUIT

CHICAGO (AP) — The U.S. circuit court of appeals threw out Friday an attempt by an International Harvester Co. proposed exchange of tractors for prisoners in Cuba. The suit was filed Saturday by George Rose, head of a group calling itself "Citizens to Block Tractors to Castro." The court decided it was without jurisdiction. The Rose group contended a law forbids dealings by private citizens with a foreign power.

First Scene in Last Act Of Coyne Drama Unfolds

OTTAWA (CP) — The first scene in the last act of the Coyne drama unfolded Friday in the Commons as the government introduced its legislation to have Parliament declare vacant the office of the Bank of Canada governor.

James E. Coyne dominated the week's events in the capital as the historic controversy here in years boiled towards a climax.

Even presentation of the long-awaited budget Tuesday night didn't lessen the public interest that for 11 days has fastened on the 59-year - old governor.

Indeed, throughout the long budget speech Finance Minister Fleming was looking over his shoulder at the man who wasn't there.

Mr. Coyne was some 400 miles away at Stratford watching another drama — Shakespeare's Hamlet — unfolding without his policies and pronouncements sprinkled the budget's pages, some to be adopted and others roundly condemned by the finance minister.

Friday's fire-by-governor fireworks, forecast by Mr. Fleming June 14, is expected to come up for debate until next week. The minister said he was ready to proceed with debate at once and a government backbenchers chorused "now, now." The Liberal Opposition refused to give unanimous consent for this step.

The measure is entitled "An Act Respecting the Bank of Canada," and its text took only 46 words:

"Her Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate and House of Commons of Canada, enacts as follows:

"The office of governor of the Bank of Canada shall be deemed to have become vacant immediately upon the coming into force of this act."

For most of the week Mr. Coyne was silent, in contrast with his series of statements last week following his disclosure June 13 that Mr. Fleming had asked for his resignation May 30 and that he would resign quietly.

Last Monday, the day before the budget, the governor made public a document promptly termed The Coyne Budget. It set out Mr. Coyne's proposals he sent Mr. Fleming Feb. 15 proposing big, temporary tax and

HEALTH CARE REPORT READY IN TWO YEARS

Public Hearing To Start in Sept.

MONTREAL (CP) — The report of the royal commission on health care — which may help decide whether Canadians are to have public health-insurance plans — should be done in less than two years, says commission chairman Supreme Court Justice Emmett Hall of Saskatchewan.

Public hearings of the seven-man commission "should be underway by September," he told a group of reporters Friday at the annual convention of the Canadian Medical Association.

What Chief Justice Hall told reporters in the impromptu press conference was probably considered more of interest to executives of the CMA and doctors attending the convention than the speech he made to the convention a few moments before.

The CMA, which originally suggested the commission be set up, confidently expects it to take at least two years, to complete its inquiry.

MEMBERS TO MEET

Chief Justice Hall said he expects the commission's first report will be announced next Wednesday when the seven members meet in Ottawa.

From all appearances at the CMA convention, the 6,500-member CMA is far from ready to present its brief.

The association's official position on health insurance, is that compulsory plans for all Canadians is not needed or desirable.

It feels "the majority of self-supporting Canadians" can take care of their own needs through pre-paid insurance plans, preferably non-profit setups run by the profession.

Public funds would be used to subsidize the needy and low-income individuals and persons over 65.

LITTLE AGREEMENT

But aside from this broad proposal, there is no CMA-approved agreement within the association on details of the plan.

Stockholm surgeon Dr. Hugo Rosenqvist told delegates most doctors and surgeons are happy under the Swedish Insurance scheme, which pays three-quarters of the cost of all hospital bills.

"Free general practitioners, he said, often feel the government-run plan builds a "hedge" between doctor and sick, and compels the doctor on a semi-civil servant basis.

Dr. T. James Quintin of Sherbrooke, Que., who conducted a survey of Australia's hospital and health plans for the CMA, said despite some faults, in general they did not offer models for Canada.

ASKS HELP OF QUEEN

LONDON (Reuter) — Lawyer Ronald Bilby asked the Queen Elizabeth to help a campaign for research into multiple sclerosis, it was announced Friday night. Graham hopes to raise £20,000 to start a five-year research program to find the cause and cure of multiple sclerosis, a progressive neurological disease.

Canada May Soon Supply Equipment for Truce Board

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Diefenbaker and External Affairs Minister Green are expected to be asked to increase the stability of Canada supplying military equipment to the International truce commission in Laos, of which it is a member.

The commission's tasks, facilitated by Leon Mayrard, Canadian ambassador to Laos, include six helicopters, three light planes, a maintenance organization for these aircraft, patrols from Canada, India and Poland, jeeps and 200-series range wireless sets.

Mr. Green, reporting to the Commons Friday on his second journey to the Geneva conference, said Russia has agreed to truce commissioners' reports that there are no plans at this time to strengthen the 3,000-man U.S. garrison in Berlin or to increase its firepower.

Mr. Green also said: "We have no immediate plans for increasing the forces in Europe."

"I don't mean we won't. I simply mean we don't have any plans at the present for doing so in the near future."

Coming away from a conference with Premier Khrushchev and top level officials Friday, Defence Secretary Robert McCleod said Russia's position on Berlin is unchanged.

He said the government is getting rid of the "best possible officers" appointed by the Liberal administration.

Mr. Matheson, 44-year - old crippled war veteran, said the bill to fire Coyne is sad and

No Plans Yet To Strengthen Berlin Garrison

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has struck a "positive and helpful" attitude in the growing crisis over Berlin, avoiding any show of military preparations.

This background, British, U.S., French and West German officials sought agreement on how best to meet the new threat raised by Soviet Premier Khrushchev.

Coming away from a conference with Premier Khrushchev and top level officials Friday, Defence Secretary Robert McNamara said Russia's position on Berlin is unchanged.

He said the government is getting rid of the "best possible officers" appointed by the Liberal administration.

Mr. Matheson, 44-year - old crippled war veteran, said the bill to fire Coyne is sad and

U.S. Air Force Major Given Speediest Ride Ever Achieved

EDWARDS AFB, Calif. (AP) — The X-15 rocket plane travelled faster than a rifle bullet Friday and gave air force Maj. Robert White the speediest ride ever achieved in winged flight.

Instrument showed—White, 32, of veteran X-15 pilot, had guided the sleek craft to 3,600 miles an hour at an altitude of 100,000 feet above the California Desert.

The speed accomplished was even though cabin pressure had failed, causing his rubber space suit to balloon out and almost immobilize him. A vapor cloud was yet unexplained was a further distraction.

White was five pounds light after the 31-minute flight. This was blamed on the pressure of his suit which caused red marks on his body and a red welt on his forehead.

But White said later, I was never in pain at any time."

The speed his top speed after a 75 - second burst from the rocket ship's 57,000-pound thrust engine. The effort heated the X-15's skin to 750 degrees fahrenheit and charred its paint.

Russia's Yuri Gagarin and United States Alan Shepard of the United States are the only men who have exceeded White's speed. And their trips were in rocket capsules, not winged flight.

White's speed topped the old X-15 mark of 3,307 m.p.h. by Pilot Joe Walker last May 23 and was only 310 miles short of the craft's designed speed of 4,000 m.p.h.

Bonavista Bay Fire Situation Becomes Worse

Rush Men, Equipment To Fight Forest Blazes

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—The forest fire situation along Bonavista Bay took a turn for the worse today and plans were made to evacuate another community.

The old residents of the village of Dover were preparing to leave, bringing to almost 4,000 the number of people who have fled their homes in seven communities in eastern Newfoundland in an area 120 miles northwest of St. John's.

A light drizzle which fell on the community early today ended abruptly, fog lifted and a west wind picked up, driving the flames towards the village.

An army of men and equipment moved towards the area. West Wind fires out in the western part of the province the provincial resources department has ordered all firefighters into the Bonavista area.

The United States Air Force at Stephenville, Nfld., today began an airlift of men and supplies, including U.S. service personnel recruited to fight the flames.

EVACUEES PACK TOWN

Hundreds of evacuees are jammed in the village of Wesleyville, a few miles north of the fire area. Mayor E. Windsor said the village's harbor is packed with boats loaded with evacuees. He said he didn't know how the village could provide any more.

Meanwhile, the resources department announced that 90,000 acres have been burned this year, 75,000 acres in area totalling 141 square miles containing dense stands of valuable spruce and fir.

At Hare Bay, the firefighters were back-fired to control burning. Sparks landed on a service station, turning it into a mass of flames. Damage is limited to the number of houses or buildings destroyed in Hare Bay.

Some 3,000 women, children and elderly men were taken by boats; horse - carts, cars and tractors from the communities of Hare Bay, Wesleyville, Indian Bay, Carnerville, Parsons Point and Trinity. The fire raged for the 13th day.

Many of the men went too, but came back to fight.

Whipping through dry spruce and fir forest at high speed, the fire shot in unexpectedly at a corner of Hare Bay and leveled 15 houses and a garage before firefighters could check it. It jabbed at the town's industrial and health plans for the CMA, said despite some faults, in general they did not offer models for Canada.

Barber Shop Singing Hard to Beat For Keeping Marriages Cozy, Neat

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—When Fraser Barbershop Quartet Singing in America Incorporated, the 28,000-member organization of barbershop singers, meets in Oklahoma City next week, they'll be better to come home singing than to sag into sleepy silence at the end of the work day.

"I have a hobby, too," Mrs. Fraser remarked. "I potter."

"What do you putter at," a listener put in.

"Potter, not putter," she corrected. "You know, making pottery. It works out very well. I leave Al to his cadenzas and he doesn't mess with my clay."

Young Liberals Ask Greater Aid to Backward Countries

MILFORD BAY, Ont. (CP)— Ontario Young Liberals Friday urged the federal government to ask for immediate adoption of the report of the royal commission on publications and increased foreign aid to underdeveloped countries.

The Young Liberals, opening their three-day convention at Muskoka conference centre yesterday, debated the two resolutions for more than an hour.

Despite protests that the resolution on foreign aid did not carry a price tag, it was adopted on a voice vote and was granted only to democratic countries, the majority of delegates approved it.

The resolution demands an immediate increase in Canada's allocation for foreign aid to at least $350,000,000 a year. It also urged that foreign aid be maintained at not less than 1 per cent of Canada's gross national product.

Gordon Sullivan of Toronto said no principle should be established for foreign aid to underdeveloped countries to follow "our form of government."

Vincent Kelly of Hamilton argued that because the one per cent figure was suggested by Prime Minister Nehru of India United States there was no reason for the Ontario Young Liberals to do the same.

"I don't think the president should have to fall to stand before another country and say what its foreign aid commitments should be."

Delegates also enthusiastically endorsed the royal commission report recommending the equivalent of a 10-per-cent tax on domestic advertising in a foreign magazine.

The royal commission report, if adopted, would affect the Canadian distribution of Time magazine and the Readers' Digest.

Asked to comment on the report, Arnold Edinborough, editor of Saturday Night, said Canadian magazines don't need the editorial budget to do the best job because "our advertising revenue is taken away from us."

"Time magazine makes $600,000 a year profit in Canada, he said, adding that Saturday Night has lost $1,200,000 during the last nine years.

Premier Frost Unlocks Padlock On New Village

UPPER CANADA VILLAGE, Ont. (CP) — Premier Frost of Ontario unlocked a padlock on a tall gate today to open officially this finy community where 20th-century people see the world their ancestors lived.

The village is a cluster of historic buildings saved from the flood that inundated the St. Lawrence River along the seaway power project was put into operation.

Removed here, seven miles east of Morrisburg, the buildings were given a rebuilt and work has been in progress since 1954 to make the village, on a 2,000-acre site, an authentic reproduction of a typical pioneer community of the 19th century.

Ceremonies are also scheduled at the monument—the Loyalist Memorial, a figure of a soldier in the act of setting aside his musket and picking up a broadaxe, and the Pioneer Memorial, a walled enclosure in the shape of a cross.

All are part of a project operated by the Ontario-St. Lawrence Development Commission set up in 1955 by the Ontario government to preserve historic sites and buildings caught up with destruction through the construction of the St. Lawrence Seaway.

Plans for Proposed 60-Bed Addition to Hospital Now Underway, Architect Signed

Preparation of plans for the proposed 60-bed addition to the Belleville General Hospital are now underway following the signing of an agreement with Herbert Agnew, hospital planning specialist from Toronto.

Mr. Agnew was named as the architect for the new hospital addition at the recommendation of the hospital board finance and property committee.

Purchase of the Harris property adjoining the hospital grounds has now been finalized although the actual transfer has not yet been completed.

This is expected shortly with the hospital to take possession of the property in the near future.

NO TRANSFER YET

"The deal has been completed, although the transfer has not actually been made," noted hospital board chairman J. N. Yanover.

Cost of the property was given as $45,000.

Earlier this year the Harris property immediately to the east of the hospital grounds was sold to the British Petroleum Company as a site for a gas-bar.

However, when the oil company learned the hospital declared the property surplus and intended to resell it to the hospital board.

"The board appreciates the co-operation shown," Mr. Yanover said.

Since the inception of the new night owl service system, the main front doors of the hospital are being locked at midnight with visitors being expected to enter the hospital by way of the emergency entrance.

Hospital Administrator Wayne F. O. Deachsel has reported that the new night owl service is working together with owning to the watchmen service, to the keen of great benefit.

"It has proved to be invaluable on the part of all personnel concerned," he said. "Night service to analyze their area of responsibility and to seek workable solutions to their problems," he said.

"INTERESTED IN ECONOMY

He said it had demonstrated to the board and the central administration considers night service at the hospital important, and also shows that the board and central administration is interested in economies of operation when they are achieved by more efficient methods.

Additional telephone facilities have been authorized for the hospital. A shortage of lines for both incoming and outgoing calls had been reported.

Recommended is the addition of two more incoming trunk lines with pastoral outgoing lines to be connected to the lines. Six outgoing lines for internal stations and other administrative users are to be provided.

Hospital Board May Set Up Its Own Printing Department

The possibility of Belleville General Hospital setting up its own printing department, in an attempt to reduce high printing costs, has been suggested to the hospital board of governors by the hospital administrator.

So far the hospital board has taken no action on the matter but it was revealed that more specific facts and tests be presented for consideration.

While admitting that prices which the hospital is paying for printing were reasonable in relation to the cost structure which a commercial printer must meet, it was noted that by the administrator that other hospitals of a similar size and smaller, had found they could produce printing at approximately one-half the cost of the best possible price from a commercial printer.

It was felt that approximately 25 per cent of the printing required in the hospital could be done on hospital owned equipment.

Costs at the Bellevill's hospital last year for printing, stationery and office supplies totalled $25,885. A comparison given indicated there would have been a saving of $7,347 on that basis of printing.

The paper if the hospital operated its own department with the attic facts and tests be presented for consideration.

Printing which could be done by the hospital amounted to 50,000 per year and a saving of 50 per cent which was believed could be achieved would amount to $3,000 per year, or over $4,000 per year.

The board approved the purchase of a 500-lb. ice cube making machine at a cost of $1,996 and of 30 Hi-Lo beds at a cost of $459.90 each. The cost of the beds will be paid by a $15,000 donation from the Hospital Women's Auxiliary.

British Veteran Given Pension And New Home

OTTAWA (CP) — A 870-a month pension has been arranged for a 68-year-old British war veteran arrested last month after spending three years living in a cave near the town dump at Acton.

Veterans Minister Churchill's office said Friday that Archibald Shaw, arrested on a charge of vagrancy, now is comfortable in a veterans home and the pension is being administered for him by the department.

Mr. Shaw was taken into custody on the vagrancy charge when neighbors complained.

In magistrate's court, police testified he had lived in the cave 40 miles west of Toronto on scraps of food brought to him by children and on the occasional rabbit.

Mr. Churchill described the case as "shocking," and ordered public department to take immediate action.

Mr. Shaw was unable to provide a record of his military service but the Royal Canadian and United Kingdom veterans files had to be searched.

Trenton Woman Dies Suddenly

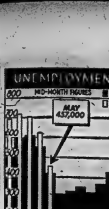
TRENTON — Members and friends of Grace United Church, as well as a large number from other Trenton congregations, gathered last night in the basement of the church to pay tribute to Rev. G. A. Puttenham, who has served the church as minister for the last 5 years. Mr. Puttenham has accepted a call to a Kingston church, and will leave Trenton in a few days.

P. Carswell acted as chairman for the evening. Mr. Carswell said that much had been accomplished, in a spiritual sense as well as in a physical sense, during Mr. Puttenham's 5-year ministry here. The church itself has been improved and a new manse built. Under his guidance, an AOTS men's club was formed and the enlarged congregation has worked diligently to expand their activities in the church.

This growth of the church is due, in a large part, to the many fine qualities of our minister and family, Mr. Carswell said, to lend a helping hand."

Mr. Carswell also mentioned the high regard in which Mr. Puttenham's sons, George and Douglas, are held in the congregation.

They are closing a chapter in the life of our church, when we say farewell to the Puttenham family," he said.



Rev. J. T. Irwin of King Street United Church, district president of the Trenton Ministerial Association, also spoke briefly. "Mr. Puttenham is one of the finest ministers I have ever known," he said.

Rev. D. C. McLelland of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and secretary of the ministerial association, also spoke briefly.

Prior to a social hour, a short service was held in the auditorium. Rev. A. W. Loughead conducted the service assisted by Rev. D. C. McClellan.

Rev. A. J. Peyton of Gananoque will take up his duties as minister at Grace United Church next week.

BONAVISTA BAY

would stir the flames again today.

The resources department here listed five other fires as serious. One near Cache Bay is believed contained after forcing evacuation of 50 homes and destroying two houses and a garage. The smoke and smell of burning spruce and fir covered the capital for hours.

The number of men fighting the flames rose from 700 to 2,000 but no definite figure was available. The Canadian Army called up 500 regulars for the job and told them to be prepared to fight fires.

SEE LITTLE RELIEF

There was little relief in sight though there may be a few showers. A little rain fell in the Timmins area but not in time to effect on a fire which streaked across the top of tall softwoods behind 30-mile-an-hour winds.

Officials were still fearful the fire would get across or around the lake from the unpopulated side and have a clear course to the town of Gander and its airport.

Deputy Resources Minister Stuart Peters said the fire areas had received only nine-tenths of an inch of rain this month, a 20-year-low.

Mr. Peters said the Gander Lake fire looked from the air like a 10-1 explosion. Flames shot 400 feet and smoke rose more than 10,000 feet.

The fire in the Nagel's Hill area, five miles from St. John's, raged through scrub spruce and fir, moving parallel to, the city into the Penetanguishene district. It was reactivated Friday. Most of the residents were back home Friday night.

IN MEMORIAM

DEFORGE. — In loving memory of a dear father, Clifford DeForge, who passed away June 25th 1960.

One by one the years are over,
They are fading like the dew;
But in memory they're standing o'er us,
They the past, the fair, the true.
They are waiting for us only,
Across the river dark and deep;
Soon we, too, left in peace,
Shall be with them and sleep.
Ever a father, kind and true,
Gone within those gates ajar,
Waiting and watching for us too.
—Sadly missed and always remembered by Mrs. Jack Clarke, Mrs. G. Bird and Mrs. Earl Mallory.

—Lovingly remembered by Mother Dear, Mavis, Harold and Ruby, Vera and Manley.

FOUND. — In loving memory of a wonderful Mother and Grandmother Sarah Found who passed away June 24th, 1960.

Remembrance is a chain,
Death tries, to break, but all in vain.
To have, to love, and then to part,
Is the greatest sorrow of the heart.
The time may wipe out many
But this they wipe out never,
Memories of a loved one ever.
Time cannot change them, it's true.
Years that may come cannot undo.
Our loving memories of her are Sadly missed and always remembered by Mr. Found and sons—John, David, Steven and Kevin.

RAY. — In loving memory of a dear mother, Jean Helen Ray, who passed away June 25th, 1960.
When evening shades are falling,
And all is still and lone,
To our hearts there comes a longing
If she only could come home.
Time may take away the sorrow
But not the heartache.
Our dear hide all the while.
—Sadly missed by husband Gordon and children Steven, Sheila and Darlene.

RAY. — In loving memory of Jean Fleming Ray, who passed away June 25th, 1960.
Oh happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet her memories are.
But death has left a loneliness,
That no one never fill.

New Party to Run Candidate in South Hastings, Members Told at First Riding Rally

The New Party will definitely field a candidate to contest the next federal election in Hastings South, it was learned last night. But who he will be will not be known until sometime after October unless Prime Minister Diefenbaker calls a snap election—which New Party supporters don't think is unlikely in view of Finance Minister Fleming's budget.

Leslie Digby, chairman of the party's first public rally in Hastings South, said:

"The New Party will certainly have a candidate in the field when the next election comes along, but in view of the fact that the party won't be formed until this summer, and a provincial convention will not be held until October, no nominating convention will be held in this constituency until late fall, unless a snap election is called."

WALTER PITMAN

SMALL NUMBER ATTEND

About three dozen persons turned out at the Bellevilla Centre last night to hear Walter Pitman of Peterborough, first New Party member of parliament, address a pre-national founding convention rally of district party supporters and interested onlookers.

Mr. Pitman said citizens of Canada cannot afford to wait five or ten years longer hoping that the country's problems will be solved by either the Liberals or the Progressive Conservatives, because they need them. "There is no major difference between the Liberal and Conservative parties any more and what the country needs is a choice of political party not necessarily a change. "In effect," he said, "the New Party does constitute Canada's second party, the Liberals, and Conservatives would be combining to form only one.

He said critical of Mr. Fleming's budget and said that deficit budgetting this late in the game will only hurt the man on the street.

"Mr. Fleming said there would be no inflation caused by his budget, except in some imports," he said. "But how do we see has already happened? The price of bread, of all things, is going up a cent or two a loaf."

WORTH AGAINST TAXATION ?

Mr. Pitman, head of the history department at a Peterborough high school, was critical of the government's attitude towards gardens. "The poor farmer's lot hasn't changed a bit since 1957."

He criticized the way the government is trying to check unemployment. The New Party, however, would create full employment in Canada. It would not eliminate the unemployment insurance fund.

Mr. Pitman said the New Party would create full employment by "adjusting taxation" to make it unprofitable for employers to lay off workers in slack seasons. The New Party would not pay unemployment insurance benefits to fishermen who "obviously are unemployed in the winter when they can't get their lines through the ice." The unemployment insurance fund is "so disastrously close to bankruptcy that soon we are going to have to have some drastic legislation to restore its health."

He said it was shocking that by 1961 Canada has not been able to lick mass unemployment as many Scandinavian and West European countries have done. "We have failed to make a real effort toward breaking the feudalistic barrier for bringing full employment to Canada." He said that if other countries can have full employment, so can Canada—provided the government in power realized that unemployment was a major issue and quit polishing the apples of big business interests.

HAS NO PLAN CLAIM

Even though unemployment figures are decreasing, he said "hundreds of thousands" of Canadians will remain in the ranks of the unemployed because the Diefenbaker government does not have a plan to implement full employment.

Mr. Pitman said Canadians are ready for a "new look" at foreign affairs and "at the word called defence, for there is no defence." "He believed the west needs more than stockpiles of nuclear weapons to prevent another world war. The world is looking toward Canada to help realize "that something extra."

He accused play in this (nuclear weapons) game," he said. "This league is too big for us. But we should help turn the world in a different direction through the weight of our moral aid and manpower. Canada cannot play a role of deterence, but it can play a big part in reducing the misery and poverty that has stricken two-thirds of the world's population. While the east and west participate neck and neck in an arms race, who will win in arms races, who will win in Africa and Asia?"

He said that a "war by mistake" is the greatest fear Canadians should have. He said the present situation could be considered . . . and the chances are becoming more likely every day for a war by accident to start, especially if another nation got into the nuclear arms race."

Cut Flowers, Strawberries In Profusion

Today's outdoor market was characterized by a large number of cut flowers which were great both in beauty and diversification. A great number of varieties were on hand with prices ranging between 35 and 50 cents a dozen. There were also many types of transplants available at many different vendors. These were priced between 35 and 50 cents a box by and large although some of the hybrids commanded higher price level.

Strawberries were exhibited in much greater profusion this morning and the price was up from last week's 35 cents the boxful to 50-55 cents a box today. Raspberry rhubarb, on the other hand, was priced at three bunches for a quarter.

A good variety of vegetables was available with potatoes commanding 25 cents the basket or 90 cents for 11-quart basketfuls. Onions sold at 75 cents a basket with green onions selling at three bunches for a quarter. Asparagus sold at 35 cents a bunch and dry beans could be had at two bags for 25 cents.

Lettuce sold at 15 cents a head or 10 cents a bunch. Watercress was priced at 10 cents a bunch and radishes were priced the same or three for a quarter.

Egg prices were the same as last week with extra large selling at 50 cents a dozen and large selling at 45 cents.

Home baking was also on hand this morning with homemade pies selling between 45 and 65 cents each depending on the variety. Cookies of many different types were priced in the region of 50 cents for three dozen although this price level fluctuated according to whether or not the cookie was plain or fancy. Many other items of baking were also on hand for the local buyer.

Threatening skies and winds kept the market activity down a bit from its usual pace during the earlier part of the morning.

Parliament At a Glance

Automatic first reading was given a government bill to oust James E. Coyne as Bank of Canada governor.

External Affairs Minister Green, back from Geneva, said Russia is not anxious to make the international truce commission in Laos effective.

A CCF non-confidence motion entered in budget debate was swamped 128 to 50.

Liberal and CCF members belittled government supporters for their non - support in the scheduled six - day budget debate.

Saturday, June 24

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. in estimates debate; the Senate is adjourned until 8 p.m. Monday.

NEITHER CAN WIN

Mr. Matheson said "there can be no victory for neither" in the dispute between Mr. Coyne and Mr. Coyne.

Mr. Fleming and Mr. Coyne had worked badly together by pulling towards two dangerous extremes.

The finance minister was protesting an "expansionist nationalism" with the bank governor supporting "restrictive nationalism" in what was a critical situation for the economic future of Canada.

Mr. Knowles said the budget proposals to protect industry from imports "will be bigger consumer prices. Such protection was "dangerous and damage to the economy" and the only one result will be increased U.S. investment in the industrial Canadian businesses.

He opened his address by paying tribute to the late Hayden Stanton, who held Leeds for the Conservatives for 36 years at the helm of his death last year, and closed with brief remarks to that effect.

Arnold Peters (CCF — Timiskaming) said the Conservatives were getting to be bolder "sheep" than the Liberals dared to be. They had orders to sit pat because it was impossible to "sell" the budget.

Mr. Peters said Mr. Fleming's proposals to tax cigaret manufacturers to put more tobacco in each cigaret without raising the price would have two effects; Some persons would become more addicted of cancer and there would be longer butts for the unemployed.

CRITICIZES BANK

At Saturday's meet, Mr. Peters said the Bank of Nova Scotia charges 11 per cent on small loans but that the real rate is probably double this.

Quoting the report, Mr. Peters "for a change" should make a speech based on fact instead of stating it as a fact without basis.

Hubert Badanai (L—Fort William) described as a "white elephant commission" from the budget the government's "failure" to establish a land from which towns and cities could borrow for capital expenditures.

Municipalities were already borrowing heavily from the United States, he said. With lower exchange rate on the Canadian dollar, this would become more costly.

U.S. Is Studying Policy on UN And Red China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The state department says U.S. policy on Red China's membership for Communist China "is under study and a number of possibilities are being considered."

Department press officer Lincoln White stressed Friday that no decision has been made.

Diplomatic sources, however, said U.S. strategy is based on the assumption Red China will take a UN seat as long as Nationalist China is a member.

State Secretary Dean Rusk discussed the problem with Japan's foreign minister, Zentaro Kosaka, the sources reported, and held the view the majority of the 99 members of the United Nations would not vote to deprive Nationalist China of its seat.

U.S. Will Not Close Border At Detroit

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP)—A qualified government source said Friday the United States has no intention of closing the border against Canadians who commute daily to jobs in American border communities.

The informant said the government may go through the motions of making a study of complaints that these communities are taking jobs away from Americans but there will be no interference with the Canadians and no changes in the present pattern of crossings along the Canada-U.S. border.

A somewhat different situation exists along the Mexican border, the informant said. But there, in cases where Mexican wage rates are much below those paid to Americans, the government hesitates to take action.

Studies to ascertain the nature and the extent of U.S. unemployment attributable to this practice are under way and certain points and will eventually be decided, the source said. Secretary Labor Minister Goldberg said in a statement.

Congo Comes To Its Senses

It is a measure of the contempt which familiarity with conferences has bred that word that the Congo parliament is to be called into session could be received by the world with such little fanfare.

Of conferences and rumors of conferences, there seems to be no end and few of them prove worthwhile.

Yet, by any reasonable appraisal, the mere fact that this session of the Congo Parliament has been called at all, under the auspices involved, must be considered little less than miraculous.

Here are President Kasavubu, head of the so-called government of the Congo, and Antoine Gizenga, head of the Lumumbist secessionists, joining in convening the elected representatives of the Congolese people after a year of bitter strife.

Moreover, delegates of the rival regimes have agreed that all Congolese troops and police in Leopoldville should deposit their arms in a warehouse during the session of parliament and —amazing fact—that these arms should be guarded by the United Nations, which have received little co-operation but much abuse from all factions in the Congo.

Had a similar spirit prevailed in the Congo a year ago when it was first given its independence by the Belgians, the land would have been spared a bloody year of internecine strife.

It has been a terrible year with a terrible lesson, for the Congolese as well as for the world as a whole, but at long last warring factions appear to have reached their senses. If the wisdom it has brought can be measured by one decision, to cut off the members of parliament from the outside world during their session at Lovanium University outside of Leopoldville, it has indeed been a hard lesson well learned. This reveals, better than anything else could, that the Congolese leaders have recognized that any effective solution of their problems must come primarily from within themselves, as the result of diligent search and careful thought, rather than by being swayed by every irresponsible voice or appealing to any and every outside power for support.

Small Potatoes

Two things need to be said about Laos.

Firstly, by even the largest estimates of the numbers involved, the fighting there was small potatoes.

Secondly, there is no guarantee that these largest estimates are not, in fact, grossly exaggerated.

It all depends who is doing the estimating. Monday of last week, in a despatch from Zurich, Switzerland, the Associated Press referred to Prince Souphanouvong of the Pathet Lao as being "backed by 12,000 tough guerillas hardened by years of jungle fighting." But on Thursday in a despatch from Vientiane in Laos the same Associated Press reported that Pathet Lao are believed to number 3,000, while allied with them rebel commander Kong Le claims to have about 3,000 men, a total of 6,000. A week or so ago a U.S. delegation spokesman said there were approximately 1,000 Vietminh forces with the Pathet Lao last March. Later information has raised this estimate and the Royal Laotian Army officers say 10,000 is nearer the truth. But an American officer who leads one of the U.S. advisory teams (their total strength is placed at 300) says that he does not believe there are any North Vietnamese in Laos except padres, advisers and technicians.

Come off the High Hog!

Do you spend $20 a week for food? Probably you do, in fact almost certainly you do if you have an average-sized family and enjoy an average-sized income.

But $20 a week—per person? Yes, that is what we said, per person. Why the average-sized family with an averaged-sized income just couldn't make ends meet at that rate.

Which is why our eyebrows went up as we read the following paragraph in a letter to the editor of a Toronto daily newspaper.

"She can save on food. But what kind of food can you imagine suitable for a doctor's family at less than $20 a week per person?"

Shades of Marie Antoinette! Food "suitable for a doctor's family," forsooth. Good, wholesome food is suitable for any family in the land and every family in a land of plenty such as Canada is entitled to good wholesome food. That isn't to say that some families, if they have the means, should not enjoy the luxury of more expensive foods, if their tastes run that way. It is to suggest, though, that there is a deplorable tone about that remark which tempts us to mix a couple of metaphors and suggest the writer had better climb down off the high hog.

Germans Lure Skilled Scots

Gaelgir Mowatt

In Canada the Dominion Government has become quite perturbed over its dwindling unemployment insurance fund. It is a different story, however, in West Germany where the cabinet has just approved suspension of the unemployment insurance contributions for six months because there are too few unemployed.

In fact there is such a labor shortage in West Germany that workers, in large numbers, have been imported from other European countries, particularly Italy.

Now skilled British shipbuilding workers are being lured from the slump-hit Clydeside yards are being enticed away from England to work in the shipyards in Hamburg, Britian's keenest competitor in the shipbuilding industry.

Small groups of shipyard workers have already been to the Hamburg shipyards to look over the situation and tell their workmates the story. Soon it is expected 60 Glasgow men will leave Clydeside for Hamburg, and if the experiment proves of value to Germany, it is believed likely that several thousand more will follow.

The British shipyard workers are being offered great inducements to go to work in a city. These include big pay bonuses and hostel accommodation with their own British cooks.

The average basic pay of a German shipyard skilled worker is about $31 a week, after tax and other deductions. The British workers, however, are as well as earning the same rates of pay as the Germans after bonuses, plus overtime, will be paid home-going fares.

Two viewpoints are being expressed over the shipbuilders' exodus. One is that of Jock Allin, a Scottish industrialist, who has an interest in a Clydeside shipbuilding firm, says "the idea is to use the skill of men who would otherwise be idle and, might, perhaps, be lost to the shipbuilding industry unless if they go into other trades." But Tom McGarvey, general secretary of the Boilermakers Union, says "it is absurd for our skilled men to help our strongest competitor. It does not sound patriotic."

Yet he hops of steady work, at a time when British shipyards are laying off men, no doubt is alurring to British workers.

Try to Hog Devilled Ham

Vancouver Sun

The International Finance Corporation is putting up $500,000 to start a devilled ham industry in Venezuela.

The IFC, which Canada has a $3.5 million stake, is an offshoot of the World Bank. It invests in private enterprises in underdeveloped countries, hoping to solve their economic problems.

But the intelligent reader is warned not to swallow the conclusion that Venezuela has a surplus of pigs that cannot be processed into pork roasts, pickled or smoked.

No — some how the devilled ham factory will be imported. The Venezuelan industry and the Venezuelans have such an overwhelming passion for devilled ham that it is maintained the factory to satisfy it.

Since the plant is not designed to produce wieners, we won't even look more likely to hamburgary to us.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

Upwards of seventy-five Ontario Intelligencer newsboys enjoyed the hospitality of the McCarthy Theatre last night as guests of the management. The newsies behaved themselves like little gentlemen, interspersing the pictures with applause whenever they thought the situation demanded it. Later they were driven in cars in appreciation of the generous gesture of the theatre in furnishing them the free show.

The City Council is nearing the end of their business for the summer and last night's session was one of the shortest of the season after the committee meeting was concluded. At the conclusion of the session on the invitation of Alderman Jack Allin, the members gave a cheer for the Boy of Quinte in Ald. Allin's fine boat.

Gordon A. Williams of Everett Street left Monday for Manning Pool in Toronto where he will go into training as a pilot in the R.C.A.F.

Members of the Junior W.A. of St. John's Church had the privilege of hearing a very interesting address when Miss Burnside, of the staff of the O.S.D., spoke of the educational facilities open to the pupil of the province. Miss Burnside described the courses in the school, the academic and vocational work for girls and boys, the aim of which is to prepare them to take a useful place in the community when they graduate, equipped to earn their livings and to be good citizens.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

MAKE FRIENDS WITH THE ANGEL

Someone has defined happiness as a striving toward meaningful goals.

Note that the emphasis here is upon the striving not upon the achievement. The happiness we get out of life is the happiness we get from striving for the world are those who say, "When I get a little more past me and have my house paid for and the children educated, I am going to do some attention to being happy." Friend, if striving to pay off the mortgage on the house and getting the youngsters through school did not produce happiness, then don't think that a trip to the Mediterranean or a beautiful winter cruise to the South will make you happy.

Happiness is standing right next to you, it is nudging you in the ribs and trying to attract your attention. The time to be happy is now. The way to be happy is by living life to its full.

The utterly hopeless people in the world are the ones who turn to narcotics in their search for happiness. Sad, pitiful, tragic, miserable and miserable are the ones who turn to alcohol. Wake up friend. An angel stands beside you with his arm affectionately placed about your shoulder. His name is Happiness. Make friends with him. The worst mistake you can make is to believe that he is waiting for you in the next decade, in a higher position, or in another part of the world.

Briton Bests Post Office

Brockville Recorder and Times

A stubborn Briton has struck a blow for democracy and the rights of the individual, according to a report from London. He had to deal with a pair of post office weigh scales that were not properly balanced.

The Briton put his own scales to weigh a package for his wife. He struck on the appropriate stamp, but when his wife took it to a post office, the postmaster of Weigh and stamping it: "Sorry dear, you need three pennies more." Wife and more she insisted the post office scales were always right. Back home she checked it by scales with five other shoppers and found they all tallied. He appeal to the local weights and measures official was of no use — because could do nothing because the scales were "the property of the Queen."

The determined Briton then appealed to Postmaster Gen. Sir Reginald Hall. After a lengthy investigation by postal authorities, Mr. Hall received from the Postmaster General a threepenny stamp and a apology for the error. Furthermore it was announced that a scheme for local inspection of scales was being extended to the whole country.

So it was that on a question of fact and a matter of principle, Britain Hall stood in a ground against the government.

Sahara Sands Now Valuable

Milwaukee Journal

If you told a statesman of a few decades ago that mankind would seriously argue about who owned the Sahara desert and that such an argument would prevent the ending a bloody war he would doubt your sanity.

The future of the Sahara is, however, one of the most serious problems facing the French and Algerian rebel leaders as they negotiate a peace settlement. France claims that the part of the Sahara it owns, the largest part of it, is part of Algeria. Algerians claim that it is.

Why the argument? Because the drifting sands are so leagues worthless. They are the potential source of immense riches. France expects to get 30,000,000 tons of oil from desert wells within two years. There are great stores of natural gas. There are uranium and iron and other minerals.

Neither side seems ready to back down. Yet in the end there must be compromise. France is in a difficult position. The Sahara needs an outlet to the sea — and that is only available through Algeria, or one of its neighbors. And there would be problems.

Plan Might Lay an Egg

Brantford Expositor

"Can people be taught like hens?"

That is the question asked in the heading on an article in The School Guidance Worker monthly publication of the Guidance Centre of the Ontario College of Education.

To tell the truth, we hadn't realized that pigeons could be taught in the first place, let alone that humans could be trained by the same techniques.

But maybe it's so.

The article, reprinted by special permission from Future, is by George A. W. Boehm and it deals interestingly with a new method of "programed learning." This is described as "the most radical teaching innovation since John Dewey introduced his 'progressive' theories." Both of these, it is recalled, were greeted with howls of derision when they were first introduced.

It is causes as much controversy as the Dewey effort, we can look forward to some of the most intense arguments in educational circles for some time to come.

In some respects, we are told, the "programed" system resembles old-fashioned and repressive methods of teaching. Russian experimenter Pavlov, for others it is like the "behaviorism" of the late Dr. John B. Watson.

Leaving due appraisal of the pros and cons of the case to those competent to deal with such matters, we confess that bit about the pigeons.

It appears that the founder of one of two leading "programing" schools of thought, Professor B. Frederic Skinner of Harvard, based his ideas on a study of the conditioning of rats and pigeons. In fact he started with rats but switched to pigeons. And that is the fascinating point: he succeeded in teaching pigeons a number of rather complex tricks. Pigeons, mind you! And here we'd always considered them the most stupid fowl on earth, with the possible exception of chickens!

But if it is possible to teach pigeons to do certain as a basis for teaching humans in school, then it follows that the bounds of possibility to train the pesky birds to stay off public (or any other) buildings and so would save a lot of nuisance. It would render unnecessary the shooting of roofs and roots with metal appliances designed to keep pigeons away. It would even remove the necessity of hoisting those whirligigs on our Post Office towers.

Babies Will Tolerate Surgery Extremely Well

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I read about a baby that was operated on for an upside-down stomach when only 18 hours old. What signs would show this?

"The baby would really upside down or is this just an easy way to explain the condition to a layman?—R.H."

Upside-down stomach is due to defects in the diaphragm. In general it can be called a diaphragmatic hernia, which is a flaw, that can vary from mild to very severe.

It is reached a stage at which it can be called an upside-down stomach, the organ has been reforced up(or allowed to rise) into the left chest.

In severe cases the stomach is really upside-down.

There are a number of signs which can raise a suspicion that this situation is present in a newborn baby are breathing difficulties, poor color, bulging of the chest wall. When the baby is old enough to eat, feeding difficulties are apparent.

Once suspected, it is confirmed swiftly enough by X-ray.

This is not a common defect in newborn babies, but it is found often enough to keep alert to the possibility of picking for signs that call for more elaborate examination.

With this particular trouble there is involving the diaphragm! It is extremely important for some cases to be of little significance that "gas on the stomach" or distress of any kind, in other cases, symptoms may appear late in life, and in such cases may not require surgery.

As for operating on babies only a few hours old — well, I must confess that it still seems hard to believe, even though I well know that it is possible, and that hand-some and successful surgery very well and often are squirming around like perfectly normal little cubs in the first-day-old time. Some surgeons have said that it feels like "operating on a canary bird" at first, but they become used to dealing with the tiny little organs.

Indeed, in some instances it is imperative that surgery be performed at once. From time to time the esophagus may be drastically narrowed or even closed off or there may be a disturbance in breathing. Hence repairing it is essential right away if the baby is to live.

Such operations as these have saved a heartening number of babies who otherwise would have died in a matter of days.

"Dear Dr. Molner; I am having trouble with constipation. I am 78, have always had a restricted opening, and was operated on for fistula and hemorrhoids 30 years ago with good results but my difficulty continues in mild form.

Two or three suggestions: Eating raw fruit and vegetables! can help by adding more bulk to your diet. Likewise sodium sulfosuccinate (a moistening agent) has proved extremely helpful in this sort of case. THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

You seldom see a young man with a flower in his buttonhole. Formerly he wore them. Flowers in the buttonhole, even in this lovely month of roses, there is a boutonniere of some kind to be picked it front of every house. Only the affectation most men do not allow flowers until they are well past forty.

In fact, if we took a census in it, we would probably find that ninety per cent of men are living their lives with the buttonhole are past sixty.

Why should this be? For what purpose is flower worn? Certainly in the left lapel of almost every suit coat said from coast to coast? There is no button to which it corresponds. Some men fasten a boutonniere under small pin in the lapel. But in the vast majority of cases, the button hole remains throughout the life of the garment a symbol of a vanished fashion.

Do they think it slazy to wear a flower? If so, a little reading will persuade us that to wear a flower in the lapel is the opposite of lazy, as much as to say to all and sundry, to beck and bridge, I am as spry as a healthy and happy man. It is June. The world is gay with flowers and the heart is glad and glad to assert that I am part of June.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

ARE YOU GOOD FOR ANYBODY?

Sometimes I think life narrows down to some simple little question like this. "Are you really good for anybody?" Not you better than medicine, better than money, finer than a fortune, but good for somebody.

I believe that if more people married because they felt they were going to be of great good to their choices rather than for the love, even, there would be more marriages that would be peaceful and happy.

You see, love is made of such a vast number of hues, and is so rarely understood, that it is a very wise and paying proposition to divide yourself in advance of any association "Will I be good for him — or her?

Will he be good for me — or her — love will take care of itself!

Many of our fondest imagined possessions fade away as we grow older, and we find that they are like the mirage, which teaches us that the greatest comforts of life are those which come to us in simple ways and unexpected.

Many of us demand that which is not good for us and for which we might not want anyway.

How wonderful to want, with all your heart, to be good for somebody, for somebody to be good for you!

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

NESTING DATES
By WILSON TIRED WILSON

According to tradition birds breed in springtime. But actually nesting dates are quite variable, depending upon when the building material and the favorite food of the species are available, whether or not disaster strikes, and whether or not that particular species has one or more than one brood a year.

Non-migrants are apt to begin housekeeping as soon as conditions permit — and some begin before we think it advisable. The Canada jay of our northern lumbering districts is frequently found brooding in February when snow still lies deep. However, this bird prepares for bad weather by placing the home low down in a dense conifer and carefully lining it with fur and feathers for protection against zero temperatures. Similarly, even in February before winter is over, the great horned owl takes over discarded nests of red-tailed hawks or herons, or builds in a hollow tree. Eggs or nestlings are often discovered protected by a sitting parent blanketed with snow.

SOME NEST EARLY

Some migrants also start nesting on the winter is past. A horned lark born and bred in Canada makes a preference of wintering farther south than our border (with the exception of southern Ontario); however, it returns to its birth place very early to lay eggs and eggs are laid while conditions are so unfavorable that they are frequently destroyed by snow storms. The bird must then lay another set. This habit of beginning all over again when disaster has wiped out a young family is quite common in Birdland, and accounts for some fairly late nesting.

The majority of our birds build in late spring or early summer, and bring up just one family. But a goodly number always have more than one brood in a season: cob-in spring and another later on. A few, like the English sparrow, have several broods a year.

Here Are Some Useful Tips To Help Tourists in Europe

By Shirley and Bob Keane

Getting to and from Europe is the easiest part of planning a trip there. But deciding how to get around the continent requires careful consideration of time, money and enjoyment.

Here are some of the things you ought to be aware of when making up your mind:

BY AIR — The simplest, and usually cheapest, way to see Europe. All you have to do is buy a through ticket to your farthest point. This permits you to lay over almost anywhere the airlines go to between here and there, at no extra cost (factually, this plan applies in most parts of the world outside of the United States and Canada.)

But in many ways it's the least satisfactory arrangement. The castles on the Rhine and the vineyards of Bordeaux can be difficult to inspect from above at the cruising altitude of a 110 miles a minute. There are, of course, exceptions. The glacial swamps of Norway can be explored (Sabena) Belgian) helicopter route from Brussels to Paris is now better than from the air.

Generally however, flying from airport to airport skips to the areas around major cities. And, as always, you'll get much of your day's time eaten up at the airports.

The next cheapest way, then, is

BY RAIL — the way to do it is to fly to your nearest stop, to where the air fare will be least, and have in your pocket a Eurailpass, an ingenious promotional scheme sponsored by virtually all the railroads of Western Europe.

TRANSPORTATION BARGAIN

The pass, available through your travel agent, permits you anywhere the rails go. The minimum charge is $110 for one month of travel. By engaging to cover a lot of ground, this can be a fantastic transportation bargain.

The railways of Europe are not, however, the American — fast, frequent, dependable, comfortable and with excellent dining car meals. What rail travel doesn't afford quite the intimacy with the passing scene that highway travel does, but it's somewhat easier and smoother.

An important tip: Keep luggage weight and size as low as possible travelling by train. You will find your bags more difficult to manoeuvre in European cars.

BY BUS — This is the favorite land transportation of tour operators for thrifty-minded, budget travellers permit wholesale chartering at low rates. They offer the same flexibility to individual travellers, but when it comes to speed, it's best to stack it up against that of the Eurailpass. It will depend on how much time you're conserving.

In terms of service, European busines are highly developed and organized for touring. The buses have deluxe reclining seats, toilet facilities, lavatories and refreshments, guides and hostesses specifically for touring purposes.

Regular intercity schedules are operated much like those in North America, with one big difference — the vehicles are pretty uncomfortable to ride in. Most of the European buses are now, old and often pumpy roads, buses were designed more for manoeuvrability and sturdiness than for comfort, and are underpowered by our standards.

BY CAR — This is the way most people like to travel. It is best liked in Europe. It is cheaper than it is at home but generally the most expensive way of getting about Europe for the transatlantic tourist.

SHIP OR BUS

There are several ways of doing it:

You can ship your own car over — expensive but comfortable.

You can buy a car to drive yourself, and either send it home as a used car under a buy-back-plus-allowance, or resell it before you return. The first makes most sense if, of course, you want a new car, while the latter is cheaper than renting if you're going to be in Europe for a long time.

Renting a car is most economical and convenient for short stays (a month or less).

There is a certain amount of red tape connected with using a car in Europe, about which your travel agent can advise and help you. For this reason, plus the complications of trying to get around on your own on strange roads and with a strange tongue, driving in Europe is advisable mainly for the self-sufficient and stout of heart.

Most roads are neither built nor maintained as they are here. Nearly all Europeans drive like maniacs. Road signs are in an international code, which you must learn. Repairs can be a nightmare. And sometimes directions in some areas — if you can make yourself understood, you can get there-from-here answers.

The best of all possible ways to go? It's the most expensive, a bit far out-of-reach, but a satisfactory by chauffeured car. Despite the cost, it is far cheaper than it is back home. Pro-rated over two or three passengers, it is quite affordable as most other forms of transportation.

The chauffeur is the answer to your problems. He speaks all the necessary languages, knows how to manoeuvre "opposing" traffic, can get you a room, and phone ahead for your hotel reservations if changes in plans are necessary, serves as your guide, finds parking places, and fields annoyances of the kind and concerns that would be preempting your attention if you had to be behind the wheel.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

Since writing the last column, the wild roses on the railway bank seem to have disappeared. On the last run home over the bridge, there was no pink to be seen. But a kind reader sent in a clipping from some newspaper which has interesting information about the wild rose.

"The wild roses now come to bloom along fortunate roadsides, in the pasture fence rows and on the moist margins of the bog lands. They range from the relatively large pasture rose, which bears its flowers singly, to the bushy sweetbrier with smaller blooms in clusters. They include the swamp rose, also with clustered blossoms, and the so-called dwarf wild rose of the red-brown stems which is so common, and the prickly rose of swampy places. There is even the almost thornless smooth rose, as it is called, which chooses the rocky hillsides.

"All are some shade of pink and all are fragrant. The sweetbrier, brought from Europe long ago as a garden flower, is the ugliness of English poets and it owes much fragrance which smell like apples when crushed. And all of them are of the ancestors from which, by one route or another, provided the chief source of our flowering gardens. Bees love them for their pollen and nectar. Country folk love them for their fragrance and simple beauty. Birds patronize them in the fall for their hips are rich in vitamin C that constitute their seed-fruit and so are rich in vitamins.

"All the roses, of course, are botanical cousins of the apple, the raspberry and, among many other plants, the meadowsweet and the hardhack. But their particular glory is that pink flower, that joy of June, which lights up the fair weather hedge and the marsh's margin. For June is rose time in the country."

There is also the beauty of the cascading, old - fashioned yellow rose and the arresting splash of the red climber. There is the grace, stillness and perfection of the tea roses and the cheerfulness of the floribundas.

Two writers have penned statements that seem slightly contradictory. Emily Bronte said: "Love is like the wild rose-briar"; while Swinburne said: "If love were what the rose is." Roses and love and June form part of so many songs and quotations that they would fill a book. Yet the sight of a rose brings forth the delight and wonder that might be expected on first viewing.

Probably the most famous quotation concerning a rose comes from Shakespeare. "What's in a name: That which we call a rose by any other name would smell as sweet." A 10-year-old boy who was attending this year's Stratford production with his family, nudged his father after hearing these words and said, "That's some line, eh, Dad?"

Perhaps a letter to Juliet's "The Rose of Eden" was follows:

"There is never a daughter of Eve but once, ere the tale of her days is done,
She will know the scent of the Eden rose, just once before she runs
And whatever else she may win or lose, endure, or do, she will never forget the ecstasies!
For the world may give Her content or joy, fame, sorrow, or sacrifice,
But the hour that's brought the Eden rose, she lived it in Paradise."

This week is, for all to see, also the week of the mock orange blossom in Belleville. Some shrubs seem to bloom earlier than others, maybe due to location, but we hope you were able to inhale deeply — especially during the rain on Wednesday — of the heady scent of the mock orange. Breathe deeply for it will have to last until next year.

Make Your Answer, 'I Can'

By ALMA MASON

Walter Fenn voiced the greatest need of the modern world when he wrote "Give me men to match my mountains! Give me men to match my plains; men with empires in their purpose; men with empires in their brains."

Today more than at any other time in the history of the world we need rugged, fearless men, individuals of supreme and worthy purpose who are determined no matter what the cost to achieve their purpose.

Moses answered "I can" when God asked him to lead the children of Israel out of Egypt, through his fortitude we have the heritage of Christianity. Moses had the courage to establish a sign for perfect living in the Ten Commandments which stood as a beacon for all these years.

Such a little time is given man
To fill his poor allotted span
With honest service, worthy work;
Minutes are golden; do not shirk
The duty you must bravely do
The task that's made for you alone;
Gird on the sword and armor too;
Trade the job that's meant for you;
Then ask the captain of your host,
To help you reach your shining coast.

The words "I can" will ease the quest
And lead on to the topmost crest.

Miss M. Woodard's Pupils Present Recital at Albert College

By GLADYS WARD

On Friday evening Miss Marjorie Woodard, A. Mus. (McGill), R.M.T., presented her pupils of the Albert College Conservatory of Music in a piano class demonstration.

With the students sitting around Miss Woodard explained that the lessons were held at Albert College Annex with each child at desk, but for purposes of demonstration last night they were at the same table.

Studying a few bars of music the children were asked to name the time, the key it was written in, the position of the hands, the musical signs, and fingering. They played it first on the table, and then on the piano.

Later the class demonstrated an ear test, and chords and scale playing.

The recital was held in Memorial Chapel and Dr. C. C. McMullen was present to extend a welcome on behalf of the school.

Refreshments were served by the Kinettes, who were thanked by President Pat Beverstock.

YOUR POCKETBOOK is a never-ending source of pleasure to your meager, but she'd like to have one of her own. It certainly needn't be new, but it must be good-style, and capacious. Add a discarded wallet and here, perhaps a comb and a sandy lipstick, an unbreakable mirror, a handkerchief. And she'll find small toys of her own to carry.

THE BRIDAL SHOWER CAUSED TROUBLE

During the past few months I have answered many questions relative to bridal showers. The following letter seems to bear out my contention that these showers can become more trouble than pleasure to all concerned! As I have said, they are overdone, and most of them and are serious to express a big, free spirit and rejoyce of the bride-to-be are excited and are anxious to express their good wishes for her future. But unless some semblance of thoughtfulness, and planning is adopted, it can turn into a burden — not only for the bride, but also for her friends.

Here is the letter of which I speak:

"Even though I have been married for several months, my mother still harasses me about the bridal shower which my husband's aunt gave me at my mother-in-law's home. My mother claims that I should not have accepted gifts from people I did not know. Even before this shower, none of my family or friends found time to have a party for me. It wasn't until my mother-in-law decided to give the party, along with the aunt, that my mother thought they should be present to share in giving the party.

"Now everybody is peeved at everybody else. I feel that the honor is also hurt because she wanted to have a surprise party for me, but my mother refused to give her any names or information about the wedding attendants or those who were to be invited. She is a mother wrong in turning my friend's idea aside? If you do answer this letter in your column, perhaps it will stop all this silly bickering and unpleasantness. I will certainly make sure they all see it!"

The most important person in this picture is your maid of honor! Being a friend, not a relative, it is perfectly proper for her to give a surprise shower for you. But when she was extremely unfair in refusing to give you information, so that she could get up a guest list without your being aware of what she was trying to do. I have said over and over again, that courtesy demands that a relative, on either side of the family, never gives a shower for one of their own "flesh and son?" When people are asked to a shower, they are expected to come bearing gifts. It is not good taste to ask people to bring gifts to one of your own. It therefore follows that your mother, your other relatives, and the aunt and mother of your husband were all wrong in the first place! So tell them to stop this unpleasantness in its casting a cloud on your happiness. I am appalled at your attitude, and everybody should forgive and forget.

Let's hope this unhappy little story will be a lesson to many a fool to future brides and their families!

ARE MEN'S FASHIONS CHANGING?

"Good heavens," what is that! Why, that's the lad I was referring to was one of our most respected male citizens and was there at first sight as evening dancing party. He was attired in a very expedient light blue dinner jacket, with white he was wearing a frilly shirt, flowing bow tie and his regular tuxedo trousers. The total effect was startling; to say the least!

What is this trend leading to? I have noticed several men at recent parties, in similar dress. What is to be the end of our menfolk return to the effeminate styles with ruffs of lace over the hands, and the velvet breeches that were worn well over a century ago? Let us fervently hope not!

It's bad enough when women follow fads that are started by clothes designers. Some women wear them regardless of the fact that a skirt above the knees, for example, makes them look ridiculous. To "be in style" is the important thing! They completely ignore the obvious censure they will receive. Men are always accusing us of being fickle. Don't tell me they are! going to follow along and do the same thing themselves!

"A well-dressed man is one who is always conservative — never flashy." I have always agreed with this edict, and so many, many people, of both sexes, agree with me. At least I am not alone in my opinion!

Last week, we discussed what should be worn by the bridegroom, his ushers and his fathers on both sides, for the wedding. Let us hope the unpleasant trend mentioned above doesn't spread far enough to make a mockery of the clothes worn at weddings.

Dress has traditionally been

I promised to go into what should be worn for the semi-formal or informal ceremony. This is, of course, based on the attire of the bride. If she is in an afternoon dress, or an informal, then the men in the wedding party should wear "business" suit. Dark blue is the best choice, but gray may also be worn at weddings.

If the bride is in a full length dress, or a formal, then the men should be attired as much alike as possible. Two in blue, and two in gray is all wrong! An effort should be made to have all in blue (or all in dark gray) as near the same shade as possible.

A white shirt (never a colored one) with a conservative four-in-hand tie should be worn. A white boutonniere is also proper for this very special occasion.

A Lift For Living

Worship Is Key to Full Life

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

June is nearly over. The season of commencements is closing. What about the end of "commencement"?

One characteristic of greatness is retail. It never feels finished. When the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews leads his readers through Israel's Hall of Fame in that immortal eleventh chapter, he starts before Abraham, Jacob, Joseph, Moses, David and others to point out their glorious achievements, but through the account runs the refrain, "These all died in faith, not having received the promises."

Charles Evans Hughes, the late Chief Justice paid a tribute to the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes when the latter finished his nineties year and is borne, ripened in powers, but still in possession of life's enjoyments. At that time Chief Justice Hughes said of Justice Holmes that he had attained "the most beautiful and serene life in the world — complete life."

Holmes' life was of such completeness of such a well-rounded life, Justice Holmes wrote a letter a few years ago, which he titled "Life seems to me like a Japanese picture which our imagination does not allow to end with the margin. We aim at infinity. Therefore our arts borrow falls to earth it is in vain." Then he turns to poetry for the 'Yankee from Olympus' still felt there were heights not yet attained.

We are created with hungers which we cannot fully satisfy. We cannot be completely self-contained in this world. If we take it as a container and pour into them the richest treasures that earth can supply to get "fed up" but that does not mean that we are satisfied.

Nor does the mere acquiring of information content the mind. If it did, then we would follow that the most learned men are the most blessed, but they are not. The more we know, the more we realize our limits to be discovered.

What conclusion shall we draw from this incompleteness? That we let it leave us disillusioned and disappointed, saying with Vicky Baum in her novel "Grand Hotel": "The real thing in life always going on somewhere else. When you are young, you think it will come later. Later on, you've grown old, was earlier. When you are here, you think it was there. But when you get there, you find that life has doubled back and is quietly waiting for you in the very place you ran away from."

Is this earth just a sort of Grand Hotel, through whose revolving doors we restlessly rush in and out, seeking satisfactions which seem to elude us?

No, this universe is "a vale of soul-making." One of the books which has most influenced my life is "What Men Live By," written by Dr. Richard Cabot of Harvard a generation ago. He asserted that the four essentials of life's Work, Play, Love and Worship.

WE LIVE TO WORK

We live to work. Many would say, "We work to live." They chore or work as a necessary chore whereby we can succeed to live after working hours and working days are over. Not so. We cannot really live without work. Work links us to our fellows and fulfills our faculties. Nor can we live without play.

Play must follow work as a form of recreation wherein we can release our energies and refresh our spirits.

Nor can we live without love. Love is the greatest thing in life. Love is a link lost from a chain. But love is not enough. We need worship to show us the ends for which we should work and play, and the objects which we should love. Worship links our lives into one all-inclusive purpose, and lifts us out of our selfish interests into the service of God and man. Worship gives us something to live for that no one can take from us or jobs and death separates us from our loved ones.

Work and play and love by what we put ourselves into and not by what we put into ourselves.

QUESTION:

. . . I am at a loss to know what vegetables go with, for variety different meats. Especially when having company. Is there some booklet of instructions may obtain to give me this information — to keep with my cookbooks? . . . Mrs. P.A M

ANSWER:

You have asked a good question, Mrs. P.A., that will help you in entitled "Healthful Eating," prepared by Nutrition Division, Department of National Health, and Welfare, Ottawa, and The Queen's Printer, Ottawa, asking for it. Another book which will help you but which is more expensive comes in two volumes, "Boston cyclopedia of Cooking" by Meta Given, published by J. B. SATURDAY

Curried Veal on Fluffy Boiled Rice; New Green Beans; Individual Oranges and Grapefruit Salads with Almond Mayonnaise; Raisin Squares (see Friday); Iced Tea (see Thursday).

In planning the main course consider contrasts in color, flavor, texture and combinations of flavors. An all white meal or all yellow meal is uninteresting. Avoid more than one creamed dish in a meal. Avoid more than one food with the same predominant flavor e.g. tomatoes. For interesting food combinations are 1) Ham slice, glazed sweet potatoes, spinach with shredded almonds and cauliflower; 2) Roast Beef or Steak, mashed potatoes, Scalloping or corn fritters and buttered celery or French fried onion rings; 3) Fried Chicken with cream gravy and mashed potatoes and new green peas or broccoli and green beans; 4) Salmon Steak with lemon, small white or new potatoes with cucumber and crumbed boiled tomato halves; 5) Breaded Veal Cutlet with, tiny new carrots and parsleyed rice.

I hope these ideas will help.

QUESTION:

Would you be good enough to give me the recipe for Knishes (Jewish dish I think) which these are baked in the oven . . . A potato dough and then (meat) filling. I wanted to try it . . . Mrs. R. H

ANSWER:

My recipe for Knishes combines ground liver with, another dish you may recipe that is what you are seeking.

KNISHES:

1 cup cold mashed potatoes, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 tablespoon chicken fat, 1 egg, salt to taste.

Add enough cold water to above ingredients to make a soft dough that will roll out thinly and cover half of it with the following mixture: Saute 2 large cooking onions in 3 tablespoons chicken fat until golden but not brown. Remove from heat and add 1 cup cold mashed potatoes, 2 cups finely ground cooked chicken or beef liver and other ground cooked meat such as beef or veal or chicken. Add 1 egg, salt and ground together again to make smooth paste. Add 1 egg. Spread on half of dough and fold over remaining half. Seal edges. Carefully lift to greased baking sheet and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. until golden brown.

AN ELABORATE DIARY

"He is known almost exclusively by his Diary, which gives an admirable account of him . . ."—Some Notes on John Evelyn (1630-1706).

Do you keep a diary?

A lady in our Quinte district says she has kept one ever since she was a girl in school but never refers back to it. "Perhaps, when I'm old and gray, I shall; it sounds a worthy object, yet I've never got the habit and keep it up."

And very wise to do so, according to novelist Jessamyn West. Everybody keeps diaries (in spite of the general attitude they are keepers of life instead of its spenders) are the most fortunate in the world, for they never die. "In my mind," she declares, "no other kind of writing gives the reader so much the feel of what another person has experienced."

Authorities claim this centennial year spotlights a diary of an American pianist named Louis Moreeau Gottschalk for the best word pictures of the Civil War. (besides being a important source material) even published although done so posthumously in 1881.

A Union sympathizer, born in New Orleans, Gottschalk toured the U.S extensively while playing his incredible number of concerts, upon his return from study in Paris as a child prodigy. He eventually died in harness in Brazil a the age of 40 when he fell dead at his piano while playing a composition of his at a "mammouth music festival" he was organizing.

He was concerned with his romantic life during the period from 1862 to the end of the Civil War, constantly frustrated, even playing in the Confederate Capital of Richmond.

In June 1863, with Amalia Patti (sister to Adelina) and her husband, Max Strakosch, accompanist and impresario, Gottschalk began a triumphal journey war being at a temporary lull for in July the armies of Grant and Lee would meet at Gettysburg. By the middle of June the forces of the Confederacy to march on Harrisburg where they would capture whatever they need to play. Contrary to all advice, Strakosch insists, off to Harrisburg they shall go, moving to find themselves in the midst of the rebel advance. Everybody is frightened. Strakosch begins to see his mistakes.

Harrisburg is in chaos with turmoil; thousands working at entrenchments. Strakosch wrings up. "A battery of artillery passes at full gallop. We are crushed in the middle of the crowd . . . Numerous groups stand before the Telegraph office . . . Rebels the dispatches announce, are 18 miles off. The greatest fear for the moment is that of McClelland, who is the idol of the army, particularly since Lee's President has taken from him the command, arrives this evening to place himself at the head of the Pennsylvania militia."

Gottschalk has his own fine Chickering grand pianos with which he is touring, Strakosch and his party entrain for Philadelphia. En route, they are "packed like herring in a barrel." The heat is dreadful. Women and children are everywhere . . . Gottschalk curses my gallantry and has just led me to give my seat, which provokes a storm of abuse and audacity I had succeeded in saving the young lady. She did not look at me . . . ," and he scores the rudeness of such behavior. Philadelphia refuses "not introduced to them, Strakosch regards as inadmissible right, what taken altogether is only the result of voluntary isolation."

The party arrives at Philadelphia, exhausted: "Fifteen hours and a half-of railroad in one day, without counting our embarkation. The devil take poets who dare to sing the praises of the artist's life!" The city is being evacuated and confusion is all about. "The panic increases, it is no long-ed to them.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Wilfred N. — Roger's a neighbor and one of my closest friends. Together with our wives we used to make a swell foursome for nights on the town, motor trips, golf, picnics and the rest. But now he turns down all fun, all outings. Says he has to visit his mother.

Old Mrs. U. lives an hour's drive from Roger. Considers it a crime to see her almost every day. Roger flies to her every week when her maid is off-duty. That means taking her to the park in a wheel chair, and helping her get ready for bed.

Roger says she lives for the sight of him. But in a way she'd have much more to live for, more contacts, if Roger didn't care. And Roger would get a break.

Roger U.—Of course I'd like to join Wilfred. My main job the way we used to. But I have a duty. My mother is 84 and getting more frail every day.

But she's not a candidate for the old people's home. She's still quick and completely on the ball. She loves to discuss the headlines with me. Physically she can still get around in her apartment with the help of a cane. The only calamity looming on the horizon is losing her sight. This will be a slow month and, so far, no replacement has been found.

Maybe I can broach the idea at home. But I'd rather have it come from her. Can you mother put a son in a home? Maybe I can get her bored in his mother, against her will?

The Council — Wilfred is right in alerting Roger to an exaggerated sense of duty. Are you going to blame? and to his mother in this attempt to fill all her needs singlehandedly.

The issue here is, what's best for both? — not just for Mrs. W., who thinks it's best to stay home and rely upon a maid and Roger for everything. Roger's not for Roger who thinks he's showing his devotion by giving up almost everything else in his life, including his own home life and friends. He's probably the Good Grade A home for the aged would add much happy years to Mrs. U's life, besides the addition to having maid service and visits from Roger, she'd have medical attention which might help her vision or even her cane. Also, she'd have a constant supply of conversational-ists to help her bone up on the headlines.

Roger would be no less the devoted son if he knew he was relaxed husband and pal of his old contemporaries. Weekly Hunt, Ron Pickell and Stephen Casselman. Each relay could be set with a cup of water filled to the brim and the winning team had the most water left in their cup at the end of the event.

The day's activities culminated in a picnic supper followed by soft drinks and ice cream for everyone.

TABERNACLE UNITED CHURCH

The Colonel Roscoe Vendue-worth Conservation Area was the scene of the congregational picnic for friends and members of Tabernacle United Church. Approximately 175 men, women and children enjoyed games, races and lunch from 10.00 a.m. to 3.00 p.m. under perfect conditions.

Successful Living

Can Slum Dwellers Reform?

DEAR DORIS:—Is it true that people who are brought up in slums will never be any different? I know a man who is a landlord in a run-down part of town. He objects to selling housing units in his property, saying the tenants won't appreciate anything he does and it will only get dirty and dilapidated right away again, anyway—DOUBTING DON.

DEAR DOUBTING DON: — You are right to doubt it. Outstanding efforts in cleaning up slums have shown the exact opposite. DORIS CLARK

In Toronto, the Regent Park project is a case in point. Here rickety old shacks were torn down and replaced with modern, one-family dwellings. Provision was made for parks and children's play space. Then the same families who had lived in the shacks were moved into the homes which now occupy the space. Rents were set according to obligations and salary level of the breadwinners.

The tenants showed their appreciation and their new self-respect by the way they took care of their premises. Homes were cleaner, children's behavior regularly (where plumbing was more adequate), health improved. Morale of the families increased tremendously and permanently.

DEAR DORIS:—I have never been married. Now I am 38 and beginning to feel that life is passing me by. I am a teacher and love my work but I have friends with growing children, and I am missing this part of life.

Soon I will be old and unattractive. I dread a dull, purposeless future.—Becoming-a-Spinster who is separated from his wife suggested that we have an affair. I refused. I wonder now just what I am saving myself for.—JUST AN OLD MAID.

DEAR OLD MAID:—If you are a teacher and you love it, just how much of yourself have you been saving? To work with youngsters, in a school setting, means giving, giving, giving! And the more you love it, the more you give.

Sex is an important ingredient of a normal life. The sexual desire is a strong force for good, and may be expressed in ways that appear quite un-sexual. The thing is, here must be an outlet for the desire to love and be loved, the need to create and to nurture.

North American culture frowns on sex life outside of marriage. The person who seeks satisfaction with an extra-marital mate risks her reputation as well as disappointment and self-respect.

Your life-saver is to understand your own misgivings; to resist developing neurotic tendencies and the bitterness which robs you of good cheer; and to forget yourself in giving love to those who count on you. They will never see you as "old and unattractive" unless you will it that way. . . .

DEAR DORIS:—Do older folks smoke less than young people? I noticed at a recent meeting of a seniors club that very few lit up.—OBSERVER.

DEAR OBSERVER:—I suspect so. In my own acquaintance I can think of several older persons, who were chain smokers in their hey-day and who never touch tobacco in any form now.

Some have cut them out at a time of low income and high expenses; others have stopped because health was threatened. The wisdom that comes with age sometimes indicates a moderation which youth cannot endure.

DEAR DORIS:—Since his father died my boy of 14 has been the man of the house. He has learned to carve the roast at the table and does all the heavy lifting for me. He takes great pride in it and I am proud of him too.

Now my girl friend, who is a teacher, says this is not good for him. He should be carefree and not have home responsibility. I think it helps him to grow up. Which is right!—DORA.

DEAR DORA:—You're both right, in part. Moderation in all things—the motto of the ancient Greeks—is the answer.

No person should be forced into a role which does not belong to him. While it is good for him to help, your boy must not take the place of his father nor be overloaded with the idea that he is the man of the house.

Don't let him grow up too fast. He does need his playtime. The best adjusted adults are those who have a happy childhood.

DEAR DORIS:—I have to tell this to somebody or blow up.

Wealthy friends of mine asked me to baby-sit with their three children while they went away for a three-day weekend. Sit was the wrong word. I fed and clothed them, walked with them and played with them. I was up every night several times because one was sick.

The pay I got for this was $6 a day. You couldn't get a cleaning woman for that—IMPOSED ON.

DEAR IMPOSED ON:—I suppose you accepted it without a murmur?

If I get easy to negotiate wage arrangements after the job is over. We tend to shun financial discussions with friends, but failure to arrive at an understanding before, rather than after, a project is carried out, may ruin a friendship.

Now you are unhappy about something which your friends may think they have handled well. Next time don't have false pride about settling wages before service is given.

CONFIDENTIAL TO O. B.—His sister's hold on him may be for life. Your best hope is that in the distant city, and in view of her husband's objections, she may gradually make fewer demands upon him.

If, after years of friendship, you are seeing no signs of a mature self-reliance on his part, a showdown is indicated. He is wasting your time.

Your Car

Little Things Can Lead to Big Trouble

By EUGENE B. MILMOE

Nothing rifles a mechanic more than the suspicious eye he gets after telling an owner that his car trouble is due to more than one condition. You can't blame him. In the average shop at least half of the jobs require correction of a few rather than a single flaw. A little carelessness — not coincidence — is that oil supply. For instance: A radiator pressure cap hadn't fit tightly ever since the day I slipped out of your hand a nd bounced down the street. Perhaps you never realized that engine temperature might reach a little higher after that — as you forgot about the cap. Later, however, a radiator hose began to deteriorate at the fan belt started slipping a bit. Overheating there would really plague you then, so you turned to a problem over to your services. Naturally, he found that a new radiator cap, a new fan belt and-or a replacement hose were needed.

This is typical of many instances which are actually a combination of little things. Singly, they are not be enough to stop you, but when they team up — look out.

D. H.' asks: "Is it possible for a poorly vented gas tank to cause engine overheating?"

(A) Indirectly, it is, since a gas tank vented tank means the fuel mixture will be on the very lean side.

From T. D.: "When a car has power steering, will it steering it with the engine off cause damage which allows fluid to leak?"

(A) If this does cause fluid leakage, it's not due to actual damage but to overflowing of the system's oil reservoir.

G. L. writes "When the oil pressure gauge reads 20, does it indicate everything is OK?"

(A) It means that engine oil pressure is 20 pounds which is good. It does not prove however that oil supply is OK, so keep tabs on the dipstick.

E.R. asks "The new car I'd like to buy is advertised as having a "fully synchronized transmission." Is this the automatic drive or is it the regular shift?"

(A) The car has a standard clutch shift transmission.

Young Liberals Will Express Views on Flag

This is one of the questions to be placed before the three-day annual meeting of the Ontario Young Liberal Association which opened last night.

Portugal Faces Growing Storm Of Criticism

LONDON (Reuters) — Portugal today was faced with a growing storm of criticism over its campaign to crush the revolt in Angola.

Mrs. latest criticism came Thursday in a statement from the executive committee of the World Council of Churches.

The statement, one of the strongest expressed by the committee, called on the Portuguese government "to refrain from deliberate action involving the death and maiming of thousands of Africans in Angola."

The statement was published as Britain demanded that the British government express its opposition to the Portuguese policy of repression in the Portuguese West African territory.

Ban-the-Bomb Labor Group Routed in UK

By DOUG MARSHALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — Opposition Leader Hugh Gaitskell has put the labor movement's ban-the-bomb group to rout.

An eight - month campaign by left-wing leaders to wrest control of the floors of trade union shows in full public has resulted in a clear victory for Gaitskell's policies of multilateral disarmament.

Eight months ago, those backing the left-wing movement favoring unilateralism and controlling at the Labor party conference massed 407,000 votes against Gaitskell and started what many saw as a bid to take over the party.

But now the engineers, shopworkers, builders, foundrymen, locomotive men and vehicle builders have swung back to Gaitskell's side. Today his majority against unilateralists would be at least 2,000,000 votes.

PERSONAL TRIUMPH

Gaitskell's victory is a personal triumph. He has won high praise from newspapers of all political creeds. It was "a display of courage and integrity that we do not have the pleasure of seeing every day in politics," wrote a Times columnist.

However, much of the credit should go to the trade union organizers of the campaign for democratic decision.

The campaign was started after last year's disastrous conference at Scarborough when the majority's voice had been drowned out by an active and articulate minority.

OPERATE IN 'CELLS'

Soon they were publishing a magazine, distributing pamphlets, writing clever, persuasive letters and forming a small army of field workers in the most constituency parties and trade union branches.

With the counter - revolution now in full defeat, the campaign has more than 3,000 supporters operating in small and large "cells." Zero hour they seem to be getting the upper hand.

Gaitskell's victory means the supporters of unilateral disarmament and strict neutrality have been handed their first major political defeat.

Gaitskell's success seems to confirm what many observers here have long maintained: The disarmament movement by no means enjoys the support of the vast majority of Britons.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Toxins this week: New pills for diarrhoea, brain radios and ant buttons.

FRIENDLY GERMS

Pills containing billions of dried but still-living bacteria back promising new hope in diarrhoea caused by virus infections or by antibiotics.

The pills supply new colonies of lactobacillus acidophilus, a friendly germ normally existing in the human intestine. Through competition, they help keep down the numbers of other germs which can cause illness if they become too prevalent. Some germs which cause diarrhoea knock down the population of lactobacilli. The pills are designed to restore the balance, two Chicago physicians report.

BRAIN RADIOS

A tiny radio transmitter is surviving and broadcasting the brain waves of a cat to a recorder 100 feet away.

Placed under the skin of the animal's head, the thumbnail-size radio permits free, normal movements, with no interference or stress from electrodes placed in the head with their wires dangling off to the recorder.

Tulane University researchers who developed the device say it will be useful in studying reactions of human mental patients. And, they said, the transmitter could be designed to send electrical impulses into the brain to burn out selected nerve centres and thus kill severe pain of cancer or other diseases.

It could also be used to record brain waves of birds, swimming in a m a z e and free-climbing animals.

ANT BUTTONS

Ants are attracted by the sweet taste of poisons distributed about in the form of buttons, or cups.

But so are young children, and household pets. Connecticut's poison information centre tells of five babies and young children poisoned by them in a single month, and urges parents to take precautions.

EAR TEST

A small patch of roll-your-own cigaret paper serves well to pinpoint a diseased eardrum as a cause of deafness.

If the eardrum is at fault, the patient hears better. And he learns how much better he could hear by having the eardrum repaired surgically.

If the tough, thin paper doesn't help, then it's clear the trouble lies elsewhere. A neat part of the test, report University of Michigan specialists, is that the paper costs only about one-tenth of a cent.

Bats Useful, Should Not Be Killed

"Bats are useful," cautions the message. "They live entirely on insects. Ordinarily they should not be killed or molested. "But be careful in handling them. Like other furred animals they may carry rabies. Handle them only with gloves to avoid being bitten. The short teeth cannot penetrate an ordinary glove.

"If a bat bites without provocation, try to get the bat to the state public health laboratory for examination and see a physician about anti-rabies treatment."

The two professors, Dr. Harold B. Hitchcock and Dr. Wayne H. Davis, are old hands at such investigations. Both had had studied bats before the creatures' rabies-carrying role was discovered.

In the summer, say the professors, the little brown bat uses attics and other hot, dark retreats for maternity rooms.

During the colder months they conserve energy by hibernating in caves. One Vermont cave apparently serves as a motel. Bats stop for a night or two, then move on. Thousands of these "guests" have departed with the summer heat, thanks to the activity of Dr. Hitchcock and Dr. Davis.

The way you can help? Mail to Washington either bands or numbers copied from them. And send to Dr. Hitchcock or Dr. Davis at Middlebury College, Middlebury, Vermont. Information you have on the location of colonies of bats in your neighborhood.

For many years Prof. Hitchcock has banded hibernating bats in the Belleville area. Numbers copied from report to Washington or to the Canadian Wildlife Service, Ottawa.

Roman Catholic Church Co-operates With States Under Communist Control

By ALAN DUCKETT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — The Roman Catholic church usually finds it to the interests to cooperate with the state in Communist-dominated countries and in situations such as that now developing in Cuba, says Rev. Lionel Stanford.

"But," Father Stanford adds, "the church will never compromise on principle."

Professor of theology at the Jesuit order's Loyola College here, the priest discussed in an interview the situation in Communist-dominated countries where the church is still functioning, although on a restricted basis. He said the same potential situation appears to exist in Cuba.

Asked to explain what is meant by "controlled priesthood," he said:

"It is the interests of the church to make the best of a bad situation. It is better to have priests under government control in certain situations than to have no priests at all."

Controlled priesthood existed in many countries.

"In Mexico, for example, priests are not allowed to appear on the streets in clerical garb nor are they permitted to hang crucifixes in public places.

"Of course, this does not involve a compromise of principle. Priests are still allowed to fulfil the duties of their ministry."

NO SET RULES

There was no defined Catholic doctrine of controlled priesthood. The church always tried to make the best arrangement it could with any government so that it could continue its work.

"The post - confiskation from the Mass of a Pope asks the Lord to guide thy church-which Thou hast nourished with heavenly food-that under clemency thy mighty sway she may ever enjoy freedom and remain steadfast in the fulness of her faith'.

"However, rather than deprive the people of a state of all the administrations of the clergy, she may tolerate some curtailment of her freedom.

"When we speak of 'controlled clergy' we have in mind a restriction of the freedom of the church in the performance of its ministry. But freedom, valuable and necessary as it is for human existence, is not an end in itself.

"Freedom always is concerned with choice, and choice is of the means, not the end as such. . . . And bringing souls to God is more important than freedom of the clergy, though the latter is normally necessary for the former, just as medicine is often necessary for the maintenance of good health.

"But just as a sick man in prison settles for half the amount of medicine he should have instead of none at all; so, under a dictatorship, the church may settle for half the freedom she possessed before it had the only alternative is total exclusion from the country. . . .

"If the price of being permitted to exist in any country is compromise in faith or morals, however, it is too high and the church will never pay it."

CUBAN DECREE

Fidel Castro May 1 forecast a Cuban government decree cancelling the residence permits of foreign priests—most of them Spanish but including at least 100 Canadians. Early in May 61 Canadian priests and nuns were flown back to Canada.

Bishop Hermann McKinnon of Regina, chairman of the historical department at Loyola, said the Concordat mentioned Father has had to reach agreement with various states.

He mentioned the Concordat of Worms in 1122, the Constitution of Clarendon in 1164, the Concordat of 1515 with France, the Concordat of 1801 between Napoleon and Pope Pius VII, the 1855 Concordat with Austria, the Concordat with Spain in 1851, the Lateran Pact in 1929 with Italy, and the Concordat with Adolf Hitler in 1933.

He cited the present situation in Communist China as another example of controlled priesthood.

In the mid-1950s Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski made what Father McKinnon described as "sort of gentleman's agreement" with Communist Premier Gomulka under which the church would not oppose Communist candidates in an election at that time.

In return, Father MacKinnon said, Gomulka promised the church freedom in episcopal elections and the right to have religious teaching in schools. The agreement was recently renewed.

NEVER FLY A KITE OR AN AIR-BORNE MODEL NEAR HYDRO LINES

Hydro lines carry electricity at extremely high voltages . . . up to two thousand times greater than the voltages used in the home. Any model plane or kite enthusiast holding a wire, wire-reinforced string or even a wet string that touches a hydro line can suffer serious injury or loss of life. The danger is increased if part of the air-borne object is made of metal.
REMEMBER these safety rules:
1. Always keep to the wide-open spaces . . . well away from hydro lines and electrical apparatus. Warn others to do so.
2. Do not use wire or wire-reinforced string.
3. Never try to recover a model or kite that is caught on hydro lines, towers or other electrical apparatus.
PARENTS—Safety education begins at home. Be sure your children follow the above safety rules.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Shades of Avery Brundage!

The purists of the International Olympics Committee are going to put bridgework in the mouth of the farcical "amateur oath." If they prove biting molars they may gouge into Canadian hockey participation, in fact the entire Olympics set-up.

Who are they kidding? There hasn't been a letter-to-the-word "amateur" in the Olympics since Cleethenes, Lycurgus and Iphitus handed out as golden laurel wreath worth $100 Greek to the best discus thrower in the opening Games around 776 B.C.

The IOC met in Athens, Greece, the other day and decided to "tighten on the Olympics amateur oath by requiring that an amateur must have never received any payment for taking part in any sports contest".

Those loud guffaws they heard emanating from the vicinity of Mount Olympus were the nostalgic rumblings of that old chappie Zeus, president of the Olympic Gods Association and boss-man of the games. He heard a similar yelp back in 146 B.C. when the Roman professors took over the Greek department, went on tours and took gate and gifts as part of Olympics rewards.

If amateurism is defined by the IOC does not include gifts, "training expenses, travelling expenses, etc., then it was just as phony in the good old days of Zeus and the Greeks and Romans as it is today.

The Russians, Czechs and other present-day Iron Curtain countries apparently tore a leaf from the book of the Zeus Olympics for the boys of those days were handpicked by cities and towns and trained at the public expense.

Until the Romans took over, the Greeks had a good time running their own Olympics. The only oath they took was they would abide by the judges' decisions, upset the local Brundages, and make no protest. The judges swore they would be fair while Zeus, with his god buddies high on Olympus cheered "You'd better do, remembered what happened to Joe Louis."

Like all champions were the noble-haired boys. After finishing Zeus for real and exposing the fact they had secretly chariot fare from where they lived to the foot of Mount Olympus where the games were held, they returned home preceded by a large procession of the local Rooster Club and other taxpayers.

Here the winner was wined and dined at public expense. Gifts were forced on him. He was exempted from all taxation. As a climax he was permitted to build a monument to himself and have a statue of his ho chese. Who cared if the mill-rats was set up a few notches. If he lacked funds the wealthy townsmen subscribed whatever amount was needed.

So the Greeks boasted in their Olympic Games and "amateur" glory until the Romans came along and made Grecian carnals, took over the pool-rooms and restaurants and put the boys under protective custody.

The Romans figured the Olympics was a pretty fair racket as it wasn't long before they entered the games and proved as adept as the Greeks.

Then it happened. The Greeks charged the Romans, who were playing the Greek version of the Games, with professionalism. They said they were getting chariot expenses, free pizza pies, proceeds of new togas and sandals and all the chianti and olive oil they could drink.

The Romans stood so much. Then when a new amateur ruling was brought in, the Romans said that they never received payment for taking part in any sports competition (that has a familiar ring), they went on a rampage.

They set fire to Olympics buildings, and wrecked everything in sight in and around the stadium. While the dust had settled and the empties counted, Emperor Theodosius of Rome fired the whole works. He called the Games off, slapping an extra few hundred to the coffers of Zeus, and that ended the Olympiads. It was 393 A.D.

They remained dormant until 1892 when Baron Pierre de Coubertin of France attempted a revival. However it was not until 1896 that the first of the modern Olympics took place.

Is that a bunch of dead Indians back there in third base in the American League race?

After winning 10 in a row and 13 of 15 for a 1½ - game lead, Cleveland has lost nine of 12 in little more than a week. And the Tribe's once sturdy pitching staff suddenly has given up 41 runs in three games.

First - place Detroit Tigers laid it to them Friday night, romping off with a 15-7 victory in the opener of a four - game set at Cleveland and dropping the Indians four games behind with their fifth straight defeat.

The Tigers walloped four home runs among 15 hits and padded their lead to two games over New York when Minnesota Twins, pitching Camilo Pascual's six - hit pitching with Harmon Killebrew's four RBI in Sam Mele's debut as manager, defeated the Yankees 6-0.

Boston Red Sox beat Kansas City Athletics and bonus beauty Lew Krausse 5-4, Baltimore Orioles defeated Los Angeles 5-0 and Chicago White Sox nipped Washington Senators 4-3 for their 14th victory in 15 games.

Billy Hoeft, Terry Calavito and Dick McAuliffe hit the homers for the Tigers with Brirton belting four and Calavito four runs off loser Jim Perry (6-5). Southpaw Don Mossi, whose lone defeat was by Cleveland, won his eighth, but needed relief help after tag up five home runs — all solo shots. Chuck Cottier hit two and Tito Francona, Bubba Phillips and Johnny Romano each cracked one.

WIN-STREAK ENDED

While the Tigers were packing away their eighth victory in 10 games, the Yankees' winning streak ended at three with their second consecutive defeat in the year. Pascual (5-9), who had lost six in a row, walked one, struck out eight and held home run leader Roger Maris hitless.

Killebrew banged a pair of run-scoring singles and his 20th home run, a two - run shot off loser Bob Turley (3-4).

Krausse (1-1), the $125,000 bonus righthander who beat Los Angeles 4-0 with a three - hitter a week ago, ran his shutout string through 15 innings and blanked the Red Sox on two hits until Gary Geiger unloaded a three - run homer in the seventh. The 18 - year - old rookie allowed three - hits in his seven frames. He gave up eight walks, but struck out seven and twice worked out of bases - loaded jams.

Pete Runnels's two - run homer, off reliever Ryne Hacker saved the decision for Ray Herbert (6-) as Washington suffered its seventh straight defeat.

A two - run homer by Gus Triandos in the fourth inning nailed it for the Orioles who blew a 4-0 lead. Jim Gentile, winning pitcher Steve Barber (8-8) and Jackie Brandt also homered for Baltimore. Steve Bilko got off a solo drive, capping a five - run third inning, for the Angels, who have lost after relieving starter Ted Bowsfield of Penticton, B.C. Bowsfield was taken out for pinch - hitter Billy Moran, just up from Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, in the third inning.

Bowsfield was combed for four hits and four earned runs before Moran grounded out. He walked two and struck out one.

Moran walked in his one appearance.

Knudson Five Strokes Up

By AL MAKELY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ISLINGTON, Ont. (CP) — It was generally conceded among spectators and officials at the Islington Golf Club today that unless George Knudson breaks a vital bone in his body he will win the second Ontario open golf championship.

Knudson, defending champion, took a five-stroke lead over his nearest rival, Terry Shocklin, using a 68 on a rain-soft course. The 13-hole score, with his record - breaking 64 of Thursday, gave him a 132 against fellow-Montrealer Bob Ross of Toronto, who put together rounds of 69 and 68 for 137.

The final 36 holes were to be played today.

If he can hold the tight pace he has set for himself he may well top last year's performance when he won the Open at Cherry Hill with 275—18 under par—at Islington for the 72-hole event will be 288, as it was last year.

Knudson and Rose were not the only players among the starting field of 137 to shoot sub-70 golf Friday.

In with a 69 was Rudy Horvath of Windsor, another professional, for a total of 139 and a part of the two-way tie for third place at the half - way mark.

The other part went to amateur Gery Cowan of Kitchener, whose scores of 70-69 paralleled those of Horvath.

Gordon DeLatt, left - handed professional from Weston, Ont., was alone in the rankings with 141. Another sub-70 shooter, 69 was coupled with a par 72 by Ken Jacobs, Toronto.

The best score of the day was turned in by a slight 19-year-old from Toronto, amateur Brian Wilcox, present Canadian junior champion. The youth ticked during the tricky 18 holes for a bolt 68—matching the course record. A golfer for the past two years, he was in the limelight for several hours as his 142 total held for first place in 36-hole scores.

THEN OTHERS CAUGHT UP

The veteran golfers teed off two and three hours after Wilcox, however, and his spot in the lead lasted about the same length of time.

Ken Jacobs, Toronto professional, coupled rounds of 69-68 to share the 142 position with Wilcox. Alvie Thompson and Murray Tucker of Toronto.

Three other amateurs also hit 142. Dave Keeling ran in from Bay with 69-72, Phil Brownlee of Toronto with 70-72 and veteran Nick Weslock of Port Colborne with 68-74.

Other professionals were at 143. They were Moe Norman of Stouffville, Ross Dowzwell of Sarnia and Gordon Brydon of Port Credit.

A pair of 81 players were set eligible to take part in the final 36 holes today. The cut - off score was set at 150 and tied for the first-half total.

ORONO (CP)—Stirling Moss of Britain is a heavy favorite today to take the winner's share of $10,000 prize money in Canada's first international sports car race.

It's not an unfamiliar position for the little Englishman, perhaps the world's greatest living race driver. If the car doesn't break — and it often does with Moss—he wins.

In practice Friday he lowered by six seconds the lap record for the treacherous 2.5 - mile road course by bowling around in 1:51.5. And this was on a course made greasy by rain and without using the fifth and highest gear of his Lotus XIX.

The major battle in the 200 - mile race boughs for the best of 100 miles each, is expected to be for second and third spot.

In practice, bearded Joe Bonnier of Sweden whipped his factory Porsche RS61 around in 1:43 and Belgium's Peter Gregebehn was breathing down his neck in another RS61 and only one-tenth of a second slower.

Another major threat is Ludwig Heimrath of Toronto in a Porsche RS60, until Moss came along the record-holder of the new STARGO circuit. He was fast in practice, but had difficulty on wet corners.

STATE SENATOR IN

Another RS61 with winning ideas has Michigan State Senator Thos Payne of Ypsilanti in the cockpit.

Moss' chief threat, another Lotus XIX driven by Peter Ryan of Mont Tremblant, Que., was withdrawn. He said he was afraid the Sports Car Club of America — which outlawed the race—would withdraw his U.S. amateur licence.

Practice sessions produced no two-lap boughs for the 22 competing drivers. Richard Austin of Toronto was taken to hospital unconscious with head chest and leg injuries after his AC Ace spun and flipped three times.

Other cars spun, but there were no injuries.

"It's a bloody tricky track," said Moss (right) and I had in some of its design.

Twins Fire Cookie, Mele in

Owner Cal Griffith, announced the switchover at a news conference. The 39-year-old Mele took over for the start of New York Yankees' series at Metropolitan Stadium Friday night.

It was the second firing in one week in the American League. Joe Gordon got the gate from Kansas City Athletics, who are one notch above the Twins.

The abrupt firing of Lavagetto, 46, came after he had failed to get the Twins back on the winning track that surprised other American League clubs at the beginning of the season.

From an initial 5-1 won-lost record in the East, the former Washington Senators ers skidded into a prolonged slump and disappointed the home crowds that kept flocking to the stadium. They've lost 27 of their last 34 games and once had a losing streak of 13 in a row.

Ottawa Schoolboy Runs 100 In 9.6

By NEVILLE HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. LAMBERT, Que., (CP) — One Dominion open record was tied, two Quebec provincial open records were broken and another Quebec provincial record was tied Friday at the first day of the Canadian senior track and field championships.

His heart-bursting sprint tied the record held jointly by Hamish Jerome, Lynn Eves and Mike Agostino of Vancouver; L. Miller and Bert Pearson of Hamilton and Stan Levenson of Toronto.

British athletes, David Harrison and John Parker, competing for the combined Oxford-Cambridge track team each established a Quebec provincial record.

Harrison won the shot put with a best of 53 feet 10 inches-half inches, bettering the previous mark of 50 feet five and one inches.

BREAK RECORD

Parker and team mate Michael Robinson broke the long standing record for Quebec in the 120 - yard high hurdles. Parker covered the race, finishing fashion in 14.5 seconds and Robinson was clocked in 14.6 seconds flat. The previous record was 15.2 seconds.

Gillian Bastein Harding of Montreal, mother of a two-year-old girl, broke the Quebec provincial open record in the 100-yard dash with her 11 second sprint.

Fisher - Smith's victory was undoubtedly the highlight of the 18 events run off Friday. He brought the 2,200 screaming fans to their feet in his neck and neck battle with Jim Allen of London, Ont.

Officials disagreed on the outcome of the race, went into conference and then awarded the Ridgemont High School boy the win.

Nineteen - year - old Allen crossed the line in 9.2 seconds. He plans to go to University of Western Michigan next year on a sports scholarship.

The remaining events which have drawn a field of 225 athletes—195 men and 42 women from Canada, Great Britain and the United States—will be run here today. The meet will be carried coast to coast on CBC television for one hour this afternoon starting at 2.30 EST.

Orville Turney, Toronto, won the six - mile run in a slow 32:46.5.

Britain's John Boulter - won the mile run in four minutes, 12 and 5/10ths seconds. Bert and one-tenths of a second off the provincial open mark.

Dave Dorman of Smiths Falls jumped six feet one and one-half inches to win the high jump. The strapping 18 - year-old took a shot at his own Quebec provincial open record of six feet three and one-quarter inches, but missed.

The 'Bulldog' Goes Berserk

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

The berserk "bulldog" bashed, battered and bulled his way to a five-minute main-bout victory.

"Bulldog" Brower—smashed, crashed and mashed Farmer Boy Townsend to the mat twice in five minutes of the roughest wrestling this reporter has ever seen.

He followed him outside the ring, smashed him to the floor, thumped, gouged and punched him before the terrible back-breaker ended the one-sided battle.

The Farmer Boy never had a chance. He never laid a hand on the "Dog." The snarling Brower screamed his anger. "Bring him on," he roared.

He continued his assault after the second fall. Referee Sunny Doolan called for wrestling help. Five of them rushed to the rescue. It took that many to extricate the ring they went down under the sledge-hammer fist of the "Bulldog."

The battle continued outside the ring. Finally the Bulldog was subdued and carried, hauled and manhandled to the dressing room.

They say they're going to match him with a Sherman tank or a company of Marines next week.

Brower, 275 pounds, is the first one-man army ever seen in the wrestling ring here. He shook five wrestlers off his back like a dog shaking water. He is Mr. Mayhem in person.

Despite this, Tony Marino and Steve Sosbaisky almost stole the show against Man Mountain Campbell and Stan Stasiak in one of the best tag-team bouts seen in this city.

The agile Marino and Geohagen had the crowd on seat-edge during the fine gymnastics Marino's bareback swing had 'em in stitches and Stasiak in a menacing turmoil. The bout ended in a time-limit draw but they can bring this act back anytime. It could have caused his death at any time.

He could have died "just sitting in the stands and cheering his ball team," the pathologist declared.

The weak artery could even have given way in his sleep and killed the patient.

Dr. Llepa said the fact that the boy was but in his ball was just a "tragic coincidence." Bursting of the artery and the subsequent clotting of blood-stagnation was a "fantastic coincidence."

Dr. Llepa could find no evidence that injuries caused by the blow were the direct cause of death. There was no sign the brain caused any injury as a result of the blow from the ball.

The excitement caused by the accident could, however, have been the cause of death.

Thrown Ball Not Cause Of Death

OTTAWA (CP)—George Munroch, 10, who died Thursday night after being hit by a tossed ball in a little league warmup could have died just as easily while sitting in the stands.

That was the opinion Friday of Civic Hospital pathologist Dr. Egles Llepa after performing an autopsy on the boy who became the first fatality in the 10 years of the little league in Canada.

Dr. Llepa found the boy had an abnormally weak brain artery—a congenital defect that could have caused his death at any time.

He could have died "just sitting in the stands and cheering his ball team," the pathologist declared.

The weak artery could even have given way in his sleep and killed the patient.

Dr. Llepa said the fact that the boy was but in his ball was just a "tragic coincidence." Bursting of the artery and the subsequent clotting of blood-stagnation was a "fantastic coincidence."

Dr. Llepa could find no evidence that injuries caused by the blow were the direct cause of death. There was no sign the brain caused any injury as a result of the blow from the ball.

The excitement caused by the accident could, however, have been the cause of death.

Two Bonus Babies in Family?

They recently beat a path to the front door when 18-year - old Rob Krausse Jr. got his high school diploma. Krausse also brought along their biggest bonus check — $125,000—and signed him. The 6 ft. 1 inch, Krausse startled the baseball world by pitching a three-hit, 4-0 shutout over Los Angeles Angels in his pro baseball debut.

Coming up is 15 - year - old brother David, who will be a high - school junior next year. David, already has pitched five no - hit games in a league for players 13 to 15 years old.

Rider Stars Holdouts

What Price Glory?

OTTAWA (CP) — Ottawa Rough Riders are learning the price of championship.

Halback Ron Stewart, who played a big part last year in the Rider capture of the Grey Cup, was reported Friday to be holding out for more money before rejoining the club.

Defensive end Ron Bruce, who had five standout seasons with the Ottawa team before it fin-ally won the national, announced he is quitting the game.

Stewart, the Queen's University graduate who starred in rushing and scoring records last year, checked out of an Ottawa hotel early Friday and presumably headed home to Toronto.

"He's certainly asking for a good raise," said coach Frank Clair. But he indicated Stewart still isn't satisfied. No dollar figures were mentioned.

Meanwhile, three other players on last year's team have yet to sign. One of them is defensive captain Gary Schneider, a college-team colleague of Stewart. They could not name the other two.

"But they're not holdouts," Clair said. The team's "signing process has been very normal—better than last year."

LEAVE ON HOLIDAY

Bruce, another Queen's product who joined Rough Riders in 1956, had club president Barry O'Brien Thursday night about his decision to quit and then left the city on a holiday.

He said he wants to establish himself as an insurance salesman.

Bruce was a Big Four all-star last season. A knee injury kept him out for two games last year.

"I do not wish to risk permanent injury which would prevent me from skiing, golfing, hunting, and curling and other active sports that I enjoy so much."

Meanwhile, the club announced the return of defensive half Ted Smale and centre Ron Howell.

Also signed was Ed Vernes, offensive and defensive halfback formerly of Sarnia Golden Bears.

Leafs Edge Jersey 4-2 Jets Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Remember the old story about the Minnesota farmhand who gave a traveller directions by pointing with his plow in one hand?

They'll be telling the likes of it about Don Mincher, the big first baseman, if he continues the home run outbursts that have marked his progress in the International League since he came down to Buffalo Bisons from Minnesota Twins early this month.

Mincher—an Alabama boy, to keep the records straight—hit three home runs in one game for the second time within 10 days as the Bisons split a doubleheader with Charleston Marlins Friday night. The previous occasion was June 13, when he hit three and drove in seven runs against Jersey City.

Buffalo won the second game 9-3 after Charleston had taken the opener 6-5 and, as a result, the second-place Marlins maintained their two and one-half game lead over the Bisons.

The first-place Columbus Jets increased their lead over Charleston to two full games by defeating Rochester Red Wings Chiefs 5-4 and 2-1. Third-place Richmond Virginians, led by Johnny Kucks, former New York Yankees pitcher, hurled five-hit ball for his fourth straight victory. Steve Demeter's one - run homer was the big blow as Toronto Maple Leafs turned back Jersey City Jerseys 4-2.

WAS 4-FOR-4

Mincher, who became only the fifth man in IL history to hit three homers twice in one season, was the only Bison batter driving in four runs and scoring three himself. Johnny Glenn, with two on, and Bob Herrera carried the Marlins to victory in the nightcap. Charleston second baseman Harry Watts suffered a broken left arm in the opener when hit by Chuck Hickerts' pitch.

Mincher's homers, No. 10 and 5-4 in the first game. The Jets tied it with two runs in the third and won in the sixth when a walk, John Sevcik's single and Ron Gray's single produced two runs after Tacks Molinaro scored in the winning Columbus run in the ninth inning of the night-cap after the Jets had been blanked on three hits by Fritz Brickell who contributed to the first Leaf run.

Demeter's homer with two aboard in the sixth was one of three Toronto hits off Jersey starter Tom Monroe. Jerry Snow was a double by Fritz Brickell while contributed to the first Leaf run.

Dodgers Lose, Braves Stopped

Reds Open 3-Game Lead

By ED WILES
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cincinnati Reds began to look as though they mean to tear the National League race wide open, barging into a three-game lead behind a bunch of cool rookies in the ballpark and the hot bats of Frank Robinson and Gene Freese.

They packed away that three-game bulge by breaking a ninth - inning tie for a 5-4 victory over Los Angeles Friday night in the opener of a three-game series with the second-place Dodgers.

Robinson's two - run homer had tied it in the sixth. Then Freese doubled and scored on Eddie Kasko's bases - loaded single in the ninth after relievers Ron Nunn and Jim Brosnan had blanked the Dodgers on three hits over the last 2 2-3 innings.

It was the ninth victory in 10 games for the Reds. Robinson has batted .500 in that span, driving in 15 runs, while Freese has batted .391 with seven. Jim Brosnan collected his second decision 'in the Reds' spurt, giving the bullpen ace credit for on top of two saves in those nine ballgames.

GIANTS SKIDDING

Third - place San Francisco Giants tumbled five games behind with a 10-5 thumping of Cardinals at St. Louis, while Philadelphia Phillies knocked off fourth - place Pittsburgh 9-5. Cubs and Chicago White Sox stopped fifth-place Milwaukee Braves 5-3.

The Reds, who have come from behind in five of their last 6 nine victories, bounced back twice in this one. They got a run fourth and a two - run homer by Catcher Bob Purkey. Dryadale. Angels starter, Jim O'Toole in a three-run sixth inning, walked Purkey, Davis's homer. Ron Perranoski (3-2) lost, giving up Freese's double in the ninth after two walks to pinch - hitters Jerry Lynch and Jerry Zimmerman. Nunn out followed before Kasko broke it up with his single, off Larry Sherry.

Stan Musial drove in seven Cards with two homers, one a grand - slam, as the Cards handed relief ace Stu Miller his first loss in 7 1-3 innings. Lindy handed Craig Anderson won with 3 2-3 innings of three - hit shutout relief in his first major league game.

The Cubs cut Milwaukee's winning streak at four, breaking Juan Marichal's 13 - inning duel with Bob Will's pinch single and sacrifice fly out. Southpaw rookie Jack Curtis (3-2) was put away up home runs by Frank Thomas' three-run homer and Ken Hubbs' solo blast in the seventh. The loser was left by Bob Hendley (1-0) with first major league appearance.

Dick Stuart's three 11-2 load against the Phils, who junked their losing streak at seven by scoring four runs in the eighth and six in the ninth. Four of the Phils' losing pitchers were starred, with the winner scoring on an error by Bob Skinner in the 13th. Jim Bunning (4-3) got the win.

DEL RICE HURT

January Palmer Top Western

A sloppy combination of rain, 30-mile wind gusts and chilling temperatures turned the Blythefield Country Club course into a nerve-wracking test for the 140 golfers.

Palmer, who shared the first-day lead at 68 with Al Geiberger, settled for 70 Friday. He and January tied with 135s after 36 holes.

"It was cold, wet and miserable out there and my putting was off," said Palmer, pro golf's No. 2 money winner of this year.

Geiberger had a disastrous 76 Friday.

January recovered after a shaky first hole and took only 29 putts on the second. One was a 50-foot birdie putt on the 12th. He finished the round with a 68.

Fred (Butch) Baird thrilled the 19th hole gallery when he sank in a 150-yard pitch shot for an eagle three, and had a 67 to move him a 136 total for third place.

SOARS TO 74

Sam Snead's day was typical of Snead's. He had a brilliant opening day 66 but soared to 74 twice in this round to come up green from 10 feet out of the ninth.

The leading of Toronto had a one-over-par 72 to go with his first-round 67 for a 139. Bob Rosburg of Windsor, Ont., shot a 74 for a 140 total, and Al Johnny Morrison of Montreal finished with a 76 for a 151.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP)—Feeding canned milk from a nipped pop bottle to a caribou calf in the bush or gingerly experimenting with British Columbia salmon in a remote inland river are all part of a day's work for a Newfoundland wildlife biologist.

Teams of foresters and biologists from the provincial resources department now are in the interior teaching new-born calves to drink canned milk.

The calves, housed in pens, will eventually be airlifted to the Salmonier Line, near here, for close scrutiny. Tom Bergerud, the province's chief biologist who is heading the program, says the plan is to study the effects of controlled feeding of the caribou from calf stage to adulthood.

While the calves are being removed from the herds, the females and stags are being tagged. They're "shot" with a sleep-inducing anaesthetic needle fired from a shotgun. While the animals sleep, the tag is applied to its back for easy spotting from the air.

The scientific teams are also continuing investigations of a mysterious disease that occurs every few years. It wiped out 90 per cent of Newfoundland's caribou calves in 1957.

Later in the summer other teams will take the first checks on an experiment begun two years ago to determine whether B.C. salmon can survive in Newfoundland waters.

Some 250,000 eggs were released in North Harbor River on St. Mary's Bay on the southeast coast.

B.C. salmon eggs were released on the St. John River in New Brunswick in the early 1950s but few survived.

The project is part of the program to meet the threat to the wildlife population of civilization.

In sparsely settled but fast-developing Labrador, for example, the trout and land-locked salmon are in danger of serious depletion.

Resources Minister W. J. Keough has announced plans to stop Canadian mainland and American anglers from "airlifting hundreds of pounds of game fish every year out of Labrador in private aircraft."

He proposes to limit the number that may fish any Labrador water.

James Garner Looks Back On Most Successful Year

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This is the 33rd year of James Garner's life — and the first one away from the Brett Maverick character that made him one of TV's most famous stars.

What kind of a year was it? "Great," answers the Oklahoman. "I made more money this year than in the previous 32 years combined — and my golf game improved because I was able to play more than I ever had."

Garner bucked Warner Bros. studio in a breach-of-contract suit—and won. It was the first time that it had happened since 1936 when Olivia de Havilland got out of her contract with the Warner lot.

"It's more than mere coincidence that I have the same agent and lawyer that Olivia had in 1936," says Garner.

Garner spent much of the year on personal appearances at fabulous fees—sometimes as high as $10,000 per.

He has signed for two movies at $150,000 apiece. Currently he is co-starring with Audrey Hepburn and Shirley Maclaine in William Wyler's "Infamous."

Next he goes with Kim Novak and Tony Randall in Boys Night Out.

And it looks as if he'll collect residuals from Warners on his old Maverick shows.

Present plans call for only 13 new Mavericks to be made for next season with Jack Kelly as star. The rest of the season then will be reruns with Garner and Kelly.

So, be very careful not to fool your youngster in any way, even for fun, or you confuse this wonderful mind. Answer his or her questions frankly. Campaigning is a natural art in this horoscope. A fine future here!

By CARROLL RICHTER,
GENERAL LUMINARIES:—
This is your day to be very direct and outspoken in stating what you want and just how you would like to have it. Be philosophical in spirit, too.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Every opportunity is yours now to impress your competition with your talents and they will then co-operate with you so that they're real success all around. Your associates will also give you wonderful support. GROW.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) Since the labors at hand really interest you now, you will be able to handle them most efficiently. However, don't neglect clearing your desk, pulling files in order, and getting wardrobe in better condition this P.M. Retire early.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Fine day to ride favorite hobbies and have a wonderful time. However, first get important work done, or see those people who have it in their power to help you advance in your career, even if it means bought some private backing.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) It is important that you now show true affection and loyalty for family and relatives so that you come to a deeper understanding and reach more harmonious relations. Then tonight you can entertain at home in a charming fashion.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) If you stop deliberating so much and quickly get busy at the calls and duties awaiting you, you can accomplish a very great deal today. P.M. Get together with congenials for a lot of fun.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Concentrate upon new ways to increase income so that you can enjoy some special luxuries. However, first get the advice you need from banking institutions and other authorities on such matters. Then full speed ahead!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If you take time to improve health and appearance in A.M., you can then go about socially or in business and get the results you desire by using direct approach and acting in a positive manner. P.M. Get personal affairs ameliorated.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good day for investigating into what has been puzzling you. Get to the bottom of things. Then in P.M. you are in a position to impress higher-ups with your fine ability to tackle big jobs and get them completed, but you must be secretive.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't be offended when good friends honestly tell you what you must do to advance more quickly - constructive criticism is better than gold. Follow suggestions wisely. P.M. Fine for getting about socially and also producing results.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) It behooves you to pay less attention to personal desires and recreation and dwell more on the practical things of life so that you become a pillar of the community. You'll accomplish far greater success than is now yours. WORK.

If your child is born today there will be a great and imaginative mind in this chart, plus the desire to make a mark for himself, or herself, which is an unbeatable combination. However, you must early teach to speak quietly and not get overly excited. Then there can be great success throughout life, particularly in foreign countries, or dealing with foreign securities, pioneering, gold mining and the like.

tariff increases and higher spending.

The only other word to come this week from the stone-walled central bank head office, one block west of Parliament Hill, was a statement by the bank dismissing the idea that Mr. Coyne might voluntarily resign without waiting for Parliament to fire him.

The governor has declined to make any comment on the budget.

Others, however, have made numerous comments about him. Mr. Fleming's budget speech declared: "This budget and Mr. Coyne were simply not compatible."

The minister took the unusual step of devoting a 1,500 - word section of his speech, near the conclusion, to argue that the governor's views were in "fundamental conflict" with government policy.

POLICIES ATTACKED

Prime Minister Diefenbaker, in a nationally-televised broadcast Wednesday night, attacked Mr. Coyne's policies as "a block in the path of progress." He said that "civil servants . . . however exalted, are not above the elected representatives."

Opposition Leader Pearson said in a TV press conference Thursday night that Liberals is determined "to see that Mr. Coyne gets his day in court" and that all the facts are allowed to be brought out.

There was speculation that if the government doesn't provide for such a hearing in the Commons a banking and commerce committee, the Liberal majority in the senate may ensure a "day in court" in the Senate banking committee.

KOVACS OWES TAXES?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ted Cereal last liens against comedian Ernie Kovacs and his wife, entertainer Edie Adams, allege the couple owes $71,628 on income for 1959. The Bureau of Internal Revenue filed the liens Thursday.

Did you get a late start in the garden? You have plenty of company. Most growers did too. Agricultural representatives report that in many parts of the country growers are doubling the quantity of fertilizer applied to crops and reducing the number of seeds per acre. In this way they hope to counteract the late and unfavorable weather conditions.

This is a tip for the home gardener too. The liquid forms of liquid fertilizer for root and foliar feeding will give quicker results than granular forms and sludge type nutrients.

The sludge type fertilizers and pulverized animal manures release prolonged nutrition and at least 80 degrees soil temperatures to break down the solids into available plant food for the feeder roots.

Home growers are advised to start their spray, or dust program early. Black spot and many of the insect pests will not appear until later in the season but the spores and eggs are present in the soil, or on other plant material near by. Prevention is as apt to trees, zinnias and perennial phlox as roses. The best plants to fungi which will later spread to your roses. Blackspot and mildew are common examples. Spray soil and surrounding plants with an all purpose solution or dust every two weeks.

Aphis are all ready at work on roses and many other plants where tender new growth makes juicy forage for the green, black or red aphis.

Treat the ants to a dusting of six per cent sevidine. Look for their nests in the soil and in the grass near purpose solution or dust every two weeks.

Peonies will not bloom if the roots are planted too deep. The eyes should be covered with never be more than two inches below the soil surface. This is one of the greatest causes of the plants not flowering for several years. Planted just in good rich soil they will give a few blooms the first year, perhaps not quite true to color. The second year they will have a few more, better size and true color and will improve with age. This is one of the long lasting perennials for the border. One often hears of a plant 25 or more years old, still in good condition.

QUICK TIPS

Remove old and surplus wood from spring flowering shurbs as soon as the flowers fade. The wood that develops now is next year's flowering wood.

Lift and divide crowded lawn with end-o-weed to get rid of dandelions, plantain, wild carrot, chickweed, and other weeds use it on bent grass.

Late in June especially in July plant brussel sprouts, broccoli, and cauliflower for late harvesting and for freezing.

When the delphiniums have bloomed cut back the plants to the ground, feed and soak well with water. A new burst of growth will give you a second set of blooms in the fall.

Keep the suckers from around the lilacs and cut off dead flower heads. New lilac hybrids have few or no suckers.

Planning a month or two at the cottage? Take along boxes of well developed coleus, zinnias, petunias, salvia, ageratum, dwarf marigolds, ageratum and stocks. These will give quick color in any spot if kept well watered and give an application or two of liquid plant food.

Always release pressure from spray equipment before opening to refill or clean out.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Retired Rich Described Here As Uninteresting and a Waste

By THOMAS COLLINS

Retired people who have money and who read this will be quite certain it does not apply to them. People who are approaching retirement, with money enough for good living, will feel sure it'll not happen to them. However.

Here is what things are like for some men and their wives when they retire with money to spend. The information is based on a trip of more than 10,000 miles which I have just made among the country's best-dressed retired people.

1. Retired men who have nothing to do, and no dreams, no matter how much money they have are often unbearable to other people. They converse charmingly in the good hotels, on the jets and on shipboard. They are gracious to man and the ladies. But they have little to talk about except what happened back in 1946 in the company they were with, or how their son George told his boss last week what was wrong and tiresome fellow said to them this morning — and would you like to hear it?

2. Such men conduct themselves as a rule, with a degree of frugality. Though they travel first class and stay in the best hotels, they hoard their money and count their change — more so, for instance, than the man and wife who are retired on $250 a month but are willing to blow some of it in Miami Beach and live on vegetable soup for the next two weeks if they lose. They lay 15 cent bets. They attired man with money seems inclined to keep it.

OBJECTIONABLY PROUD

All retired men, but especially those with money, can be objectionably proud of small things. They will tell you their home is located on the finest mountain in Arizona, or on the loveliest street in Montreal, or that their grandchildren are making higher marks than any children in the whole folk. Va. schools: that their friends back home are worried because they have been away so long: that their dog pouts when they leave him.

4. Retired men with money are usually not too interested in how others got money or, less they at one time had qualities and abilities that could get a job done.

It is sad to see a dish-like of the life of many such 65. It is a tragedy to see a man of success wasting it away with martinis.

3. They seem to have vetoed tomorrow — what may happen in Washington next week, what Moscow may do next, how they will spend the hours of the next few days. These things do not seem to occupy their minds. Nor will they talk with you for long if you dwell on the future. They like yesterday better.

5. Retired men with money seldom talk about their money — how they have invested it or how they made it. Maybe this is why they are retired men with money. It is one of their virtues.

7. Such men, apart from being tiresome, are often not enough diamonds now to get the same attention.

— Retired men with money can probably be the greatest waste of human resources on earth. They don't seem to realize this. You see no signs that they are fighting it. They sit. They exercise good ma n n e r s. They drink. They indulge in what pleases the senses. And the e develop a real distaste for taking a stroll (which they may not like) or observing the beautiful scenery (which they may not think very beautiful) or meeting younger people and cheers grow weary of talking to them, or rather, of listening to them talk.

The front of all this is that these men are w a s t i n g their lives have something of value to waste. They would not be of much use to many anyway, unless they at one time had qualities and abilities that could get a job done.

Eight Of Ten Prisoners Still Loose In U.K.

Escape Organized To Use Men for Big Job

LONDON (CP) — At least eight of the 10 men who went over the wall of London's tough Wandsworth prison Saturday were still free early today.

The breakout—the largest in Britain this century—sparked a heat-wave sleepy London and set off a massive manhunt through the city.

One of the men was recaptured Saturday after leaving his leg during the bid for freedom. Unconfirmed reports said a second was picked up Sunday night in Liverpool, 200 miles north of London.

Two newspapers, The Daily Sketch and The Daily Mirror, say police believe the escape was organized from the outside by a man they call Mr. Big. He is thought to be the mastermind behind a number of recent robberies.

Key man among the escaped prisoners is 45-year-old George Madden, known as the master cracksers in the country. Several of the others are serving sentences for armed robbery.

THINK MAY BE GANG

Newspapers speculate the escape involved the use of a gang detailed to pull off a big robbery to finance it. It is thought original plans called for only six to make the break but the number was increased at the last minute.

Scotland Yard has thrown every available member of its crack flying squad into the hunt.

Police were questioning friends and relatives of the escaped men and combing London's underworld haunts. They have been warned that a rescue one of the prisoners may be armed.

The escape started with a mock fistfight in the prison's sackmaking shop. Prisoners who tried to break up the brawl were overpowered, bound and gagged. The prisoners then stepped to the outside wall, looking like a corduroy working party.

SCALED WALL

Using ropes and home-made grappling hooks they scaled the 20-foot wall and dropped down the other side. One man, Joseph Spriggs, 25, broke his leg in the fall.

Dragging travel with them, the prisoners battered down a section of wooden fence, made their way to a parked lorry, drove it to a waiting car. The car took off at high speed. Moments later another vehicle drew along side and the men transferred from one to it.

The prisoners are thought to have made for a central headquarters, changed their clothes and split up. They then headed for separate hideouts.

59 ACCIDENTAL DEATHS OCCUR OVER WEEKEND

27 Drownings Highest in Year

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Rivers, lakes and pools were almost as much an accidental death trap this weekend as the highways.

Of a national over-all total of 59 accidental deaths reported in a Canadian Press survey, 28 were traffic mishaps, 27 drownings, one a fire death and two deaths by accidental causes.

The provincial figures, counted between 6 p.m. local time Friday and Sunday midnight, with traffic fatalities and drowning bracketed, were: Ontario 19 (11,8); Ontario 18 (10,3); Alberta 7 (1,5); British Columbia 5 (4,1); Manitoba 4 (2,1); Saskatchewan 4 (0,4); Nova Scotia 3 (1,2); Newfoundland 1 (0,1); Prince Edward Island 1 (0,1); New Brunswick 0.

The fire death was in Quebec. A man was hit by a train in Manitoba, and there was one apparent unclassified death in Alberta.

The Ontario Dead:

SAY IMAM STEPS DOWN

BEIRUT (AP) — The ailing imam Ahmed of Yemen has reportedly given government of his medieval kingdom to his son, Crown Prince Mohammed al-Badr, Yemeni sources said Sunday. They said the 70-year-old monarch suffered in an attempted assassination late last March and weakened by disease has proved to be a serious residential palace.

Buffalo Police Hunt Tall Brunette They Think Drowned Boy, Aged 3

BUFFALO (AP) — Police pushed a round-the-clock search today for a slender, raincoat-clad brunette. They believe she drowned a three-year-old boy by dropping him off a bridge after binding his hands and feet with her stockings.

The body of Andrew Ashley was found near the shore of an artificial lake in 300-acre Delaware Park Friday. The apparently had been dead since Friday afternoon, when he was reported missing.

More than 300 police men and volunteers checked hundreds of the north side homes and police said they were told a woman fanned through miles of wooded parkland in a two-day search for the youngster.

A neighbor said he last saw Andrew walking Friday with a tall, dark-haired woman. Police believe she was the same woman who recently left two other north side youngsters bound and gagged beside rail-drawn him.

At one point, the youngster said, the woman threatened to

Britain Rejects Kassem's Claim to State of Kuwait

LONDON (AP)—Britain today rejected Iraqi Premier Abdul Karim Kassem's claim that the rich oil state of Kuwait belongs to Iraq.

At the same time, the foreign office disclosed that the British government has begun consultations with the ruler of Kuwait over Kassem's move to annex the sheikdom, which lies next to Iraq. The ruler is Sheik Abdullah al-Sa'lim As'sabah.

Britain ended its protectorate over Kuwait last week, but announced it will continue to guarantee Kuwait's independence if the sheikdom asked for aid.

"Kuwait is an independent, sovereign state," a foreign office spokesman told reporters.

BAGHDAD (AP) — Iraq has announced she will annex her fabulously oil-rich neighbor, the little sheikdom of Kuwait, raising the question whether the ruling sheik will call on British to aid the Persian Gulf sheikdom.

There also was speculation that neighboring Saudi Arabia might send its king grabbing such a rich prize.

Premier Gen. Abdul Karim Kassem said his government plans to issue an ordinance today carrying out the annexation of the area, rich in oil reserves. Kassem termed unclassified Kuwait's by historical right.

Kassem held a press conference Sunday night. He said Kuwait would be peaceful and the ruling sheik, 46-year-old Sir Abdullah As-Salim As'sabah, would be appointed chief administrator of the territory, taking in 3,800 square miles.

Kassem, who led the revolt that toppled Iraq's Hashemite dynasty in 1958, warned the sheik, however, that if he misused his office he would be considered rebellious. He added that he believed the ruler would not do that.

Diplomatic sources suggested, however, that Britain would be ready to move in with aid or advice if Kuwait sought it.

When it ended the protectorate last week, British authorities said they would continue to guarantee Kuwait against aggression, but only if the sheikdom asked for aid.

Questioned about Kassem's motives in annexing Kuwait, a diplomatic source in London said the sheikdom is a very valuable prize—and that is a good enough reason." The ruling sheik has a personal fortune estimated $3,000,000 a day from a daily oil output that totals more than 500,000,000 barrels a year.

The American Gulf Oil Corporation and the British Petroleum Company have been heavily engaged in exploiting the resources of Kuwait. It ranks fourth in world oil production after the United States, Venezuela and Russia.

Small Group Young Liberals Wants to Join New Party

A MILFORD BAY, Ont. (CP)—A resolution appointing a committee to set up an alliance or merger between the Liberal party and the New Party was passed Saturday night at the annual convention of the Ontario Young Liberals Association.

The resolution, approved at a night session of the convention while most delegates were at executive meetings or dances, was opposed by several delegates who said it was premature.

The idea is that New Party members should return to us."

Mr. Pitfield said he was not aware of our opportunity to bring into the Liberal party a group with a liberal position committed anti - government opinions.

SPLIT HELPS PCs

The resolution didn't name the New Party but referred specifically of a merger. It said the party "of essentially Liberal opinion" now is splitting the two groups to the advantage of the Progressive Conservatives.

"Therefore be it resolved that means be explored to re-establish the Liberal party as the Unified party embodying all progressive elements of thought without regard to alleged party ideology."

But comments of Mr. Malcolmson and Mr. Frith duling discussion of the resolution indicated a merger with the New Party is unlikely.

"Unless we do something before the next election the Diefenbaker government may be returned to power," said Mr. Malcolmson, 28-year-old president of the Toronto and Yorks Young Liberal Association.

Many of the socialistic policies to which the party objected had been abandoned by the New Party, he said, so there now could be room for discussion.

Mr. Frith, who said any merger would mean a split-up over his dead political body, said the New Party represented special-interest groups in a way was contrary to Liberal policy.

"Don't be deceived by anyone thinking that the New Party represents Liberalism," he said.

"... if you think, you are going to envelop them you'll find yourself in the position of the mouse that tried to swallow the lion."

The resolution passed 10 to 8 with five abstentions.

China Rejects Western Draft On Laos Pact

GENEVA (Reuters) — Communist China today rejected Franco-American proposals as a basis for discussion on the International Control Commission in Laos.

Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi told the 14-power conference he will meet this session after a three-day recess:

"The French-American draft protocol cannot be the basis for discussion, nor can it be compared and reconciled with the Soviet proposals.

"The delegations of China, the Soviet Union and Poland and the democratic republic of Viet Nam (North Vietnam) have already indicated their disagreement with the French-American draft protocol."

The Franco - American proposals, comprising a 12 - point draft protocol and 10 principles points submitted by U.S. delegate Averell Harriman last week, avoided such controversial and step-by-step procedures to set up international supervisory and control functions to the three-power commission, consisting of India, Canada and Poland.

WANT POWERS LIMITED

Communist delegations want the commission's powers limited severely to avoid an infringement of Laotian sovereignty.

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. EDT to debate the government's bill to set the Bank of Canada Governor James E. Coyne. The Senate sits at 8 p.m.

COYNE ISSUE HITS COMMONS IN FULL FORCE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Coyne controversy, bulling up for nearly two weeks, hits the Commons in full force today as debate opens on the government's bill to fire the governor of the Bank of Canada.

The measure to declare vacant the office held by James E. Coyne, who put the controversy into the open June 13, was introduced last Friday.

The explosive issue was left on the shelf Saturday as the Commons spent the day debating the health department's spending budget. By arrangement, consideration of matters are not debated on Saturdays.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Parliament will adjourn at a week's end for a two - month summer break if Commons faces a busy week.

Besides debate on the Coyne bill, which must also be passed by the Senate, there are four days remaining of the 35-day budget debate. That could be shortened if opposition in the House must also vote interim money supply to allow the government's affairs to go ahead until Parliament reassembles.

WAS FORECAST

The decision to fire Mr. Coyne was forecast June 14 by Finance Minister Fleming, one day after the Commons had overwhelmingly rejected a motion of censure and a request for his resignation. In his June 26 budget speech, Finance Minister Fleming will outline policies of Mr. Coyne and the government are in "fundamental conflict."

In the Commons Saturday, debate ranged from discussion of the medical care of Canadians in the event of a nuclear attack to the needs of those who live through any future wars to a trip aid to Israel.

Health Minister Monteith indicated a total of $1,350,000,000 spending estimates of his department and MPs immediately began discussing proposals for better Canadian health and welfare services especially for aged and chronically ill.

Mr. Monteith announced a new government survey to find out the chances of launching a national health plan through a national survey of existing private plans.

The findings will be gathered in the survey for federal-provincial consideration, through the Finance Minister Fleming in his budget Tuesday—on the possibility of setting up pensions that could be carried from job to job by workers.

URGES CONFERENCE

She said Canadians were sending $2 million a year to Israel, hoping they would die and the problem would disappear.

Dr. P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe East) said there were 5,000 Canadians 100 years old and more sensibly would result from the league of Nations system.

Mr. Monteith said that old age security, family allowances and welfare to the aged would be discussed.

Role Like That of Pontius Pilate, Eichmann Thinks His Hands Clean

JERUSALEM (AP) — Adolf Eichmann today likened his role in the Nazi slaughter of the Jews to that of Pontius Pilate and said he was able to wash his hands of any responsibility.

The former Gestapo colonel in charge of "Jewish affairs" testified that he had tried in vain to describe his thoughts of those terrible years and when the decision was reached to exterminate the Jews "as the final solution" to the problem.

All three Israeli judges leaned forward in their chairs as Eichmann compared himself to the Roman governor who allowed the crucifixion of Christ.

The key of Eichmann's testimony was the long-awaited conference of top Nazi bureaucrats outside Berlin Jan. 20, 1942.

It was there the Gestapo chief Reinhard Heydrich said the "final solution" was death for 10,000,000 European Jews. Eichmann said he was unaware of this when he prepared the machinery for the meeting at Heydrich's request.

Heydrich, who had expected some opposition, "exulted at the success" of the meeting which required only an hour or so, said Eichmann.

Defence lawyer Robert Servatius asked Eichmann about his own reaction. The defendant replied:

"Here I felt a certain solace and appeasement, considering I had done my utmost despite my relatively low rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, and I thought I had a 'final solution' which was not repellent or hideous but which was practical and feasible.

"I did my best to bring order into all the turmoil in deportations. I thought everything could be seen in the Radom plan and later in the Madagascar plan (for shipping the Jews to the island of Madagascar). I thought I had done my duty and, of my determination, I had to see the line. What was done was not my affair. It was the affair of Pontius Pilate. I felt I was not guilty. That was the decision that was done by the elite, the popes of the regime."

Eichmann said he took this view both in the interviews he gave Dutch Journalist Wilhelm Sassen in Argentina when he was kidnapped and in his pre-trial interrogation by Israeli police.

Blame Sabotage For Loss Of 7 Houses In Blaze

Mounties Investigate Newfoundland Incident

HARE BAY, Nfld. (CP)—The forest fire situation in eastern Newfoundland eased slightly improved today, amid reports that some of the equipment used to fight the fire in this area was deliberately sabotaged.

Ez Ralph, the province's chief forester, said the RCMP is investigating and arrests are expected.

He said that during the height of the fire Friday, in which 12 houses were destroyed here, a water hose was cut. It was felt seven of the homes were lost as a result.

Carrying straps on portable water tanks mysteriously disappeared, he said.

SUSPECTS ARSON

Premier Peckford, Newfoundland deputy resources minister, said earlier arson was thought to be the cause of the huge fire which has destroyed 25,000 acres of spruce and fir in this area and 7 miles northwest of St. John's. Many homes were burned in a sawdust pile.

Meanwhile, with the possibility of light showers today, the firefighter felt the fire was being licked. The most explosive spot was Trinity, a community 10 miles north of here, where a dangerous fire was reported only about three miles inland. However, there was hope it would be contained.

Trinity was the only community of 400 to 500 persons evacuated where most of the residents had not returned. Two ferries headed directly at the village Sunday before subsiding and sheering away.

One fire, located behind a 30-foot hill to the west of Trinity died down, then shifted north slightly after moving to within two miles of the village.

Another, further away on a hill to the southwest or Trinity, had also subsided to an ember and it too appeared to have subsided. However, a wind in the southwesterly wind was still blowing.

WILL USE BOMBS

Mr. Ralph said planes would attack the fires today with bombs filled with water. He said several bombs dropped Sunday were "very successful."

Earlier Sunday, it was feared the fires would advance Sunday night to the small communities of Wareham, Parkers Cove and Hants Harbor clustered along the edge of Bonavista Bay. The 2,000 residents of these communities and Trinity and Centreville were evacuated Friday.

Firefighters at other points along the bay appear to have been successfully controlled at the peak of a bump-back bridge on Bunyans Arm.

The sole survivor, Anthony Benhyrek, 22, of Dopew was in serious condition in the Waterloo Hospital.

His mother and two sisters were among the dead.

Depew police said it was-Innocent Benhyrek who phoned in the accident from the shattered wreckage of the cars. The bridge carried Walden Ave., a New York Central Railroad line and the approach from both directions.

Stockdale Boy Falls off Bike, Drowns in Trent

An 11-year-old boy was drowned in the Trent Canal at Frankford Saturday afternoon, bringing drowning deaths in the Trent River system north of Trenton to four within the past months.

Drowned when he apparently lost his balance while riding his bicycle along the Trent Canal at Lock No. 6 at Frankford was Lorne Wall, son of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Wall of Stockdale.

The body was recovered within half an hour but all efforts at resuscitation proved fruitless. Both the boy and his bicycle toppled into the canal.

Coroner Dr. D. McMullen of Frankford said there would be no inquest.

About four weeks ago a six year old Smithfield boy drowned at Frankford while a week later two men drowned at No. 3 dam between Glen Miller and Batawa.

Local Rink Wins District Playdowns Beating Trenton In Final Game on Extra End

Three rinks from Belleville, two from Trenton and one from the Campbellford Lions Bowling Clubs entered the District-15 Men's rinks championship playdowns on the greens of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club on Sunday afternoon and following three strenuous rounds of knock out competition a Belleville rink, composed of C. D. Ashley, lead, W. G. Wright, second, J. B. Miller, vice, and G. H. Walkin, skip, were successful and will enter the Zone 4 playdowns to be held in Belleville on Saturday, July 29th.

In first round series "A" play the local rink consisting of A. Boyes, L. Chouinard, C. Mitts and W. Price, who bowled at the Campbellford entry of L. B. Glover, G. Vice, G. Nicholls and E. Hutchinson, skip, by a score of 25 to 9. In first round series "B" play two rinks from Belleville rinks were drawn against each other with Gord Watkin's rink, the champion rink composed of O. G. Smith, C. D. Tice, L. F. Wilson and H. B. Hyde, skip, by a score of 18 to 12. The first round "C" series pitted the Trenton rink, the entry composed of W. G. McGee, W. J. Price, T. A. Bennett and G. C. Vince, skip against last years district rink championship from Trenton. This rink included F. M. Way, K. Peacock, R. H. Baker and W. Peacock, skip. It was a hard fought battle the game ended in a tie at 21 all. An extra end was played to decide the winner with the Trenton rink scoring the point in the extra end and automatically entering the Zone 4 playdowns in second round play.

WINS WAY INTO FINAL

In the second round the "A" series winner, Public Utilities Station was defeated by the "B" series winner, Watkin of Belleville by a score of 21 to 11 thereby qualifying the Watkin rink to play the Gordwatkin rink in the final round. The deciding match was one of the most exciting and hard fought contests seen on the Belleville greens in many years, between two very evenly matched teams. Well rested from their bye in the second round, the Watkin rink team took an early, and seemingly commanding lead in the game as they led 7 to 0 after the visiting opposition by 14 to 3 with the score half over.

The Watkin rink then took over the command of the play and by scoring in the consecutive ends to tie the score at 14-14 with three ends to go. On the 18th end Trod Spence was forced to be followed by a Belleville player of three on the 17th making a one shot lead for Belleville coming home. With each skip having just one bowl left in the 19th end, Trenton by three shots with their last bowl, Gord Watkin moved the "cat" and lay one shot. Horace Greasley then calmly drew the "cat" back and lay shot to tie the match at 17-17. Watkin won the toss for the last bowl on the extra end and with a key bowl being made by Watkin and Bruce Miller, successfully protected one shot to take the game and win the right to represent this district in the second stage of the provincial championship playdowns.

ONLY TWO ENTRIES

Only two entries, one from Campbellford and one from Belleville, entered the Colts Triples competition and in this single game the Belleville entry composed of Bill Hunter, Ralph Tock and Wally Lavergne, skip, outclassed their comparatively inexperienced opponents from Campbellford by a score of 30-12. The Campbellford entry included two brand new bowlers and a second year player and by entering this year have gained invaluable experience which will stand them in good stead in future competitions. This entry consisted of W. Sherman, D. Petherick and W. G. Vanderwater, skip.

The best wishes of all District bowlers go with the successful Belleville winners in these competitions as they enter the zone playdowns in quest of the Ontario championships. The next round to establish the men's and women's titles will be held on Sunday, July 9th, commencing at 10 o'clock sharp and it is expected that a very large entry will enter this competition, for the first time in many years the Kingston club did not send an entry for the rink competition and it is understood that most of these men preferred to enter the next series. The greens were in excellent condition for yesterday's championships and all participants were loud in their praise of the efforts of the local club to provide outstanding facilities for this competition. A goodly gallery followed the play with keen interest in the final outcome.

Bowling Notes

Two rinks of Men's doubles tournayed to Campbellford on Saturday for competition in the Canada Packers trophy but were only able to win two games each and the score was not good enough to get into the prize money. The greens were excellent, there were 32 rinks in play and the bowlers enjoyed a delicious dinner served by the women's section of the club. Bill Tazzel and Claude Tice also Fred Bateman, Vince and Walter Elliott won their first two games and struck tarters in the third draw and went down to defeat.

Clint Mills and partner of Trenton won the trophy and accompanying prizes while Morley Gail and partner of Campbellford were second three game high. The two-ends high was Harold Buck and partner of Belleville while Bill Fuller and partner won the one-game high score.

It was a most enjoyable day.

On Thursday afternoon Mrs. Chris Hoard, Mrs. Cleia Gilbert with Mrs. Grace Clapp as skipper, defeated Mrs. Jessie Hunter, Mrs. Lil Mascaro with Mrs. Edna Johnson as skip in the afternoon league with Mrs. Clapp winning the cut for high. Despite Adverse Weather Horse Show Here Success; District Horses Win Awards

By ANNE M. McDONALD

Adverse weather conditions did not prevent a record attendance of exhibitors at the Belleville Charity Horse Show held at the Fair Grounds on Saturday. Over a hundred top horses and ponies from areas as far east as Ottawa, and west as far as Blakstock and Nestleton turned out in full force to give Belleville and district horse lovers a real insight into the great sportsmanship among horsemen in Eastern Ontario. An attendance established at over 800 braved the weather of the day to see the 30 highly competitive events that commenced at 14.00 a.m. and continued to early evening.

TOP WINNERS BY DIVISION

The top winners by division were as follows: child's ponies: Morris Parks of "Marshdale Farms," R.R. 7, Belleville; road horses: Lorne Hoskins, Blakstock, Ont.; hackney horses: Ralph Sadler, Nestleton, Ont.; hackney ponies: Dave McDonald, "Quinte View Stables," Belleville; hunters: Joan Kelly, Kingston; saddle horses: E. JUDGES FOR SHOW

Judges for the horse show were Mr. John Rumble of Toronto, a Canadian member of Canada's Olympic Equestrian team, and Mr. Berritt Mann of Peterborough. They were ably assisted by the stewards Bandmaster Bunnell, Ian Scott, and doing the liaison between rings was Miss Mary Walker.

Registration was capably handled by Mr. and Mrs. A. Jamieson, assisted by Buddy Zebedee.

In his usual capable manner in handling such events, the well known announcer, Cameron Bunnell, kept the program on the move.

The Lions Club boat draw took place during the latter part of the program with Alderman Robert Trumpour doing the honor of drawing the lucky ticket before the grandstand. The winner of the fibreglas boat, motor and trailer, was Laverne Marsolo of Marysville.

Complete results of the Charity Horse Show are listed. Points were given to the first three finishers in each event. Names in brackets are those of the donors of trophies in each class. Horses' names are followed by name of rider and owner. Where only one name is listed rider is owner same, the person rode or drove the entry and is also the owner. HIGH COMMISSIONER

Word of interest to many Canadians is the fact that the Rt. Hon. D. Heathcote Amory, who has soon be taking office as United Kingdom High Commissioner to Canada, has been associated with the Boy Scout Movement.

Viscount Amory was A.D.C. for Tiverton, even in 1924. A year later he became District Commissioner. In 1931 he became County Commissioner and in 1935 was appointed a Chief Scout's Commissioner, by the Chief Scout of the world, Lord Baden-Powell, a position he still holds under the present Chief Scout of the Commonwealth, Sir Charles Maclean. He was presented with a past director and treasurer of the Sales and Advertising Club, a director of the Belleville Agricultural Society, and vice-president and treasurer of the Quinte Curling Club, which he founded in 1937.

He was also a member of the Rotary Club, the Belleville Yacht Club, the Country Club.

On his retirement, Mr. Jarrett plans to take up permanent residence at Sundridge, 45 miles south of North Bay. He has had a summer home at Sundridge for a number of years.

Mr. Jarrett's retirement brings to an end a banking his career started in Hamilton, his home-town, in 1916. He originally served with the Molson's Bank, but transferred to the Bank of Montreal when the two banks merged in 1925.

He served at a number of branches in this province, before being appointed manager at a branches in Toronto in 1945. The following year, he moved to another Toronto office in the same capacity, and in 1948, went to the bank's head office in Montreal.

Millionaire Jumps to Death

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Coroner's deputies Sunday ruled the death of George Vanderbilt III a suicide but the reason for his plunge from a 10th-floor hotel suite remained a riddle.

Vanderbilt, 47, who inherited $40,000,000, was found dead Saturday night by a bellboy after his bride of three months missed him in their rooms.

No notes were found.

Mrs. Louise Vanderbilt said her husband had called to her and she had gone into the suite's sitting room, found him gone and the window open. She told police she was afraid to look down and called the hotel desk.

The Bladen Report

When an expert, like Dr. Vincent Bladen, dean of the University of Toronto economics faculty, follows the lengthy hearing of evidence from other experts by careful study of their testimony and painstaking drafting of a report, it would be foolish for a man who is merely a motorist to dispute his views on what should be done to put the Canadian automobile industry on a healthy basis.

But a motorist—any old motorist—knows better himself what he wants in a car than does Dr. Bladen, or any other expert.

A great many motorists, in a convincing variation of Lenin's famous reference to "voting with their feet," have voted with their dollars that what they want are the smaller European-built cars.

This indisputable fact is what makes us view with a jaundiced eye Dr. Bladen's declaration that consumer demand, and not industry fads, dictate stress on design, size and trim in Canadian cars.

Now we do not doubt that this is the truth —but we do doubt whether it is the whole truth.

In the first place, the stress on design, size and trim in Canadian cars is the same as the stress on design, size and trim in U.S. cars—for the very good reason that almost all of the cars made in Canada are identical with cars made in the United States. (The exceptions are minor exterior variations to convert one U.S. car into two Canadian cars, differently named but essentially the same, for the purpose of improving dealer relationships). Now these cars, made in both Canada and the U.S., were designed, as Dr. Bladen says, to meet consumer demand, but it is consumer demand in the joint market and Canadian demand being so small compared to demand in the U.S., this means consumer demand in the U.S. But Dr. Bladen also says that North American companies have not made as big an impression on European car sales in Canada as they have in the U.S. In part, this is almost certainly due to difference in comparative prices, resulting from differences in tariffs. But is it not also possible—nay, probable—that this is in part the result of differences in consumer preference?

It may be argued that the statement that many Canadians have voted for European-built cars with their dollars needs to be qualified, that these cars are not so much what these people want as what they can afford. But it is absurd to divorce ability to pay from a consideration of what the Canadian car-buyer wants. Generally what he wants, most of all, is to be able to buy and operate a car without too severely reducing his ability to pay for his other wants, including his most urgent needs. These most urgent needs, after all, do not include a car in most cases. A car is probably not a luxury, in our present-day society, as Dr. Bladen has observed; at the same time, except for a rather few who use it in their daily work, it is not a necessity in the same class as food, clothing and shelter. Even if it were as essential as these needs, though, this would not reduce, but rather enhance, the desirability of making certain that efforts to improve the conditions in the Canadian car industry do not deprive Canadians of the type of car they want.

Insofar as Dr. Bladen's recommendations reduce the cost of Canadian-built cars, that is all to the good. Imported cars should certainly not be given any tax advantages over those built at home. But we would like to hear about the arguments that will abandon the present policy of admitting British-built cars tax-free if there were some move to build a truly small, and therefore cheap, car in Canada. Indeed, it seems to us that an overall increase in the tariff on imported cars might even be justified if this were necessary to provide a market big enough for Canadian-built small cars. We dislike, however, a policy of a tariff barrier against goods which are not really of a class and kind built in Canada.

This Is Too Much

There ought to be a Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Taxpayers.

The City Treasurer's "demand" for 1961 taxes and the pre-budget white paper announcing that every man, woman and child in Canada owed $687.99—either of these we could take separately.

But not in the same week.

With school graduation time here and summer holidays only a wallet's thickness away.

I'm as dedicated a capitalist in theory and practice as there is in the world. My chief interest is to save capitalism in America from nuclear war.—Cyrus Eaton, industrialist.

Strictly Personal

Tickle No Funny Matter Says Sydney Man

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"Daddy," asked Michael the other evening, "when I tickle myself, why don't I laugh?"

This question is not for the Korner of Kute Kiddies' Komebacks. It is a serious and worthwhile question, and one that not too few adults have ever asked themselves.

For the dictionary definition of "tickle" leaves out the most important part: when the literal scientific mind, a tickle is simply "a light touch so as to excite the surface nerves and to cause laugher or spasmodic movements."

What if precisely important about a tickle, however, is that it produces laughter only when someone else does it to us. The physical touch upon the surface nerves is the same either when we tickle ourselves.

Therefore, a tickle is not primarily a physical act, even though it depends upon a physical act. It is a reaction of the mind to an "aggresive" action which turns out not to be aggressive at all, and we laugh in relief.

Why waste so much space upon a little matter like a tickle? Because a child's question points up a fundamentally bogreen mind and body, and the understanding of a "tickle" was new to it.

It is depressing, but hardly surprising, that there still remain many persons who deny the truth of Darwin's discoveries about the emotions affecting the body. They insist that some psychical, psychological or ethical factors are responsible for our emotional reactions.

In the face of overwhelming evidence, they deny that a 'mere thought' can affect/move the body. But a "mere thought" is what makes us laugh when we are tickled — otherwise, tickling ourselves would produce the same effect. Mentally speaking, one touch upon the surface nerves is the same as another touch.

A mere thought can produce ulcers, a mere apprehension or any one of a dozen acute physical ailments. It can also produce mental disturbances, ranging from a mild neurosis to a total break with reality. But not a thought (that is, a thought with all the emotions around it) can cause illness — this can only happen to organs.

There is still a great deal we do not know about the whole mysterious process indeed there is more darkness than light on the subject. But those who reject the intimate association between the subjective feelings and the objective body are carrying more "darkness" over the light we already have, and retreating into the dimly lit world of "mere thought." When they can tickle themselves and make themselves laugh, I shall begin to believe in the physical explanation.

How Norway Houses Aged

Health News Service

Canadians could learn from Norway's experience in housing for the aged. Small attractive flats for elderly people are built in the heart of the town or city. They have all modern conveniences but not meals may be sent to them if they need or wish them.

"Old people are encouraged to remain active and vigorous participants in the life of the community," Dr. John F. Hastings of the Ontario Health Department, University of Toronto, says.

"Fortunately views in Canada are changing, but all too often communities still build large institutional atmospheres. Some homes the resident may not even hang pictures on the wall or have more than one or two small personal belongings.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

"Man is the only animal that laughs and weeps; for he is the only animal that is struck with difference between what things are and what they ought to be."

The great essayist Hazlitt wrote that a man generations ago. It might be called a thumbnail biography of man. Unlike the animals, men are made in the image and after the likeness of God. They are to be dominated and utilized. We, on the other hand, have the capacity to be on terms of fellowship and friendship with our Creator. We are able to look at life and think of it in terms of eternal destiny.

Sometimes the contemplation of life makes us laugh, and again it makes us weep. And Hazlitt was right in saying that we laugh or weep because we are able to discern the difference between what things are and what they ought to be. It is not easy to live this through the passage and purpose, but the challenge of life is the fountain-head of true happiness. Making the good better, correcting the evil where it can be corrected, enduring that must be endured — this is the divine plan for our lives; or to change the figure, this is the warp and woof of life's fabric. The angels are our companions if we will only permit them so to be. Human life is essentially majestic and noble.

The greater part of the village of Northport in Prince Edward County was destroyed by fire on Wednesday last. The homeless inhabitants have found accommodation in some of the remaining houses, in public buildings and farm houses in the district. Furniture which could be saved is stored in the shed of the Methodist Church. Two-story-and-one buildings in all were destroyed.

U.S. Paper Hits Embargo

Washington Post

The great suction pump fiasco with Canada happily has been for the most part repaired. The United States has waived application of the Trading with the Enemy Act for suction devices already ordered for the Norwegian, British, Swedish and other ships chartered by Communist China to carry grain from Canada.

A Canadian official has termed the quick action of the administration here "the finest example" of direct cooperation. And of course the waiver makes good sense. Although the action of lower-level Treasury officials is stopping delivery of the pumps was perfectly legal, it was an overly rigid and unimaginative interpretation of the law and threatened to stir as enormous furor in Canada.

But all is not necessarily well that ends well. As in every such instance, there is more evil that darkens the tackles have been raised, and misgivings have been aroused about the ease with which the American giant can thoughtlessly trample the law of neighbor.

Wouldn't it be nice if there were some reasonable, but not arbitrary that would alert cabinet members to the implications of these misunderstandings before they happen?

What Kipling Really Said

Hamilton Spectator

When Sir Patrick Dean, head of the British delegation to the United Nations, presented to the UN a painting symbolizing the eventual meeting between East and West and the brotherhood of man, he said that it represented a promise in spite of Rudyard Kipling!

It is a common enough failing for people to know only the first line of songs and poems and be vague about what comes after "Kipling's ballad that East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet is a good example of this fragmentary memory. Isolated from the rest of the line it is unfair to Kipling's vision. The last two lines of the verse prove it.

"But there is neither East nor West,

Border, nor Breed, nor Birth,

When two strong men stand face to face, though they come from the ends of the earth!"

Perhaps Sir Patrick Dean had never read the poem. Poor Kipling!

Wants Jews To Inter-Wed

Richmond, Va., Times-Dispatch

British historian Arnold J. Toynbee is concerned not only with the fate of cultures that have gone with the wind. He wonders, too, about the future use (and many editors) Sear to tread.

He seeks to influence the trend of history—to come, specifically, to the rescue of the between Jews of Israeli nationality and those of the Diaspora.

Dr. Toynbee interest in the dispute between the Orthodox Jewry and the Conservative American Council for Judaism is understandable. He appeared his concern recently at the annual meeting of the council, with the prediction that Judaism would become "one of the great spiritual resources of the whole human race," if, and when Jews and non-Jews abandon their "exclusive national reservations" about Jews.

In that address he went so far as to assail Zionism as akin to anti Semitism.

"The traditional caste barrier he said) between Jews and non-Jews would be likely to be broken down by more and more frequent intermarriages."

Dr. Toynbee's view is free of sharp criticism from two million Orthodox Jews in America.

"The Jewish prohibition against intermarriage," they said, "is the basic philosophy of Jewish survival of that Judaism which Jews are perpetuating in the midst of the mankind. There is no perceptible caste barrier between Orthodox Jews in our American society. Marital separation between Christians and Jews is rare, primarily due to mutual religiousness — and stop itching.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Are there any foods that will cause irritations that a woman has gone through menopause? At 59 I have had my husband's mother-in-law think I am lying, so as to appear younger to my husband and family. How can I say I have gone through menopause when I know I haven't? — M. S."

There are no outward manifestations. Your mother-in-law sounds a bit nosey to me. You'll have to suit yourself as to whether you tell a white lie to make her shut up. But the fact is that some women do not go through menopause until after 50.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My left ear has been roaring for over 2 years. Is there anything to help it? — F. W."

That's precisely what my book let on "Ear Noises, Their Causes and Cures" is about. If you want a copy write for it, enclosing 10 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address your request to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. Box 158, Dundee, Ill.

"Dear Dr. Molner: For several weeks I've had trouble with my jaw, or at that side, directly in front of my ear. When I open my mouth to take a bite of food or talk, it pains. — M. S. P."

Malocclusion (the teeth not coming together just right) is one likely cause. A dentist first. If he can't identify the trouble, it's time to see a eye physician about it. In case you wonder — yes, it's possible for the TMJ and the teeth to cause this trouble even after many years of having no complaint.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

One of the advantages of going a little deaf is that you no longer hear the mosquitoes. It was hearing their threatening whine of the mosquito, as you lay in bed after turning out the light, that was the infuriating feature of the pest.

You turned out the light and snuggled around, and then the most comfortable part of the mattress began to underscore a outrage or resort bed. You relaxed and reviewed pleasantly the experiences of the day, and then "peeeeeeannnnn"!

There it was. You hid your hands under the sheet, keeping one hand to make a quick slap when the creature landed on your only exposed surface, your head by the right ear. It retreated. It went round and round. No longer relaxed, you were intense as a gun spring. The beast went far away, up to the ceiling, then down past your ear.

It would only land!

But when you being to lose your hearing, you are spared all of that hanging around with hands on your forehead. You slap.

That's it. You go to sleep.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE HUMAN CIRCLE

One of the reasons, I believe, why the earth is round is so that all people may from time to time, meet, approach, marching armies, powerful Navies, and mountains may be able to wipe homes and beauty into desolation, will never bring anything but peace this world. Tubs of tears wrung from mothers' hearts are the most total annihilation of entire populations.

The isolated man with his gold and individual success, and the isolated nation with its power and plenty will, alike, in time, melt from the hot heart of contact and fatigue and become temporarily alive.

We should be " 'one' for all of us."

In these years of the Nineteen-sixties as never before

Upper Canada Village At Morrisburg Opened by Premier Frost

By WILLIAM MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

UPPER CANADA VILLAGE, Ont. (CP)—The premier of Canada's greatest industrial provinces Saturday sailed back time to the pioneer days when a man's hands built his home and kept him alive.

Upper Canada Village — a quaint replica of 19th century life—was opened by Premier Frost of Ontario. He toured through its 40 homes and shops.

The quiet cluster of memory-filled buildings is a byproduct of 20th century economic expansion. They were rescued from riverside communities flooded by the St. Lawrence Seaway power project and assembled here in Crysler Farm Battlefield Park.

The 2,000-acre park, named after a decisive battle near here during the War of 1812, received the premier's official blessing.

He also opened all of the Quinte - St. Lawrence Parks, 3,000 acres of vacation land spread over 170 miles from the Bay of Quinte to the Quebec border.

It was a day of colorful ceremony for thousands of spectators.

GUNS BOOM

A stiff breeze fanned them as the small-arms and artillery of Kingston's Fort Henry guard sputtered and boomed a "feu de joie"—an ancient ceremonial to commemorate occasions of national significance.

The ceremony consists of the firing of a 21-gun salute punctuated with small-arms firing during the playing of the national anthem. This was preceded by ceremonies on a dais in front of the battle memorial building which contains memorials of the part British and Canadian troops played in the battle.

The building contains Canadian and British courts of honor, declared open by Federal Defence Minister Harkness and Sir Gerald Templer, former chief of Britain's imperial general staff and colonel of the Royal Irish Fusiliers, who officially represented the British Army.

After each of those two ceremonies, a 'muzzle - loading 24-pounder stop a long rise behind the building was fired and the Canadian Ensign and Union Jack were raised.

ACCEPTS COLORS

Premier Frost then accepted replicas of the colors carried by the Duke of Edinburgh's Royal Regiment (formerly the 49th Regiment of Foot) and the Royal Irish Fusiliers (formerly the 89th Regiment of Foot) during the Crysler Farm battle.

The colors were marched into the battle memorial building where they will remain on display.

From the dais the official party, which included several Ontario cabinet ministers and other dignitaries, moved to the memorial to Loyalist American regiments and as adjoining plaque commemorating Sir John Johnson, a United Empire Loyalist leader.

There an unveiling ceremony was held, presided over by Sir John Johnson, sixth Baronet of New York and a descendant of the original Sir John. A wreath was unveiled in memory of his ancestor.

Emphasis was on the military Saturday as approximately 8,000 persons attended the official opening of the Quinte-St. Lawrence Parks system Crysler Farm Battlefield Park, and Upper Canada Village. Official party, headed by Field Marshal Sir Gerald W. R. Templer, former Chief of Imperial General Staff, and Premier Leslie M. Frost, is seen inspecting the Fort Henry Guard, which took in the ceremonies.

What the thousands of visitors waited to see was unlocked by Premier Frost. Crowds are seen walking through Upper Canada Village, representing a three million dollar restoration program depicting the life of Upper Canada 150 years ago. Toll gate to the village was stored buildings were not open on Saturday. Many of the reclared the Liberal party "believes in social justice — it repudiates socialism."

Mr. Wintermeyer said as party if elected, would establish an institute for government studies at a university to train persons in administration of provincial and municipal affairs.

It would offer immediate financial help to municipalities by assuming the full cost of welfare and the administration of justice.

National leader Lester Pearson said the Conservative government's decision to oust James Coyne as governor of the Bank of Canada was a diversionary measure to conceal confusion in economic policies and inaefficacies in dealing with unemployment.

A resolution adopted at the meeting urged the Canadian government to oppose any attempt to "subvert" the Cuban government, declaring there was seen increasing outside interference with Cuba's internal affairs.

Fred Livingston, 31, of London, Ont., an RCAF veteran, strongly opposed the resolution and said he would volunteer to fight against Cuba if the United States intervened directly to out Castro.

In other actions; the meeting:

1. Rejected a proposal for the establishment of an Ontario royal commission to study insurance legislation.

2. Urged the provincial government to open a broad study of welfare services in Ontario.

3. Endorsed the report of the O'Leary royal commission on publications, saying its immediate adoption would be a vital step forward in Canada's battle for an independent identity.

TORONTO (CP) — If young Liberals are looking for a new home they should join the New Party, Donald MacDonald, Ontario CCF leader, said Sunday night.

He was commenting on the resolution passed by the Ontario Young Liberals Association at Milford Bay.

"Their motion is 30 years too late," Mr. MacDonald said. "The CCF was formed originally, and is about to become part of a more broadly - based New Party, because of this conviction that the old guard of the Liberal party belongs with the Tories.

"If the Young Liberals are seeking a new political home on behalf of the New Party I invite them to join forces with us before our founding convention this summer."

Swinging to civil defence, he said the government this year will spend $2,800,000,000 on nuclear-age portable hospitals, capable of being carried to any attack area.

He also announced the network of 62 radiation detection centres has been set up across Canada and that the level of strontium-90 in milk from nuclear test fallout is declining.

MEMBERS CRITICIZED

The minister, who worked through his 58th birthday, was criticized by members for touching only briefly on the centrelush issue of a national medical health plan.

His only reference to the issue was to mention that the recently - appointed royal commission on health care will study medical training problems as well as treatment.

William Benidickson (L—Kenora - Rainy River) regretted there was no mention of a comprehensive medical health plan in Mr. Monteith's opening remarks.

Douglas Fisher (CCF — Port Arthur) charged that general practitioners seemed to be most opposed to such a plan, fearing government intervention.

Both he and Dr. Rynard lamented the scarcity of doctors and dentists in Canada. Dr. Rynard suggested tax incentives to get young doctors started in practice. Both said the flow of graduates should be increased.

Mtudo Martin (CCF — Timmins) said he believes Canadians would support the government in a health insurance plan if the costs were set out plainly in the perspective of what has been done so far and what remains to be done to bring standards up to those of many other countries.

Mr. Fisher said the government will have to make up its mind whether to start supporting international athletic teams.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker has said the government intends to present promised legislation this session on assisting amateur sport.

Sensible Luxury

By VERA WINSTON

A luxurious trifle can do so much to enhance the wardrobe that it becomes an economical luxury.

The vertical stripe of the pullover is set off by collar and cuffs of novelty stitching.

Married Before Final Term Is Started

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wilfrid and Beverley von Kries have graduated from university convinced that two can live and study as cheaply as one.

They were married last year at the start of their final terms at the University of British Columbia.

"We were happy as clams and our marks were still topnotch," says dark and vivacious Beverley who met Wilfrid at a fresh reception shortly after he emigrated from Germany.

"And we're not married to the finance company," said Wilfrid who received his bachelor of arts degree with honors in history and German.

Beverley, with a degree in sociology and German, believes partnership is the key essential for young couples mixing marriage with studies.

It applied to the housework which they split 50-50 in their two-roomed apartment near the university, also to part - time jobs. Wilfrid worked as a railway porter and Beverley at the university library to help finance their studies.

Next year the von Kries will attend the University of Washington at Seattle where Wilfrid will study for a doctorate in German literature and Beverley will train for work as a scientific librarian.

Apprenticeship System Of Nursing Is Discussed

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia nurses are divided on the question of whether the apprenticeship system of training should be replaced by a five - charging professional course.

"Nurses wish to be called professionals and I don't see how we can continue the apprenticeship system," said Mrs. Ruth Arnaud of North Vancouver's Victorian Order of Nurses.

"Those who could afford to pay for training might not make the best nurses," declared Mrs. Elizabeth Ulaga of Ladysmith General Hospital.

The question was debated before 400 nurses at the annual convention of the Registered Nurses Association of B.C.

The three-year apprenticeship course at present pays $10 a month at start, rising to $25 a month, and includes board and lodging.

There is a five - year course leading to a Bachelor of Nursing degree offered at the University of British Columbia.

Mrs. Arnaud, a 1940 graduate of Toronto General Hospital, said the apprenticeship system often is hard on the nurse's health. Many hospitals placed work in the wards before education.

Moreover, the trained nurse of the future was likely to be primarily an administrator with the practice) nurse or nurse's aid doing bedside care. "I don't look forward to it but it is coming," said Mrs. Arnaud.

Blanche Pots of Duncan, 20 - year - old trainee at Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital, said a fee-charging course with fewer chores would be a good idea but would rule out girls like herself.

"If I had to pay I couldn't afford it—I'm one of a family of four."

Mrs. Marian Alice Wedge of Saskatoon, mother of four and daughter of Chief Justice Emmett Hall of Saskatchewan, got her law degree and a scholarship.

Marie Erika Strohhofer - LeMarry of Pontiac, Sask., was named winner of the Copeland prize as the outstanding graduate of the college of arts and science.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

LAMPOONING THE LATECOMER

In case you've ever wondered why some people are chronically late for appointments, we have the answer — and from a psychologist, too.

The late, later shower-er, he told, us is not just rude. Subconsciously he's immature. And rebellious.

The real pro turns over in the morning after the alarm goes off. (Just can't face the day.)

He's sluggish about getting to the office; is always at least a half hour late. (Hates his job.)

At lunch time, he takes a taxi that's sure to stall, so he can keep his date dangling for at least forty minutes (and thereby delay facing any more problems he feels he can't cope with.)

Then, if someone is still kind enough to invite him to a cocktail party, the expert procrastinator makes his grand entrance just as the hostess give out and the chill tones down. (This may be therapeutic for the latecomer's psyche, but it's hard on the hostr.s.)

But now that the cat's out of the psychological bag, the chronically late had better mend his ways.

Nor longer will I, for one, tak-tak over tales of flooded subways and dry gas tanks that always seem to take an hour to dry out or fill up.

I'm bored with being balm for a bruised ego, especially when I now discover the owner looks upon me as a battleground for some sort of psychological warfare I had nothing to do with declaring.

So next time you feel inclined to dally over keeping a date, be careful.

Your spyche may be showing! And besides, it's bad manners!

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question — I have been told by a friend that it is improper to wear nylon stocking with flats. I disagree. Who is right?
— J. H., Ingleside, Ill.

Answer — Both of you. If the flats you have in mind are low dressy, slipper type, then stockings are properly worn. However, with moccasins or other heavy duty shoes it not only looks but feels better to wear sturdy wool socks in either ankle or knee length.

SPECIAL EVENTS

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Eldred Proulx have appropriate days for their birthdays. Billy was a year old June 18, Father's Day this year, and his sister Pauline was born last May 14, Mother's Day.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Kermit T. — Let them hire me the way I am.

Doris T. — My husband and I are middle-aged and at the point where there are silver threads — lots of them — among the gold. Actually, though I'm a year younger than Kermit, my hair is more silvery than his. But he's about to start a job hunt because his broker-age firm is folding. And, to a prospective employer Kermit's gray hair would label him as "old," at least older than he is, which is a hearty 53.

Since he must support a family for a good while yet, I say "all's fair." Although our daughter is married, we still have two sons in college and Kermit needs a good job fast. So I suggest he dye his hair and lop 10 years or so off his age when he applies.

Kermit T. — Just because some personnel directors may be narrow-minded or prejudiced about the subject of age, why should I play into their hands? Doris is more panicky than I am about my getting a new position. I feel I'll get one on my merits, regardless of superfluous matters like my hair color. In fact, the gray should be an asset. The new boss will know he's getting someone experienced and settled.

Let me ask Doris something. How will it look for me to become a dashing young blade, married to a sweet silver-haired grandma, which is what she'll be in a few months? Age will out, sooner or later, and sooner with us. I'm sure, what with sons graduating from college and all.

No, let them take me or leave me as I am.

The Council — In this age of speed, where first impressions may mean last chances, we'd agree with Doris that "all's fair," short of damaging decisiveness to get past front desks. It's regrettable but true that snap judgments based upon surface qualities often regulate the stop-and-go turnstiles in busy offices. So, to reach the right party, to get an opportunity to "display his wares," Kermit may have to doctor up the packaging.

Call it a mild capitulation to the jet age. Today the synthetic exterior is commonplace. Artificial hair color is becoming accepted as routinely as artificial cheek and lip color. Most people understand that "that ruddy outdoor glow" comes, in many cases, from steady indoor (front-of-mirror) tricks. Men as well as women work at the "natural" possible image of themselves, via contact lenses, porcelain caps, elevating shoes and other aids. We learn that barbers are becoming as expert at dyeing hair as the most deft colorist in a beauty salon.

So Kermit might as well be flexible about it. It all depends upon the line of work he seeks. A "front" man must look to his appearance more than the back office fellow. Darkening his hair can be regarded as a possible weapon in Kermit's arsenal, to be employed if the assault requires a little play acting. The important thing is to get the show — which is Kermit's ability — on the road. To the assault approaches, including a bit of make-up may be necessary.

At this crossroads, Kermit should feel free to trim it's — and his hair — to the wind rather than fight it too hard. He can save his fight for important, moral issues. Cosmetics are just window-dressing and no one need fight about that except, perhaps, a window-dresser!

Oven Meal No. 3

(Could Be Automatic)

This is the thing week I have dealt with oven dinners Today's featured recipe is what I am calling General Purpose Casserole and there is a story behind it.

My sister Peady is on the board of directors of a large nursery school and they were shoeing at the home of one of the parents. Sixty were expected.' A committee was to plan the food. My sister had not been asked to bring anything so she telephoned the hostess and asked what she could do. The hostess said "Bring a good nourishing casserole. Last year we ran out of turkey and ham and I would have given anything to have had something tucked away for an emergency." And then laughingly "If it isn't needed our family of seven can soon gobble it up next day".

My sister does not need my help but she asked for it and when I suggested this General Purpose Casserole she asked for a list of the ingredients she had to buy for it. I was going out to do some marketing so bought them for her. She was coming to my house for dinner that night so she made it here while I hovered.

GENERAL PURPOSE CASSEROLE (serves 6 generously)

Three - quarters pound ground beef (shank, 45¢), 3-4 pound ground pork (45¢), 2-3 cup raw rice, 1 1-2 cups boil water, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup condensed tomato soup, 1-2 cup milk (or evaporated milk), 1 egg, beaten, 1 medium onion, grated, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-8 teaspoon pepper, 1 tablespoon Worcestershire Sauce Combine rice, hot water and 1-2 teaspoon salt and bring to boil, covered. Turn off heat for 5 minutes. Turn heat on as low as possible and cook covered until all water is absorbed. Combine all remaining ingredients and cooked rice and pack into large round or square casserole. Bake 1 hour at 350 deg. Fahr. This may be served at once but we cooling it and refrigerated it overnight.

It was needed for the dinner party and Peady had covered it with thin slices of cheese and reheated it in her hostess' oven. It was a great success for the folks at the end of the queue were watching those platters deplete before their turns came — when suddenly appeared the bubbling hot casserole. Their eyes lit up as they read into it. My sister recommended it to me for you to try.

CHERRY COTTAGE PUDDINGS

Beat 1 egg and add 1-2 cup sugar while beating. Add 1 cup flour sifted with 1 teaspoon baking powder and 1-4 teaspoon salt. Then add 1-3 cup milk, 3 tablespoons melted shortening, 1-4 teaspoon lemon extract, 1-2 teaspoon vanilla and 1-2 to 1 cup stoned and chopped cherries and bake in greased muffin pans 25 minutes at 350 deg. Fahr. Turn out and serve with Cherry Sauce: Stone and chop enough cherries to make 1-2 cup. Add enough hot water to make it up to 1 cup. Bring to boiling point. Meanwhile mix together very well 1 tablespoon cornstarch and 1-3 cup sugar and stir in until thick. Reduce heat and cook slowly, stirring occasionally, until clear, about 5 minutes. Add 1 teaspoon lemon juice and serve hot over pudding. Note: Fresh frozen cherries may be used when fresh cherries are not in season but amount of sugar in sauce should be reduced.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Girls in Trouble? Why?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I am told that some girls actually get themselves into trouble on purpose. What would ever be a reason for such behavior?—L. G.

DEAR L. G.:—The psychologists and social workers offer a half dozen common reasons why girls become pregnant outside of marriage. Some of these indicate the behavior as more or less deliberate. They are:

(1) She resents the domination of her mother or father and this is her way of getting back at them; (2) She copies the example of others she admires; (3) The affection of her lover supplies a warmth which has been denied her in childhood years; (4) She does not have the self-discipline to keep control of her emotions and impulses; (5) Her knowledge of the facts of life is inadequate for her own protection; (6) She may have been seduced by an unscrupulous man.

The reasons for the act indicate the ways to prevent it. Sufficient knowledge, loving parents, developed self-control, care in where she goes and with whom, and a full recognition of how the consequences can affect her whole life—all of these have a part in helping her to avoid this terrible mistake.

DEAR DORIS:—My husband had a business which went bankrupt. He found a salesman's job with headquarters in a city 400 miles from here. He used to come home most weekends and has always loved his home. He has been at me to move, although he knows we can't afford it and the children would have to change schools in the middle of a term.

Lately his letters have been few and far between, and I haven't seen him for two months. I am forced to face the possibility that he has another woman. What am I to do? We have always been close but I am bewildered by his silence.—STILL HOPING.

DEAR STILL HOPING:—It's human nature to hope. But don't expect your husband to be a superman. That old song: "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder—For Somebody Else" has a lot of truth in it.

Whether or not there is money for it, you can't afford not to be where he is. Ship yourself and company off, as fast as possible, and land in his (erstwhile) loving arms. And wait not upon the manner of your going!

DEAR DORIS:—My father delivers a long lecture to me about the importance of telling the truth and being straightforward. Then I hear him telling a lie to a man at the door that he'll be sorry, but he has no baskets—when I know there are several in the cellar. He even tells Mom to say he is not in, when a certain long-winded guy calls him up. And she does.

Which is right? If he can do these convenient things, why can't I carry a mathematical formula into an exam on my cuff? I still have to work out the problem (which uses the formula) myself.—JOEY.

DEAR JOEY:—Ask him to tell you which is right. It may surprise him to see that his behavior is contradicting his own wise counsel. Trifling with the truth is the first subtle step towards getting off the beam.

Since two wrongs do not make a right, and you are obviously still thinking clearly at this point, you will have to carry the torch. It isn't that hard to Memorize a formula.

PERMIT LIQUOR

CAPE TOWN (AP) — Parliament's lower house voted 68 to 19 Saturday to permit South Africa's non-whites to buy packaged liquor. Senate approval is considered routine. The government argued that bootlegging is selling to non-whites anyway so it sponsored the bill in hopes of picking up extra tax revenue.

Palmer Wins Western, Snead Next

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) Steady - putting Arnold Palmer fired a par-71 for a 271 total to win the Western Open golf crown Sunday. Sam Snead, who played in a threesome with him, shot a 66 for a second - place 273.

The $5,000 first-prize money increased Palmer's winnings to $26585 in United States Professional Golfers Association tournaments this year. Gary Player of South Africa leads with $28,704.

Bob Goetz thrilled the crowd Sunday with a course record-breaking round of 63—eight under par, which gave him a $78. The previous competitive record at Blythefield Country Club was 64.

Defending - champion Stan Leonard of Vancouver had a 69 for $70.

Snead picked up $2,800 for second place.

John Pott fashioned a 67 on the final round and wound up third with a 274, worth $1,800.

Leonard ended in a four-way tie for 10th place and picked up $870.

Al Balding of Toronto, who was tied for fourth after Saturday's round, blew to a 77 Sunday, finishing far down the list with a 284. He won $150.

SEEK MEDIATION

ZURICH (AP) — Hopelessly deadlocked in their angry dispute over South Tyrol, Austria and Italy decided Sunday to seek outside mediation. Austria has been demanding autonomy for the predominantly German-speaking Bolzano province in South Tyrol which she ceded to Italy after the First World War. Italy has merged Bolzano with adjacent and predominantly Italian-speaking Trento.

Kidd Thrills Big Crowd

By NEVILLE HAMILTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ST. LAMBERT, Que. (CP)—The Canadian senior track and field championships wound up here Saturday night with four young Canadians starring in the spotlight.

The most exciting performance of the two-day meet was turned in Friday night by Bob-Fisher-Smith, a 17-year-old high school student from Ottawa who ran the 100-yard dash in 9.8 seconds.

Friday night his time was good enough to tie the Canadian open record for the event but 24 hours later Harry Jerome of Vancouver had established a Canadian mark of 9.5 seconds at a meet in Victoria.

Toronto's East York Track Club contributed two outstanding athletes to the meet.

Bruce Kidd, rated by the Athletic Annual as the world's top three-miler lived up to his billing, running the three - mile event in 13 minutes 51.6 seconds. This was far off his best time of 13:36 which he ran earlier this spring in California but he brought the 2,000 screaming fans to their feet as he sprinted the last 100 yards of his race.

His left arm swinging in a most unorthodox manner, the 21-year-old middle-distance runner completely baffled his only challenger, Steve Ramsa of Britain, with his sudden spurts on the turns and long-strided jogging on the stretches. The experienced pacer left the British runner 200 yards behind when he hit the tape.

Bill Crothers picked up two victories for the Toronto club, one in the 440 and the other in the 880-yard run. He also beat Britain's Adrian Metcalfe in an anchor man's duel in the mile relay.

The 20-year-old pharmacy student at the University of Toronto won the 440-yard run in 47.9 seconds in a field of high-ranking competitors. His time for the 880 was 1:53.9.

Mexico exported 1,200,000 tons of sulphur in 1960, making it the world's second-largest producer to the United States.

Jersey Nips Leafs Twice, Jets Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Columbus Jets are still riding high in the International League, sweeping a three-game weekend series against Syracuse Chiefs, while second - place Charleston Marlins lost two out of three to Buffalo Bisons.

On Sunday, Columbus defeated Syracuse, 11-3 and 4-3. Charleston and Buffalo split, the Marlins taking the first game, 8-1 and Buffalo the nightcap, 5-0. Jersey City took two from Toronto, 6-3 and 1-0 while Rochester won the opener, 7-3 with Richmond taking the afterpiece of a twinbill, 1-0.

John Schalva, Buddy Pitchard and Roman Mejias homered for the Jets in the first game. Mejias and Elmo Plaskett hit second-game homers.

Ken Sleeth and Willard Schmidt held heavy-hitting Buffalo to just seven hits, the former pitching a three-hitter in opener. Buffalo put together two of its four hits with a sacrifice fly to score the lone run of the nightcap.

Jersey City's Dave Stanhouse went the route in the first game for his eighth victory. In the second game, Sherman Jones gave only two hits and was relieved by Clarence Latter the last game.

Rochester's four runs in the eighth inning of the opener, broke a 3-3 tie. The big blow was a bases-loaded double by Luke Easter. Fred Kipp drove in the lone run for Richmond in the nightcap and held the Wings to five hits for the victory.

TAKES GRAND PRIX

PARIS (AP)—Baillo, a French horse, won the 400,000 - franc ($80,000) Grand Prix of Paris by four lengths Sunday after sparting ahead in the home stretch.

Frisco Gets Pro Puck Franchise

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Agreement to operate a Western Hockey League franchise in San Francisco for five years beginning with the 1961 - 62 season was reached Saturday night.

The proposal calls for rental of the huge Cow Palace auditorium for five years on the basis of at least 35 hockey games and one or more ice shows annually, plus installation of an ice rink to cost approximately $255,000.

Los Angeles was granted a WHL franchise at the same time one was approved for San Francisco.

Other cities in the nine-team circuit are Portland, Ore.; Seattle and Spokane, Wash.; Vancouver, Calgary, Edmonton and Winnipeg.

The league will operate in two divisions, American and Canadian. The league directors meet in Seattle today to draw up a schedule.

Yama Bahama Wins Over Gonzalez

NEW YORK (AP) — Yama Bahama, a veteran fighter from Bimini, the Bahamas, won a unanimous 10 - round decision over Jose Gonzalez, of Puerto Rico Saturday night. Gonzalez weighed 157½, Bahama 153.

Referee Art Mercante voted six rounds for Bahama, three for Gonzalez and called one even. Judge Frank Forbes had Bahama ahead 5-2 and Judge Joe Armstrong gave the winner eight rounds, Gonzalez one and saw one even.

In the early rounds Bahama, whose real name is William Butler, outfought Gonzalez when he outslugged him from inside and made the 21-year-old Puerto Rican back down.

It was Gonzalez' fifth setback in 24 bouts. He has drawn once.

For Bahama, 28, it was his 65th victory against 11 losses.

Wark pitched the victory and drove in the winning run with a single in the fourth inning. Daryl Schwindt hurled for the Senators.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Cec H Carver Sports Editor

It has had its lean years, and its plump ones. Crops have been good and bad and so has business in its member communities. But the South Hastings Baseball League, like Ole Man River, still keeps rollin' along.

It is one of the oldest rural baseball organizations in the province. Down through the years, thanks to forsighted enthusiastic officials and players, it has maintained a high degree of consistency that would put some urban associations to shame.

Member teams and communities such as Latta, Foxboro, Read, Shannonville and Canniffon possess a fine spirit of sportsmanship. True, they have had their little differences, arguments and whatnot but they haven't needed a Supreme Court to settle them.

I do not know who originated the league, but the charter members and those who followed have handed down a heritage of sportsmanship, community spirit and co-operation that has lost nothing in the passing.

The torch has fallen into good hands. Younger men have taken it up and within the last year or so new avenues have been opened which should guarantee many years of successful operation for the grey-thatched parent body.

In other words the South Hastings Baseball League has gone modern and is probably the only organization of its kind in rural Ontario that is developing a farm system.

Realizing the need and aware of the potential material available in the playing districts such fine young men as Lorne Jarrell, John Plumpton, Gregg (son of Micky) MacDonald and Fred Furbidge are spearheading efforts to provide a "feed-box" for the league.

Lorne is the president and John the secretary of the South Hastings Little League, born last year and giving evidence of mushrooming into a healthy youngster. George and Fred are the president and secretary respectively, of the brand new South Hastings Intermediate League at present in the toddling stage but showing signs of plenty of promise.

The Little League has five clubs, the Canniffon Jets and Comets, Foxboro, Carmel and the Corbyville Rockets. Lorne is the organizer, manager and coaches some 76 youngsters between the ages of 9 and 13 are now playing organized baseball—and loving it.

But the question arose what to do with these youngsters when they "graduate" due to age limitations? George MacDonald and Fred Furbidge came up with an answer. They formed the Intermediate League.

The intermediate loop which got under way this year was organized for players between the ages of 14-18. Graduates from this circuit, at least those with the required ability, should be ready for the parent organization.

The lanternmediate league at the moment is comprised of three teams from Canniffon, Foxboro and Latta. It is hoped by next year entries from Consecon, Shannonville and Read will be in the fold.

At the moment there is a shortage of ball diamonds but it is felt that the ball parks at the new Canniffon Community Centre and the new school at Carmel will provide some answer to the problem.

Executive members of the junior organizations are working hard in their respective spheres. The Little League is well on its way and might be expanded another year to accommodate the surplus of young players.

The intermediates are in the throes of organization and prospects look bright. As was noted they expect to have a complete league roster next season.

The MacDonalds, Furbidges, Jarrels and Plumptons are to be commended on their efforts in organizing and maintaining the "feed-boxes" of the SHBL. They are doing a splendid job and in return all they ask is the co-operation and support of the fare of the league district.

The good people of Read, Latta, Canniffon, Shannonville and Foxboro with those of non-representative communities of the district have been generous in their support of SHBL teams for decades.

I'm sure they realize and appreciate the excellent job being done by those in charge of the minor criesis of the league. They know the future of the diamond game in the district depends on the youngsters and I'm equally sure they won't let them down.

Norm Cash, 26, is money in the bank for Detroit Tigers but he is drawing interest all over the American League as the circuit's potential most valuable player for 1961 as well as its triple crown champion.

The Tigers first baseman slammed three home runs Sunday to share the day's spotlight with Chicago White Sox who soared to their 10th straight sweeping a doubleheader from Washington 7-3 and 6-3. The double triumph gave Al Lopez' comeback crew a record of 17 victories in its last 18 games.

Despite Cash's heroics, the Tigers could do no better than split with Cleveland, thereby cutting their first place lead in the American League race to 1½ games over second place New York. The Tigers won the opener 6-3, and Cleveland took the nightcap 4-3. The Yankees downed Minnesota 8-4. Baltimore defeated Los Angeles 9-3 in 14 innings. Boston and Kansas City split a pair. The Red Sox winning the first game 7-4 and the As salvaging the nightcap 2-0.

Saturday Detroit defeated Cleveland 5-4. Other scores were: Washington 6 Chicago 2; New York 10 Minnesota 7; Kansas City 9 Boston 3, and Los Angeles 4 Baltimore 1.

Cash drove in four runs in the opener, walloping a pair of two - run homers off loser Wynn Hawkins. His slugging enabled Jim Bunning to register his seventh victory.

EJECTED PERSAALL

Jim Piersall, the Indians' temperamental outfielder, became carried in the fifth when hit on the wrist by a Bunning pitch and charged to the mound. Piersall, along with two teammates who came to his assistance, were ejected.

Cash's nightcap homer was enough. The Indians snapped a tie in the ninth when Chuck Essegian sent a drive off the right field fence with one out and the bases loaded. Ironically, Essegian was not credited with a hit because Vic Power failed to touch second and was forced for the second out as the winning run scored.

Cash leads the American League in batting with .377, in runs batted in with 66, and his 26 homers are only three behind league leader Roger Maris of the Yankees. The stocky Texan was acquired from Cleveland April 12, 1960. He never got into a regular season game with Cleveland.

Veterans Billy Pierce and Early Wynn pitched the victories for the White Sox who now trail front running Detroit by 9½ games. Nellie Fox, with three hits and two RBI was the Sox batting star in the opener and Floyd Robinson, with four hits and two RBI, paced their hitters in the nightcap.

Catcher Ellie Howard drove in four runs with a bases-loaded home run and single and offset a four-run and single to account for Kansas City Athletics' victories over Boston. Dick Hall, the seventh pitcher to work for the Orioles, shut out the Angels for two innings and took the victory. Ron Kline who served up the home - run ball to Hansen, took the loss.

Mike Fornieles pitched four scoreless innings to protect Don Schwall's sixth Red Sox victory in seven decisions. Gene Stephens smashed a two - run homer to give the As the split and further Bob Shaw with his first Kansas City victory since he came from the White Sox two weeks ago.

Ronnie Hansen homered in the top of the 14th and Jack Fisher survived a bases loaded situation in the bottom of the inning to feature the Orioles' marathon victory over the Angels which consumed four hours and 42 minutes and 16 pitchers.

Knudson Wins Second Ont. Open

ELLINGTON, Ont. (CP)—Displaying disrespect for par, George Knudson captured his second straight Ontario open championship here Saturday with a 72 - hole total of 275, seven strokes better than his nearest competitor.

The 23 - year - old professional at Toronto Oakdale Club shaved 13 strokes from par in compiling the identical score with which he won the title last year at the Cherry Hill course in Ridgeway, Ont.

After running away from the rest of the field with scores of 64 and 69 in the first two rounds, he "relaxed and played to win" with a 71 and par-72 for the final 36 holes.

Windsor's Rudy Horvath finished a distant second with 282. Moe Norman of the Streetsville low course in Stouffville carded a 284, good for third place.

Veteran Nick Weslock of Toronto Mississauga, plagued with putting miseries for most of the tournament, led the amateurs with 286 to capture fourth place in the over-all standings.

MOST ABOVE PAR

Knudson's victory was worth $500. Horvath and Norman collected $400 and $300 for finishing second and third, respectively.

A prohibitive favorite to win the tournament after shooting a 64 in practice round, Knudson nevertheless was in trouble more than once in the last round but each time managed a clean recovery.

On one hole his tee shot was lodged on a thickly - wooded bank above a running stream, about 20 yards from the green. Obtaining a precarious footing, he used a wood to reach the green and carded a one - over-par four for the hole.

Norman who finished nine strokes off the pace hit 33 of 36 greens on the last two rounds but his putting proved his downfall. He three - putted four greens on each round.

TIE FOR FIFTH

Tied for fifth place prize money were Bob Rose of Toronto, Gerry Kesserine of Kitchener and Bill MacKinney of Toronto, each with scores of 289.

A field of more than 200 professionals and amateurs registered for the start of the tournament was cut to 137 for the second round and 61 for the last two.

The low 20 amateurs and ties in the tournament and the low 20 and ties from the Ontario amateur tournament July 19-22 will qualify for a special 36-hole Canada Cup team.

Reds Up Lead To Three

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Experts shook their heads in disbelief last December when Cincinnati general manager Bill Dewitt traded shortstop Roy McMillan for Joey Jay, a second rate Milwaukee righthander.

"How can you trade away your best infielder for a pitcher who has not won more than nine games in any season?" they asked.

The experts were more critical last May when the Reds sent their No. 1 catcher, Ed Bailey, to San Francisco Giants in for second baseman Don Blasingame.

Bailey reached double figures in homers in each of the last five years," they pointed out accusingly, "while Blasingame had just had his poorest season, hitting a sickly .230. Besides, who's going to catch for Cincinnati?"

CRITICS ANSWERED

The Reds answered their critics long ago. They merely served up their two-game Sunday sweep over Los Angeles Dodgers. The triumph widened the Reds' lead to four games over the Dodgers in the National League.

Cincinnati scored all their runs in the first inning and it was Blasingame who opened the gates with the first of his three hits. The Reds got eight hits off loser Bob Willoughby and four successors. Gerry Zimmerman, who displaced Bailey's shoes as the team's No. 1 catcher, got two of them.

San Francisco's third place Giants fell four games off the pace, splitting a double header with St. Louis Cardinals. The Giants won the opener 8-4 and the Cards took the second 3-1. Chicago's Cubs downed Milwaukee Braves 5-3. Philadelphia earned a split with Pittsburgh, winning the nightcap 4-3 after the Pirates had won the opener 10-5.

Scores Saturday were: Philadelphia 5 Pittsburgh 2; San Francisco 6 St. Louis 1; Milwaukee 13 Chicago 4; Los Angeles 9 Cincinnati 7.

Cincinnati used only two hits to score three runs in the first inning. After Blasingame singled, Gus Bell walked and Vada Pinson doubled home a run. Gordie Coleman drove in another with a sacrifice fly and the third run scored on a balk.

George Altman and Billy Williams slanged Warren Spahn for seven of the Cubs' 16 hits. Altman had a double, triple and a homer and scored three runs. Williams had four singles and drove in two. Don Cardwell, with the help of Barney Schultz, who pitched hitless ball in 3 1-3 innings, won his sixth.

Three St. Louis errors and singles by Jim Davenport and Willie Mays gave the Giants four runs in the ninth to overcome a 4-2 Card lead in the first game. Ray Sadecki, 20-year - old Redbird southpaw, permitted the Giants only two hits as he registered his sixth victory in the nightcap. Stan Musial's double featured a two-run rally in the second against loser Billy Loes. Mays' 18th homer in the ninth ruined Sadecki's shutout bid.

Homers decided the Philly-Pirate twin bill. Robert Clemente had two for Pittsburgh in the first game, his second igniting a four - run rally in the seventh inning. Pancho Herrera slammed a two -run homer in the seventh of the nightcap to snap a 2-2 tie.

WALLS RECALLED

Kenmors Take Over Lead

By PETER GARVEY

The Belleville Kenmors took over the lead of the Lakeshore Intermediate Baseball League over the weekend with victories over the Peterborough Fannings and Newcastle.

They edged Peterborough 8-7 Saturday night in Peterborough and trimmed Newcastle 2-1 Sunday afternoon at the Fair Grounds they handed Newcastle a decisive 15-2 defeat. The wins stretched their unbeaten string to five.

KENMORS 15	NEWCASTLE 2
PETERBOROUGH 8	PETERBORO 7

Fine hurling and fifteen-hit clouting featured the fifth straight victory of Kenmors Sunday afternoon. Deb Masters was the mound hero, taking over from injured Billy Monzon in the third and holding Newcastle to three hits over the rest of the route. He struck out ten and walked one.

Monzon did not give up a hit the two innings he worked. Masters pitched hitless ball until the sixth, two of his three hits coming in the top of the ninth.

The Kenmor bats had no mercy for Newcastle hurler Ted Lane who was touched freely throughout the game. They pounded him for a homer, two doubles and a dozen singles. He issued but one walk and whiffed three.

They got to him for back-to-back singles and three doubles for four runs in the first inning. They skipped the second and scored three more in the third and fourth off five clouts, to sew up the victory.

A single in the fifth and two runs each in the seventh and eighth put the game out of reach.

Newcastle's first run came in the third off a walk, a stolen base and two wild pitches. They combined two singles and the lone Kenmor error in the ninth for their second run.

Moe Hunter led the hit parade with a homer and two singles. Larry Mavety contributed three singles with Gary Goyer hitting a double and single. Dutty Follwell and Masters each had a pair of singles with Ricky Locke smashing out a double and Larry Soden and Glen Clarke each good for a single.

Gibson, with a double, and Lane and Brunt with singles, were the Newcastle hitters.

The teams:

Newcastle: Trim, Rowe, Walton, Haskill, Brunt, Lane, Foster, Dickinson, Gray, Gibson.

Kenmors: Locke, Follwell, Vaughan, Soden, Hunter, Goyer, Mavety, Aseltine, Clarke, Monzom, Masters.

Moss Rockets To Sports Car Win

By HARRY CALNEK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

ORONO (CP)—Stirling Moss is only a little man, but he's one of the fastest in the world and he showed it before the largest crowd in Canadian motor-racing history Saturday.

In addition to winning the 200-mile, two-heat race in two hours, 13 minutes and 54.6 seconds, Moss lowered the lap-record for the 2.5-mile track to 1:40 from 1:47, set two weeks ago by Ludwig Heimrath of Toronto.

And he did it all with machine-like precision, often waving to spectators as he knifed through corners at zooming speeds.

Sweden's Joe Bonnier and Olivier Gendebien of Belgium finished second and third in identical Ferrari 156SL cars that had engines of a litre less capacity than the Seventy-Climax powerplant in the Lotus. They were more than a lap behind Moss.

HIT FINE SPEED

In the dying moments of the second heat Gendebien was clocked at 1:41.6 as he tried unsuccessfully to gain back third place stolen by the powerful Sadler Mark V piloted by Grant Clark of Georgetown. In overall standings Clark finished fifth. He was seventh in the first 100-mile round.

Bonnier held the lead in the first four laps of the final heat, and though he drove with blazing speed he couldn't hold off Moss who had lapped him in the first heat.

Gendebien likened Clark and his car to Soviet cosmonaut Yuri Gagarin. "He didn't pass me on a corner, oh no," said the three-time winner of Le Mans. "But he was so powerful on the straight it was just whoosh."

The race officially opened the $750,000 circuit 60 miles east of Toronto. Estimating the number of people who climbed fences and children under 16 who were admitted free, officials put the total figure of spectators at more than 40,000.

CAUSED TRAFFIC JAM

As the final heat of the major event was about to start in the late afternoon, provincial police said traffic was still lined up for several miles. At one time during the day the line of cars stretched some 13 miles.

The first international sports car race ever run in the country, it drew 22 entries, 18 of which started.

Moss collected the Player's Trophy and $2,700 in prize money. Bonnier's share was $1,750 and Gendebien's $900.

Joyces Edge Cobourg 2-1

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Joyce Real Estate moved back into undisputed possession of first place in the H. and D. Softball League Saturday night when they squeezed out a 2-1 win over the Cobourg Merchants in Cobourg.

The winners pushed across the deciding run in the top of the ninth. Each club had scored once back in the fourth and had turned in a number of fine fielding plays to prevent further scoring until the ninth.

Claude Carr walked to open the Joyce ninth. Goyer forced Carr at second but then reached third on Faulkner's infield single and a passed ball. Chuck Kingston, grounded out to first as Goyer raced home with the winner.

Joyces scored their first run in the fourth when Carr singled, took second on Faulkner's single, third on the game's lone error and home on Kingston's base hit.

Cobourg noded only one pitch to the game in the bottom of the frame. Catcher Al Church lined a home run down the left field foul line for a 1-1 score. Campbell and Dawe walked to open the same inning, with one out, took second and third on Mills' long fly but died there when Lambert grounded out.

The Merchants came close in the seventh on a walk and Lingard's hit, with one out. Goyer barehanded a grasscutter near second, flipped to Elliott who relayed to first for the double play. Another key play was Faulkner's running catch of MacSpearn's homer bid in the eighth.

The losers had two on in the ninth on a walk and a hit but Goyer handled Sharpe's grounder to end it. Kingston, Faulkner, Elliott, Soule, Carr and Goyer starred afield throughout.

Frank Walker pitched good ball to pick up his first win, allowing six hits and walking four. He did not strike out a man.

Jim "Sleepy" Dawe was touched for five hits in defeat, four of them of the infield variety. He nipped nine on strikes and walked two.

Bert Faulkner with two, Chuck Kingston, Garry Goyer and Claude Carr had the leadership's five hits. Al Church homered and singled, Dawe singled twice, Roby Campbell and Stu Lingard once each for the Merchants.

Jerome Runs 100 In 9.5

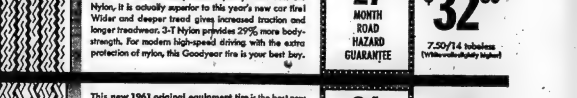
The Canadian sprinter who runs for the University of Oregon trimmed a tenth of a second off the 23-year-old Canadian native mark with a 9.5-second run.

The rail, at the Vancouver Island track and field championships, was no surprise. The record, set by Percy Williams, has been equalled many times and Jerome, a North Vancouver product, was among the many who tied it.

Jerome was a co - holder of the world record until it was broken by Frank Budd in New York Saturday. Budd clipped a tenth of a second off the record set by Percy.



Another record toppled Saturday at Victoria. Dave Steen of Burnaby, B.C.—Jerome's teammate at the University of Oregon — threw the shot 64 feet. Steen set the former record—53-feet 4-inches set in 1958.

While Steen was watching his throw being measured, he was hit in the head by a discus. He is in satisfactory condition in hospital.

Father Time Ally of Ole Archie

NEW YORK (AP) — Archie Moore admits that television is responsible for his current boxing style.

"I used to be a beautiful boxer, with a standup style," the shareholder of the world light heavyweight title says modestly.

"But along came that commercial monster, television, and forced me to change. TV wants action fighters, and classical boxers aren't appreciated. So I changed my style to a compensative type, you might say. I try to be on all fronts, with a little of this, and a little of that. It's a hard style to master."

A man of many ages—42, 46 take your pick — he gave his dissertation on boxing styles, weight control, his future plans and other diversified subjects in an interview.

Concerning his ability to compete successfully at his advanced age, he said: "Father time has been my ally. I keep young in mind. I don't worry. I stagnate. Every day of my life I try to learn something new."

At the Belle

New Jerry Lewis Production, "The Ladies Man", due soon

Jerry Lewis again combines his four-way talents as producer, director, writer and actor for his newest Paramount release, "The Ladies Man", which opens its local engagement beginning Wednesday at the Belle Theatre.

Co-starred in the Technicolor production are former Metropolitan Opera star turned comedienne Helen Traubel, Kathleen Freeman, Hope Holiday and Dawn Bess with newcomer discovery Pat Stanley seeking her motion picture debut. Miss Stanley left the Broadway cast of "Fiorello", the musical hit, to appear as Jerry's leading lady. Guest stars Buddy Lester, George Hart and Harry Ames and His Band are importantly featured, along with 31 gorgeous blondes, brunettes and redheads.

The girls portray career-seeking residents of the Hollywood boarding house which is the principal setting of the comedy. Jerry concerns the adventures — or rather, misadventures — of one Herbert H. Heebert, who, having been jilted by his fiancee, has sworn off women for life. He takes a job as houseboy for motherly-looking Helen Welcomeston (Helen Traubel), unaware that he will be the only male in her sweltering household of man-hating beauties. Miss Welcomeston prevails upon him to stay and in spite of himself Herby becomes involved in the girls affairs. By the time he finishes his "education" at the boarding house, he has developed a whole new attitude toward the female sex.

Included in the entertainment offered by "The Ladies Man" are songs, dances and specialty routines by Jerry, the girls and the other stars.

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

If the International Olympic Committee can come up with a workable audience code without putting a serious crimp in the Gaiety, or even wrecking them, it will be the miracle of the age. And don't look for miracles.

The big question apparently concerns training camps. This could be of great importance to Russia and the other Communist countries and could be of equal import to Canada and the United States. First of all, though, the IOC must decide what is meant by a training camp.

Is the Soviet army one huge training camp for its athletes? Does it mean young men attending colleges on athletic scholarships or does the IOC simply mean camps set up by governments to train athletes?

No hint of this came out of the IOC meeting at Athens the other day when the International committee drew up proposed new rules. "We now can interpret the rules to meet new situations, like training camps," said Avery Brundage of the IOC said.

He didn't expand on this remark.

WORKING FROM AVERY

Avery Brundage of Chicago said there was so much confusion after the 1960 Rome Games over the allegedly poor showing of some teams "that we sent a letter to all national committees warning against subsidies, training camps, and such like, as a means of building national prestige."

For years, since the Russians first entered the Games back in 1952, officials from the Western world have been saying the Soviet athletes are subsidized by the government. Most of the Soviet hockey players and track and field athletes are army men.

"It is good to come right out and say they are subsidized by the government," one Canadian sports official said this week. "But it makes a person wonder how Russian hockey players can become almost as good as Canadian amateurs in a few short years without being given unlimited time for training.

Then, again, how can we judge a sergeant in the Russian armed forces is supported by the state—whether he can play hockey or run or because he can shoot a gun? How can we police what they do?

FUTURE FOGGY

The official, who wished to remain anonymous, said many people in sport in the Western world thought the Russian army was a big athletic training camp.

The same, to a degree, could apply to athletic scholarships in the U.S. Most of Canada's male track and field athletes competing in Olympic, British Empire and Pan-American over the last 10 years were on scholarships to U.S. universities.

Could these be defined as training camps?

Jim Worrall of Toronto, president of the Canadian Olympic Association, says he doesn't know "whether the new definition will improve the over-all situation or make it worse."

"It will still be a question of interpretation and supervision. Then, of course, there is the question of who is going to police the situation in each country.

"Meanwhile," he added, "I guess we shouldn't panic."

Mein Kampf Money Maker But Profits to Maker Nil

By BOB THOMAS

STOCKHOLM (AP)—The documentary film Mein Kampf had made millions of dollars all over the world. But the man who made it has had no returns as yet.

He is Erwin Leiser, a Swedish intellectual who two years ago began to put together a film account of the rise and fall of Hitler.

The result startled the movie world and has effected social and political thinking.

"The film has been playing in 62 countries," reports Leiser, but his profits have been nil so far.

"Under my contract, I am supposed to get an accounting of the profits every six months. Last December there were none. At the end of June I will get another report. If there are still no returns, I will have some interesting developments in the courts."

SUCCESS IN GERMANY

Mein Kampf has proved the sleeper of the movie season. It has had a fantastic success in Germany itself.

The film has had a strange history in the United States. Producers William Perlberg and George Seaton made Mein Kampf in Copenhagen and praised it highly to Paramount. They sent a print to New York and proposed an English narration by William Holden, who was also enthused about it.

Paramount replied that Americans wouldn't pay to see a recounting of Nazi horrors. Columbia Studios bought the film at a reported $50,000. It now is expected to gross between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000 in the United States alone.

The man who made Mein Kampf became interested in the project as culture editor for a Swedish newspaper.

"I became acquainted with many persons who had access to the immense amount of footage about the Nazis," Leiser says. He found a producer to finance him and then began the great task of editing the film down to feature length. He served as director and writer.

APPEALS TO YOUNG

Why did Mein Kampf prove so popular?

"I think it appeals greatly to young people," says Leiser. "They have read about these things in schools, but they really can't comprehend what until they see them with their own eyes.

"What they see is real. These things cannot be faked."

There have been other documentaries of Nazi Germany, but they have not had the impact of Mein Kampf. One reason is timing: The revival of interest in Nazism spawned by the Eichmann trial. But credit must also be due Leiser's skill as a film maker. Amazingly, Mein Kampf was his first movie.

He used some of the techniques I learned in making radio and TV documentaries in Sweden," he explains. "Mainly, I try to put nothing between the audience and the facts. I want them to discover it for themselves."

Wayne and Shuster Show Gets Panning From Writer

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Johnny Wayne and Frank Shuster, using their own imaginative material, are a superior comedy team. But, unless they were assisting TV, they would never have written for themselves the tired trivia that constituted the first episode of their new series in which they are just actors.

Holiday Lodge, which premiered on CBS Tuesday night in Jack Benny's summer replacement, has the Canadian comedy's playing fun - loving social directors at a plush resort.

The show was seen earlier in Canada over CBC-TV.

The plot was that old mistaken - identity device — a convention of morticians pretending to be florists. When they arrive at Holiday Lodge, acting exactly like TV's idea of the heads of a crime syndicate, our heroes believe it is a convention of gangsters.

Sample humor:

"You can't drag Holiday Lodge through the courts."

"No, that would be messy."

I'll bet some of the mail CBS will receive outraged funeral directors will be more entertaining than the first show.

After all of David Susskind's criticism of TV during his testimony during the Federal Communications Commission hearing last week, it is interesting to see how much business — if any — his independent packaging agency, Talent Associates, is able to line up for three major networks next season.

Susskind has made a hobby of sounding off about the low state of TV programming over the years but he has never had such a good time before.

Actually, Susskind has not had a particularly successful season this year. His Family Classics series, which started out as two - part shows on successive nights, dwindled to one hour shows, on way out. The offbeat series launched recently, will not last the summer, and NBC is quietly stewing about his forthcoming Great Ghost Story summer series, due to start early next month but still very much in the planning stage.

Recommended tonight: "Peter Gunn," ABC 10:30-11 EDT — singer Jane Morgan makes her debut on the show as a dramatic actress.

Tiny Virus Is Delaying General Use in Canada Of Oral Polio Vaccine

By KEN FRITCHARD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — A virus that's harmless to human but defies detection is delaying general use of a Canadian-made oral poliomyelitis vaccine.

Virologists at the University of Toronto's Connaught Medical Laboratories are on the trail of the virus, called VS40. They know it's in the live-virus vaccine because it makes monkeys sick. But they haven't been able to detect any harmful effect on humans.

A large quantity of live-virus polio vaccine is ready for use if there should be an epidemic in Canada. In the absence of such an emergency, the food and drug department of the federal health department hesitates to license the vaccine as long as it contains VS40.

"Separation of the simian virus from the oral vaccine will be achieved," says Dr. J. K. W. Ferguson, Connaught director. "But time is required."

SALK DOES JOB

Meanwhile, Canadians are being protected by Salk vaccine, a killed-virus type that has been in quantity in Canada since 1955 and has been shipped to 40 countries.

Dr. Ferguson says Salk vaccine has done a good job. Why then is so much effort being put into production here of live-virus vaccine similar to types used in Iron Curtain countries for nearly two years?

Dr. Ferguson explains that live-virus vaccine probably has an advantage in time of epidemic.

"A dose of live vaccine will probably produce more persons more quickly and for a longer time than one injection of Salk vaccine. It is possible that live vaccine, used on a large scale, might stop an epidemic. It was never claimed that Salk vaccine could do this."

Both types of vaccine do the same thing—cause the human system to grow antibodies that remain in the blood stream for years, attacking any polio virus that might appear.

WEAKENED STRAINS

Salk vaccine is made by growing polio virus on monkey kidneys immersed in a nutrient liquid developed originally at Connaught. The virus in this "monkey broth" is killed with formaldehyde. After refinement this vaccine is injected into humans.

The live-virus vaccine, produced from strains developed by Dr. Albert Sabin of the University of Cincinnati, contains weakened and non-virulent strains of polio virus. Taken by mouth, it leads to the growth of antibodies in the same way that a polio attack makes a person immune to further attacks.

Scientists have had reservations about the safety of some live-virus vaccines, Connaught's annual report for 1959-60 said their doubts "cannot be resolved by debate, but only by long and expensive researches in the laboratory and even more prolonged and expensive trials on hundreds of thousands of persons."

From such research came a report from New York in the middle of June that monkey kidney broth injected into newborn hamsters had caused cancer in 109 out of 154 tests. Dr. Bernice Eddy of the U.S. Public Health Service, made the tests.

NO SIGNIFICANCE

Her boss, Dr. Roderick Murray, was reported to have said more research is needed but that findings are of no significance in terms of vaccine safety.

In Toronto, a polio research expert said the ability of live polio virus to cause cancer in hamsters has little application to humans.

"These cancer-producing viruses have never worked in anything higher in the animal order than a hamster or a suckling mouse. The phenomenon will have to be explained of course, but there is no real relevance to the use of oral vaccine by humans."

Topics this week: Yuri Gagarin's spaceship, telephone voices and a model for summer vacationing bats.

INSIDE YURI'S SPUTNIK

Yuri Gagarin says the cabin of the Soviet spaceship that orbited him around the earth was much more spacious than an airplane's cockpit.

The cabin had all of the controls needed for observing earth, keeping contact with people on the ground, controlling the flight and if necessary, piloting the ship independently.

To his left, Gagarin wrote in the newspaper Pravda, were controls for the radio telephone, cabin temperature, manual operation and re-entry engines. To the right were a radio, food containers, and spaceship controls. Before him was the instrument panel, and below was a portable for observation of earth, and a television camera to observe the astronaut.

SPEAK SOFTLY

People do speak louder on long distance telephone calls than on local calls, a Bell Telephone laboratories survey shows. Voices rise about 3 decibels or sound measurement unit for every 1,000 miles the voice has to cover.

In addition, men talk louder than women. And New Yorkers talk louder than other people. Women, still they speak more softly, make more social calls, while most male calls are on business.

CAVE INN: VACANCY

Every year bats head for summer homes in the pleasant coastland from Rhode Island to Cape Cod—and now a Vermont scientist has found a cave that the bats use as a sort of motel along the way.

As many as 3,000 of the small brown bats can be found in the cave during April and May. But at least every three days there is a complete turnover in the cave's population.

Another strange finding: In April, 85 per cent of the bats are female. By the end of May all the bats in the cave are male, says Professor Wayne Davis of Middlebury College.

SHIPS ON ICE

For naval ships patrolling the frigid waters of the polar areas, ice is a real problem. It coats decks and bulkheads and the added weight sometimes affects the stability of the ship.

Now the U.S. Navy is working on new shipbuilding paints that hold promise. Ice won't stick to them.

Public Hearing Asked For Coyne Fleming Says No Bitter Debate Opens On Bill to Fire Governor

OTTAWA (CP)—The Liberals have started a chant in the Commons: "A public hearing for James E. Coyne."

This was the main line they followed Monday as the Commons began a bitter debate on the government bill asking Parliament to fire Mr. Coyne as governor of the Bank of Canada.

"We are not supporting the governor," said Opposition Leader Pearson, "but we are supporting the governor's tactics."

"The issue is simple decency and justice. The issue is whether a man in the high and responsible office of this mag can be thrown out of office by an act of Parliament without being given him the opportunity to face his accusers in a parliamentary committee."

Finance Minister Fleming gave a blunt "No" to the Liberal request that the bill be sent to the Commons banking committee where, he suggested, Coyne could be called as a witness.

Debate began Monday afternoon on a motion by Fleming that the bill be read a second time. Then Pearson moved an amendment to send the bill to a committee. Such action would kill the government measure.

No vote was taken Monday night and the issue was left hanging. Today the Commons switches back to debate on the budget in which, among other things, Mr. Fleming spelled out "fundamental differences" with Mr. Coyne.

Mr. Fleming said there has been an attempt in the press and elsewhere to dramatize the issue as a Coyne-versus-Fleming issue.

"It has been no such thing at any time. There is no personal element whatever in this issue, and there never has been.

"... throughout this entire situation I have acted as the spokesman of the government, and the government, and the government carrying out decisions that were not lightly arrived at."

Mr. Pearson said the bank governor was appointed during good behaviour — a term that means he can be removed only by Parliament. Now the government wants to have him removed on "only what the minister of finance wishes us to hear."

MADE SCAPEGOAT?

Mr. Coyne was being made a scapegoat, Pearson charged. He can be treated this way without any votes being held.

Mr. Coyne was not another point:

"There is nothing like knocking down a bank governor to take a minister's mind off massive unemployment."

"The only person who has any power in this Parliament is the accuser," said J. W. Pickersgill (L., Bonavista - Twillingate). "The attempt to throw a thin, this omnipotent little creature who sets himself up above Parliament."

Tearing strips from a dollar bill to illustrate his point, Mr. Pickersgill charged:

"The government of this government gets away with this measure, they can appoint their stooge as governor, that within

Dominion Day Holiday Plans Will Vary Across the Country

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Fun, formality and violent death, the usual components of Dominion Day celebrations in Canada, may be curtailed this year because the anniversary of Confederation falls on a Saturday.

Last year the July 1 weekend saw 122 persons killed in accidents, the worst three-day holiday toll in Canada's history.

Ontario led with 41 deaths, including 24 road fatalities and 14 drownings. Prince Edward Island was the only province without a fatality.

Safety organizations have issued the usual warnings. Police patrols will be strengthened and the death toll is low, however, it may be primarily due to the fact that many Canadians will not have three days off as they had last year with a Friday holiday.

The federal act proclaiming Dominion Day a holiday makes no special provision for it falling on a Saturday. Those normally working on Saturday off may get an extra day—in some cases Friday or Monday—depending on where they live, how the local and provincial governments decide to treat it and on their union or employer feels as to extra days off.

Montreal has no official celebrations planned, but stores and offices will be closed. Festivities in Quebec City, main event will be a ceremony at the Champlain monument where various groups will place flowers and Premier Robichaud of New Brunswick will speak.

Most retail stores in Winnipeg will be closed July 1, but will make up for it by remaining open Friday and Monday nights. Licensed premises will be open.

Name Montreal Man to Probe Building Strike

TORONTO (CP) — H. Carl Goldenberg, Montreal industrial and labor-management relations expert, was named today as a one-man Ontario royal commission to investigate the strife-ridden construction industry here.

Premier Frost, announcing the appointment, appealed for a return to work by some 7,500 strikers whose walkouts have spread from residential building in Metropolitan Toronto into such projects as an underpass, the subway and hydro and telephone construction.

"It is clear that work be resumed in all branches of the (construction) industry," Mr. Frost said to reporters as he announced the royal commission, establishment of which was part of a three-point program he promised strikers yesterday.

Forest Fires Still Burning In 5 Provinces

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Forest fires continued their paths of destruction through timberlands in five provinces Monday despite light rain which provided some relief in British Columbia, Saskatchewan and parts of Newfoundland.

No relief was in sight for fire-fighters in Ontario and Manitoba where a total of 76 blazes raged.

In Newfoundland, the tiny community of Grover in the Hare Bay area began evacuation amid reports of arson and sabotage in the district.

Officials said smoke hanging over the Kenaston, Sask., area made it almost impossible to pinpoint the exact position of the fire. They said the evacuation of Dover residents was a precautionary measure because of the smoke.

The most serious of the province's fires was believed to be burning in a three-mile circle around the community of Dover city but no one could be sure of the distance because of heavy smoke.

The rain eliminated temporarily a threat to a string of communities along a 30-mile front.

A dam at North Pond about 10 miles from Gambo was destroyed at the height of the fire Monday night—just before the rain came.

Officials fear the rush of water from the burned-out dam may swamp the Gambo bridge and block the Trans-Canada highway, only provincial artery.

The twin threats of smoke and wind kicked forces against a small area of mixed spruce, by water-dropping planes, who continued to fight Ontario's 29 fires.

Officials reported 22 fires burning in the northwestern Sioux Lookout area, 13 of which were out of control, ranged in size from 2,500 to 8,000 acres but no communities were threatened.

Most of the fires have been started by lightning which strikes ground most and sets it smouldering for hours or days before flames break out into the trees.

More than 40,000 acres have been burned over in Northwestern Ontario by the fires now in existence.

WHEAT EXPORTS CUTTING INTO HEFTY SURPLUS

Big Shipments To China, Japan

OTTAWA (CP)—Hefty wheat exports and poor crop prospects promise to cut into Canada's huge domestic wheat surplus, the Commons agriculture committee was told Monday.

Chief Commissioner W. C. McManamna, of the Canadian wheat board, said sales—stimulated by big shipments to Red China and record exports of some 50,000,000 bushels to Japan—would exceed 350,000,000 bushels.

Canada traditionally has been Canada's biggest buyer at around 90,000,000 bushels — it was 89,000,000 bushels last year —and the total forecast by Mr. McManamna compares with 302,000,000 bushels sold in 1952-53 when the Korean War provided a stimulus.

With drought threatening the Prairie bread basket, Canada may fall short of some lower grades in demand by foreign buyers, Mr. McManamna told the committee which held three sittings Monday and scheduled another Tuesday to conclude investigation of the board operations before the last crop year.

DISCUSSES BREAD

In other matters, Mr. McNamara or colleagues presented these views:

1. The biggest price increase in bread after a five - cent - a - bushel increase in wheat is 58 cents. A loaf-of-bread price increase has been described as tolerable by some.

2. Prairie farmers should be able to expect a uniform grain delivery quota of six bushels an acre around July 10—and seven bushels there - after until the end of the crop year, July 31.

3. Eastern farmers have only themselves to blame if they pay too much for western feed grains — although the wheat board was caught short by export demand for oats before placing closed last year on the Great Lakes.

4. Export demand for feed grains is blamed for slackening

HITS U.S. ACTION

Mr. McNamara also called United States action in replacing cash deals for wheat with Italy by a barter deal problems. Italy, he said — and he mentioned Lebanon, too — had been accepting cash for wheat but the U.S. felt impelled to try out a special assistance program.

On the whole, however, the board was watching its barter deals for wheat much more closely and its give - away programs with an eye to keeping competition for Canadian grain.

Mr. McNamara said eastern buyers of feed grains — Western Europe and Japan, for instance —should organize to cut distributing costs and practices forced oats and barley weren't responsible, but also for the prices some easterners paid.

CO-OP WINS CASE

OTTAWA (CP) — A Quebec co - operative won a $50,441 income tax case in the Supreme Court of Canada Monday. The court granted an appeal by La Cooperative Agricole Granby against Dr. Canon of Granby against an Exchequer Court ruling that it must pay tax on interest payments on money borrowed by the co - operative.

Coyne Accuses Fleming Of "Blackmailing Tactics", Demands Hearing in House

OTTAWA (CP) — James E. Coyne, sagrily demanding a parliamentary hearing on his battle with the government, has accused Finance Minister Fleming of "blackmailing tactics" and concealment of evidence in other cases.

The Bank of Canada governor leveled those charges—and others —in a hotly-worded open letter to Finance Minister Fleming.

Breaking silence for the first time in a week, Mr. Coyne made the letter public Tuesday in the opening stages of Commons debate on the government's bill to have Parliament fire him from his $50,000-a-year job.

The letter, also distributed by the central bank's agencies in eight cities across Canada, came out at about the time Mr. Fleming was flatly rejecting an opposition request that the issue be referred to the Commons banking committee.

Mr. Coyne, in the most bitterly-phrased statement to date, also:

1. Suggested the government tried to terrorize him into "resigning in disgrace."

2. Charged Mr. Fleming with "smear tactics."

3. Accused the minister of hiding "behind the shelter of your parliamentary privilege" in not bring serious charges against the governor.

4. Suggested that government plans for a snap election may have been behind its attempt to oust him.

5. Said the government had bartered away the independence of Bank of Canada directors and the short term "under pressure of acting as political puppets."

6. Accused the government of having "degraded" the standards of public life in Canada.

7. Suggested governor did not elaborate on charges "blackmailing" charge.

In the House statement June 15 rejecting the government's

Canada's Economic Pulse Slows in First Quarter

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's economic pulse slowed down a bit in the first quarter of this year as capital expenditures and business fell sharply and consumer spending slowed.

Gross National Product—total value of goods and services produced in the country—declined by $36,612,000,000 in the January-March period, the bureau of statistics reported today.

Discounting seasonal influences, this was a decrease of 1.2 per cent from the $36,436,000,000 rate in the final quarter of last year. But the bureau said most of this decline reflected "an unusually large drop" in inventory dends paid to foreign owners in Canadian firms.

The drop in business and consumer spending was largely offset, however, by substantial gains in outlays on new housing, a continued strong export trade and continued strength in government spending.

The fall - off in consumer spending was traced to a 10-percent drop in purchases of cars, furniture, appliances and other durable goods. Buying of new cars and cars fell two per cent.

Total consumer spending dipped to $23,836,000,000 from $23,944,000,000.

Personal income edged upward to a rate of $18,752,000,000 from $18,720,000,000 and estimated farm income remained steady at $1,340,000,000 from $1,228,000,000.

Corporate profits declined to $1,780,000,000—6.9 per cent of income, compared with last year's $1,912,000,000 or 7.4 per cent.

Exports hit an annual rate of $7,112,000,000 up from $6,812,000,000.

Expenditures by all governments rose to $6,556,000,000 from $6,342,000,000, figures were well above the 1960 average.

Triple Army Mobile Columns In Event of Nuclear Bombs

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) —The number of army mobile columns which would go into action in the event of nuclear bombardment of Canada will be raised to some 200, official sources said Monday night.

The planned increase will require enlargement of the 42,000-member Canadian militia. Existing size of the increase has not been determined but it will run into thousands.

The army, in its expanding national survival role, will also establish target area headquarters some 30 miles from the 15 or so prime target centres in Canada, mainly big cities. This work will begin this fall.

Details of the army's original plan for radiation detection, reconnaissance, rescue and re-entry into bombarded areas, and reclamation of 66 mobile columns by the regular and reserve army were given.

It was soon found the number was inadequate. A city the size of Ottawa — 260,000 population — would require at least six mobile columns.

The army went back to the government with its revised plan for more columns, a bigger militia and target area headquarters. These still now have been approved by the cabinet

KUWAIT READY TO DEFEND SELF AGAINST IRAQ

Expects Arab States To Provide Backing

BAGHDAD, Iraq (Reuters)— A state of emergency was reported in effect in Kuwait today as Iraq pressed its claim to the oil-rich Persian Gulf sheikdom of 200,000 people.

Kuwait radio Monday night broadcast a statement saying the sheikdom would defend its borders and expressing confidence that sister Arab states would supports its independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity.

The Egyptian-sponsored Middle East news agency said a state of emergency had been announced in Kuwait, formerly under British protection.

SEE ARAB OPPOSITION

It also claimed Arab reaction has generally opposed to Iraqi Premier Abdul Karim Kassem's claim that Kuwait is an integral part of Iraq and that Kuwait's 29-year-old Sir Abdullah as-Salim As-Sabah, is governor only at Iraq's pleasure.

In London, diplomatic observers said Iraq's threats and discussions under way in the sheikdom were clearly designed to determine whether Kuwait wants British aid, in meeting Iraq's claim.

The Iraqi foreign ministry Monday handed all diplomatic missions copies of a government memorandum claiming the sheikdom is an independent state with full sovereignty, recognized by international law.

WILL DEFEND ITSELF

"The Kuwait government is determined to defend its and defend Kuwait territory," it said.

Kuwait radio also claimed the sheikdom has received letters from King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, support for Kuwait's position. Jordan and Iran also was reported.

Kuwait, the world's second largest oil producer with revenues of $50,000,000 a week, became fully independent on June 19 after 62 years under British protection.

Iraq, led by Kassem since a coup toppled its pro-Western monarchy three years ago, long has claimed the sheikdom as part of its Basra province.

Accused Hanged For Knife Murder Of Woman

Fisher was hanged at the Don Jail at 12:03 a.m. EDT.

He lost his appeal Monday for a reprieve Monday when the federal cabinet announced it had decided not to intervene in the death penalty.

Early Morning Party in Berlin Had Festival Officials in Tizzy

BERLIN (AP) — Unidentified hoodlums in an early morning wine party half officials of the 11th Berlin Film Festival in tizzy today.

Tebbolds gleefully proclaimed: "Let's have a real scandal" and related juicy details on what made the hotel owner turn out the lights.

What caused the panic was a dress—plunging to the navel by Laya Raki, a toothsome German-born Eurasian beauty.

Miss Raki's leap was the climax. Urged on by photographers, she mounted a chair and sprang for a bunch of grapes dangling from the ceiling. The zipper down the back of her dress flew open and much lively debate ensued as to how much of lady had met the public gaze.

Hotel owner Wolfgang Gerhaus switched off the floodlights and ordered the party to leave.

A statement approved by festival director Albert Speer said the film go-itregher "is not to be considered serious and ridiculous ambitions should be avoided."

Miss Raki contended her mishap was an accident, and her husband, producer Hans Ron Randall, said "reports she was half-naked are absolutely untrue."

"If the organizers don't want well-developed girls at the festival they shouldn't invite them," Randall added. "After all we all know what Jayne Mansfield is famous for and she is an official guest."

East Germany's Communist press blasted the West Berlin festival for "orgies and scandals." The Reds said it all began with a reception at the state of the affairs in the west.

Forms And Rules For Sales Tax Going Out Today

Instructions Mailed To Ontario Retailers

TORONTO (CP)—Application forms and rules and regulations for Ontario's three-per-cent retail sales tax will be mailed to some 130,000 retailers today.

The sales tax, effective Sept. 1, was outlined in detail Monday at a press conference held by Provincial Treasurer James Allan and T. P. Clark, comptroller of revenue.

In a 90-page booklet, the retailer is instructed what goods are taxable, how to collect and how to keep records. For his work of collecting and remitting the tax to the treasury, he will be paid one-third of one per cent to four per cent of his collections, depending on a table based on gross sales and the number of sales transactions.

Mr. Clark said the majority of retailers will get two per cent of the collections.

The regulations advise retailers to file their first return on or before 25 days after sales were made during September. Subsequent returns are due each third day of the month and penalties are provided for late filing.

The retailer is cautioned if warned also to state and charge the tax to be collected on each taxable sale separately from the sale price. He may not advertise that he will absorb or refund the tax "price included" without specifying separately the amount of the tax.

SET UP OFFICES

For retailers who need advice, sales tax offices are to be established in Toronto, Windsor, London, Welland, Brantford, Stratford, Hamilton, Guelph, Owen Sound, Oshawa, Peterborough, Smiths Falls, Kingston, Orillia, North Bay, Port Arthur, Sault Ste. Marie.

Vendors are to be licensed by Aug. 1. An initial sales tax staff of 450 persons will be required to look after the vendors.

The tax applies to every Ontario resident who purchases "tangible personal property" and takes it from the province. A purchase is made in Ontario or if delivery in the province occurs. In other words, a person who buys a set of golf clubs in New York and takes them with the Sales Tax Act, report his purchase to the comptroller of revenue and pay the required tax.

Mr. Clark said he hopes the government can come to some reciprocal agreements with the other provinces for reporting sales made to Ontario residents who want to take goods back home. Quebec has shown interest in such a reciprocal agreement.

Another problem facing treasury officials is the movement of goods, perhaps a second - hand refrigerator or car, to another province by private individual. Mr. Clark said the tax branch will make periodic checks of newspaper advertisements to determine where the tax is not being collected.

Although Mr. Clark declined to say whether he thinks many persons will attempt to avoid voluntary tax payment, he said:

Parliament At a Glance

BY THE CANADIAN PRESS

Monday, June 26, 1961

Finance Minister Fleming rejected a Liberal proposal that James E. Coyne be permitted to appear before a Commons committee to give his side of his refusal to resign as Bank of Canada governor.

The finance minister said the central issue in the Coyne controversy—the Commons is debating a government bill to oust him as bank governor — is the question of who governs the country.

Later, Opposition Leader Pearson formally moved an amendment asking that Mr. Coyne be called as a witness before the Commons committee on banking.

Erhart Regier (CCF — Burnaby-Coquitlam) said an election is near and the Conservatives want somebody else. Mr. Coyne — to blame for their own lack of action.

J. R. Pickersgill (L — Bonavista-Twillingate) charged that the government seeks the removal of Mr. Coyne so he can be replaced by a "stooge" who will make an inflationary increase in the money supply.

Works Minister Walker in turn accused Mr. Pickersgill of trying in "a semi-hysterical mood" to smear Mr. Coyne has been acting "more like an anarchist than a governor of a bank."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker mentioned items that Parliament must clean up before any holiday and Mr. Pearson indicated he doubts they can be finished by the end of the week-proposed target date for a summer break.

The women were the only passengers in a car that collided with a 10-ton truck driven by Frank Grenier, 43, of Hawkesbury, Ont.

Two passengers of a third vehicle also were killed. They were Anne Marie Lacroix, 4-year-old Carleton Place sign-painter and Miss Lacroix's father.

The two women were dead when they were pulled from the tangled wreckage of the car. The men were alive but died a few hours later of multiple injuries and shock.

AUTOMATIC ALARM SET IN MOTION BY FAULTY SPRINKLER

The fire department had one call yesterday at 12.30 p.m. when the automatic fire alarm at the G. T. outfitting Ltd., on Coleman Street, was accidentally set off by a faulty sprinkler.

ITEM MISLEADING

An item in last Friday's paper regarding a letter to the City Council from Jack Smrke was misleading, particularly in respect to the headline, which read "Lou Smrke Says City Owes Him Two Years' Pay." Actually Mr. Smrke's letter was with respect to his hockey salary, for the season 1955-56, not for two years' salary, and the amount requested was part, not all, of his salary for that single season.

Students Get Second Chance By Attending Summer School

During the next few days the majority of high school students will be receiving the welcome news they have successfully completed the work of the present school year and have been promoted to the next grade.

For others however, it will be a time of disappointment as they learn they have been only partially successful, or that they must repeat their year's credits before proceeding to the next grade.

Secondary school students in this area may take one or two subjects will have a second chance to achieve full promotion as with the approval of their principal they may attend Kingston collegiate in Kingston from July 10 to August 18. Credits obtained in this course will be applied toward promotion.

CAN SALVAGE YEAR

This summer course is sponsored by the Ontario Department of Education and is held in Kingston Collegiate International Institute. While its purpose is to provide further training for teachers qualified to teach next year it does give students with an opportunity to improve their standing and, in some cases, to salvage a school year.

The school is staffed by qualified teachers and instructors. Geography, Science, Mathematics, French and Latin. Each student must take private instruction, unless otherwise informed, and may be required to take extra instructional time with teachers in charge of particularly weak. Classes are held from 8.30 a.m. to 1.00 p.m., Monday through Friday each week.

WILL HOLD EXAMS

Regular and punctual attendance and a satisfactory attitude on the part of the student are also required. Examinations will be held at the conclusion of the course and results will be sent to the schools from which the students came.

Free use of accommodation being provided by the Bay of Quinte District High School Board for students of the three secondary schools under its jurisdiction. Buses will leave Belleville at approximately 8.00 a.m. and return at 5.00-5.30 p.m.

Since all applications have to be forwarded to Kingston not later than the end of July 3rd, it is suggested that interested students contact their Principal immediately upon receipt of their report cards to complete the necessary application forms. Registration for the course is definitely limited and only those most likely to profit from the course will be accepted.

Water Safety Show at Pool Much Enjoyed

Some 200 persons were in attendance at yesterday evening's water safety show at the Kinsmen Swimming Pool on Dundas Street East. A demonstration of the different types of swimming strokes as well as a variety of diving techniques was given by Red Cross Water Safety instructors John Peoples and Glenys Jones.

The ability and the possibility of swimming without the use of either hands or legs was quite vividly brought home to those present during the course of the program. Ted Flindall was disqualified during the high diving board round hand and foot yet made the full length of the pool under his own power.

The SCUBA (self contained underwater breathing apparatus) divers from the Quinte Aqua Divers Club put on a display of their portable compressor which is used to fill air tanks for diving. They also tested out the club's new underwater lights for night dives and all the other events were going on too of the club's members were to be noticed sitting playing checkers and drinking pop at the deep end of the pool, a period of some two and a half hours.

A number of swimming races were held for both boys and girls of all ages with the ownership being won by Wayne Shannon for the girls' events and Ron Jones for the boys'.

scheme for 66 mobile columns, it was planned that each column would comprise some 800 men. Under the 200 - column plan, this would mean 160,000 men or 70,000 more than the present combined strength of the regular army and militia.

It appears unlikely that the army will recruit 70,000 more militiamen and that, consequently, the number of troops in each mobile column will be fewer.

Will Continue Drive to Get C of C Members

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce, Walter Laschinske, chairman of the membership drive, said that 21 new members had been added to the membership list in the past two weeks. This was attributed to both the membership campaign another week. The objective of 50 new members was set at the beginning of the campaign. It is hoped that this number may be reached or exceeded in the next week or ten days.

Michael Gartner and Ray McAuley, who, working as asteam, have secured 14 new members, will be given a merchandise prize.

President Harold Pearce said that 11 more people were becoming more interested in the Chamber.

Michael Gartner, chairman of the retail merchants' committee, was elected to the directorate.

H. B. Smith, former secretary of the Chamber, was presented with a cheque by the president. Mr. Smith said that he had enjoyed the secretarial work and that he would help in any way he could be of possible. He wished his successors, Ian Darling and Ted Kinsella, every success.

As soon as the present membership campaign has been completed, further campaigns to gain associate members at $1 a membership will start. Associate members will receive a certificate and a lapel button indicating that they are associated with the Chamber.

Wallace Carlisle, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements for a Chamber dinner, reported that the committee decide on a date in September for this dinner. A tentative date is the 20th of September.

Douglas Whitley, 1960 chamber president, presented trophies to winners of last year's Santa Claus parade.

Winner of the cup for first place in the retail trade division was Woolworth's department. Bob Wade of that department accepted the cup on behalf of the department.

Roly Whitley accepted the second place cup on behalf of the Trenton Lions Club, which had entered a patrolled float in the parade.

Third prize winner was the Snow Queen float, entered by the Trenton Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Ken Smith said that the judges had been unaware of the sponsors of the float and that the third prize had been an unbiased choice. Ian Darling, Harold Long and Ted Sansky built the summer float.

Rotarians Give $2,000 for New School

TRENTON — The campaign currently being conducted by members of the Trenton-Brighton Association for Retarded Children received a big shot in the arm with last night's decision of the Trenton Rotary Club to donate $2,000 towards the cost of the new school. Plans for the school, which will be located on Highway No. 2, almost midway between the two municipalities, have been accepted by the provincial membership. It is estimated that about $85,000 will be needed to complete the school, one-third of which will be subsidized by the provincial government. One stipulation of the 65 members of the association, when the school and site are given to the erection of the school, is that the funds raised must reach a certain amount of the total for which the association is responsible, before the actual construction could commence. This sum is roughly between $7,000 and $9,000.

Rotary members felt, for the most part, that a large donation from the club would encourage other local service clubs to do accordingly. Several of the members said that they thought that the matter should be gone into more thoroughly before a decision was reached. Others felt that the club should vote $1,000 for the school now and give an additional $1,000 if necessary.

The general concensus was that the donation would encourage some encouragement at this time.

The motion to donate $2,000 for the school was proposed by O. M. Newton and seconded by ex-Councillor R. J. Whitley.

The motion was passed with one dissension.

R. H. Smithrim, who is an executive member of the association, thanked his fellow Rotarians for their donation.

Rotary Gives $2,500 Cheque To Hospital

TRENTON — At last night's Trenton Rotary Club meeting, Gordon McDonald presented a cheque for $3,500 to O. M. Newton, chairman of the building committee of Trenton Memorial Hospital, bringing the 1960-61 total Rotary donation to this cause to $7,500, and completing the total pledged by the club. Mr. Newton thanked the club members and said that when "Open House" was held at the hospital in early September, the Rotarians could visit the hospital and see what use had been made of their donation.

R. J. Whitley, chairman of the games' committee, presented a cheque for $1,500 to the president. This sum makes $3,500 raised by the Rotary club by this means for the club's benevolent fund. It was suggested that the secretary, James Page, write to the ex-president, F. K. Houston, now in Winnipeg, resident, and inform him of the games' committee's progress.

Tom Hetherington told the club members that the Trenton Curling Club was planning an "industrial" curling league. Practices would occur one night a week for a very low fee. He asked that all Rotarians who curled, curl. He said that the curling club facilities were to promote curling in Trenton.

Howard Hallick, planning technologist with the Ontario Public Utilities, was the guest speaker for the evening. Mr. Hallick spoke briefly on the subject of safety, as applied by hydro workers, and his address was illustrated by a colored movie.

Mr. Hallick said that the Trenton utilities had a very good safety record. He was introduced by James Page, manager of the Trenton Public Utilities and thanked by Jack Hadley.

Golden Hawks Will Perform At Air Show

TRENTON: Returning with their thrilling aerial demonstration seen here last year and supplemented by seventy new maneuvers added to their repertoire, the red, gold and white CF-5D Sabres, better known as the Golden Hawks will highlight the colorful program offered up in the 1961 edition of RCAF Trenton Air Force Day to be presented in Trenton on Saturday, July 1.

Now ranking favorably with the United States Air Force Thunderbirds and the United States Navy Blue Angels, the RCAF Golden Hawks will present a fast-moving twenty-minute performance consisting of formation rolls and loops, solo Cuban eights, and corkscrew rolls, 3 abreast in the spectacular bomb-burst, followed by a show-stopping cross-over with the Sabres streaking through an aerial intersection each at slightly different altitudes and in a given moment all pulsing, using the capability of being covered by a power blanket.

Such is the spectacle awaiting the many Air Show enthusiasts coming to Trenton on July 1. There is no admission charge. Gates open at 9.00 a.m. and everyone is urged to come early to witness the complete static and flying display.

DOCTRINE ALTERED — President James Monroe (standing) seen here with some members of his cabinet, in 1823 signed the document that warned Europe against trying to set up new colonies in the Western Hemisphere. The Monroe Doctrine has since undergone many changes but the original concept was evident to some in the U.S. decision to promote the April 17 invasion of Cuba. John Quincy Adams (left), Monroe's secretary of state, had a big hand in creating the doctrine. - (CP Photo).

Monroe Doctrine of 1823 Sees Many Changes Since U.S. President Okayed It

The Monroe doctrine has been cited as a factor in the U.S. decision to promote the unsuccessful April 17 invasion of Cuba. In this story the origin of the doctrine and changes it has undergone since 1823 are discussed.

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Monroe doctrine has undergone tremendous changes since President James Monroe told European monarchies to keep hands off the western hemisphere.

Some American diplomats maintain, in fact, that it no longer exists. They say it was significant that President Roosevelt refrained from using the words "Monroe doctrine" when he said April 20 the United States would set on its own if other nations of this hemisphere failed to meet the threat of communism.

But the sense of self-preservation inherent in the original concept, the suspicion of foreign powers, the insistence on the right to set up itself as a last resort, remain at the heart of U.S. diplomacy.

"The Monroe doctrine may be in abeyance but it is not dead," says Dr. Charles Fenwick, director of international law in the Organization of American States.

Although the doctrine carries James Monroe's name, the idea was first hinted in George Washington's farewell address and later revived by Thomas Jefferson.

It was largely written by John Quincy Adams, Monroe's secretary of state, and it was invoked chiefly because the U.S. feared European nations would try to re-establish colonies in this hemisphere.

LATINS REBELLED

One after another, Spanish colonies in South America had rebelled and become independent. Brazil had won independence from Portugal.

The Russian-Prussian-Austrian alliance considered the advisability of helping Spain subdue her former colonies. France later entered the alliance. French troops were on their way to Spain to restore deposed king Frederick VII to the throne when Monroe reached a firm decision on Latin policy.

Both Britain and the United States worried that once Frederick got back into power the alliance would concentrate on regaining South America. Britain proposed a joint declaration with the United States to oppose any such efforts. The U.S. agreed, provided Britain would first recognize the new Latin republics. Britain hesitated. The U.S. then made a unilateral declaration.

Said Monroe in his message to Congress:

"We should consider any attempt on their (Europe's) part to extend their system to any portion of this hemisphere as dangerous to our peace and safety."

The U.S. would respect existing European colonies in the new world. But henceforth European governments would not attempt to set up new colonies, nor to recapture old ones that had broken free, or use force to attempt to control the destinies of the new republics.

IGNORED AT FIRST

Britain was mistress of the seas in those days. The United States had a small navy. The Monroe statement had little immediate impact in Europe. It was almost ignored.

In later years, as the U.S. acquired the means to back up its declarations, the doctrine grew in importance in Europe.

It was first invoked against France in 1866, French troops were sent to Mexico to set up an empire under Prince Maximilian of Austria. The threat of U.S. intervention was enough to prompt the French to withdraw.

In 1900 American forces helped free Cuba from Spanish rule.

Six years later President Theodore Roosevelt decided to expand the principles of the Monroe doctrine. He reasoned that since the doctrine told European powers to keep out of involvement in the western hemisphere and since someone had to step in occasionally to maintain peace and order, the only country that should do this was the United States.

The U.S. sent marines, not only to Cuba, but also to Haiti, Nicaragua and other trouble spots. This gave rise to charges of "Yankee imperialism" and "dollar diplomacy" and Latins were fearful and embittered.

President Woodrow Wilson got the concept of the doctrine written into the old League of Nations in 1919. This made the Latins even more concerned.

When Franklin D. Roosevelt became president in 1933, he embarked on the "good neighbor" policy to curb boiling Latin anger. Instead of unilateral action, he agreed in a mutual nonaggression pact with the Latin countries—a move toward collective action against foreign intervention.

AGREED TO CONSULT

By 1947 when the Rio de Janeiro pact provided for member nations to consult among themselves before acting against foreign intervention, talk of the Monroe doctrine had practically disappeared.

The requirement of mutual consent before action was further nailed down in the 1948 declaration of principles of the Organization of American States.

Meanwhile, the world - wide threat of communism had grown. The OAS agreed that communism was a menace but found no effective way of blocking spreading Red influence.

In 1954 the pro-Red Guatemalan government of Jacobo Arbenz Guzman was overthrown and while the U.S. government never admitted it was involved, it was widely believed the American Central Intelligence Agency played a strong hand in the revolt.

If the Monroe doctrine had ever really been dead, it was apparent it had been revived in this instance.

And when, with CIA assistance, a rebel force of 1,300 landed in Cuba in April in an unsuccessful effort to overthrow Fidel Castro, it was an obvious return to Monroe-ism, whether the Kennedy administration liked to use the word or not.

Authority Asked to Purchase 1,050 Acres for Reforestation

Recommendation for the purchase of 1,050 additional acres in Elzevir and Hungerford townships for use in reforestation, has been made by the Moira River Conservation Authority.

The recommendation for the purchase of the additional marginal property was made yesterday by the authority's management committee of the Authority at a full meeting of Authority members held at Canniffton. Reports from the chairmen of the various advisory boards were heard.

Committee chairman T. C. Graham of Tweed said the property — 200acres of which is in Elzevir and 850 acres in Hungerford — could be purchased for $6,075.

William Hiscock of the Department of Lands and Forests at Tweed was named to the Authority reforestation advisory board to replace Dennis Tieman.

Water Advisory Board chairman George Wishart noted his committee recommended the installation of an automatic recording gauge to replace the present manually operated gauge on the Black River.

He noted that a new gauge would permit continuous stream flow data which was essential for purposes of water control projects.

WILL OPERATE DAM

Operation of the Deloro Dam will be taken over by the Authority from the Deloro Mining and Smelting Company which has closed down. The dam will be used for improvement of summer stream flow in the Moira.

At Lingham Lake a skim diver will be hired to prove plywood signing the step back of the dam to minimize leaking through the dam stop logs. The Authority will enter into a 21 year renewable lease with the Ontario Department of Public Works for crown land surrounding Lingham Lake.

Conservation committee chairman Elmer Wilson and his committee were authorized to purchase a power - operated mower for grass cutting at the Authority's several conservation areas. A well will be drilled at the O'Hara Mills site.

THREE NEW MEMBERS

Three new members of the Authority were appointed by the Ontario Department of Commerce and Development. They are Mrs. Marie Kerby Coulter, Carl Thompson and Barney Haggerty.

And members of the Crowe River Authority formed two years ago, will make a tour of the Moira Authority on September 20th, to view the various reforestation and other projects carried out.

CKWS to Show Navy Ceremony

An account of the Royal Canadian Navy's Sunset Ceremony, which takes place on Parliament Hill in Ottawa on Saturday, July 1, will be carried on CKWS-TV, at 6.00 p.m. and heard on radio from 8.30 - 9.00 p.m.

The ceremony will be presented by a guard of 48 men, a 43-piece band and two 18-pounder gun crews of 32 men each. Members of the guard and gun crews are new-entry seamen who have been in the navy four months and have just completed their basic training at HMCS Cornwallis.

Other branches of Canada's armed services will also take part. The Royal Canadian Artillery will fire a salute from Nepean Point and the Second Battalion of the Canadian Guards Regiment will troop the colour. The Royal Canadian Air Force will participate with a fly-past of 36 CF-100's, and there will be a massed band from the three services.

The background of the Sunset Ceremony is a composite of sections including Beating Retreat and Tattoo, history in relation of which go back several hundred years.

The climax of the ceremony is the lowering of the White Ensign, to the accompaniment of the orchestrated Sunset Call. This is a ceremonial version of a daily custom observed in all naval shore establishments and ships in harbor.

Suggests Ban On Fishing Off Hydro Dams

A suggestion that hydro electric dams on the Trent River north of Trenton be ruled out of bound for district fishermen has been made following repeated drowning accidents along the river system this year.

In slightly more than three weeks four persons, two adults and two young boys, have been drowned in the Trent River or Trent Canal between Trenton and Frankford.

The last drowning was Saturday when an 11-year-old Stockdale boy lost his balance while riding his bicycle at Frankford and toppled into the canal.

The boy's body was recovered half an hour later by Clayton Shipley, bridgemaster at Frankford assisted by Perry White, but all efforts at resuscitation proved fruitless.

Dam officials along the Trent are reported to have suggested that dams be out of bounds for fishermen, but no official request has been made to local municipal or police officials.

H. Grills, M.P. for Hastings South.

"Subject to the approval of city council and the federal department of public works, I think we have arrived at a settlement", Mayor J. Reid is reported today.

The terms of the services about the new federal building have been held up for months pending the signing of the federal department coming to a suitable agreement regarding payment for the work.

Included in the program is the construction of a sidewalk along three sides of the building, widening of Station Street in the front of the building and removal of hydro poles as well as landscaping and general tidying up about the building.

HOW WOULD YOU CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM?

The CARAT WEIGHT of these two diamonds is the same. Neither has visible imperfections . . . yet the actual value differs widely in each gem.

The degree of CLARITY is one of the qualities which determines the worth of any diamond. There are more than a dozen categories of perfection which separate the flawless, "perfect" diamond from the stone with inclusions — even if these are invisible to the naked eye.

CUTTING — its accuracy and style — controls the brilliance of a stone and greatly affects its value.

The traditional color of a diamond is called white, or colorless. Tinges of brown or yellow, which deviate from this standard, decrease the worth of a stone.

"Adjusting" Marks

Officials of the Department of Education at Toronto have stated that adjustments will be made in the marks of those students writing Grade 13 English examination this year if it is found that the examination was too long.

We are all for justice being done and for making certain that students do not suffer as the result of an error in judgment of those who set the examination.

What we find difficult to understand is how this error occurred in the first place.

It is easy to say that we are all human, even those who set examinations. But we still do comprehend why Registrar Dr. Corbin Brown should say that it is too soon to assess the difficulty of the examination. Dr. Brown is apparently waiting for the completion of the marking of the papers, in order that the marks obtained may be used as a yardstick in judging the difficulty of the examination. We are ready to admit that, over a short-term period at any rate, the average obtained by all the pupils in the province is not likely to vary greatly from year to year in examinations of approximately the same difficulty. The average of the marks obtained by the students would, therefore, be a reasonably accurate guide to the difficulty of any examination, as compared to the difficulty of other, similar examinations in recent years. But we would have thought it would not have been beyond the ability of any competent group of teachers to have judged the difficulty of any examination paper, with the aid of such a yardstick as the average marks obtained by students writing it. We would, indeed, expect this judgment to have been made before, rather than after, the examination was written.

Superintendent S. D. Rendall says that "there certainly have been cases where all marks on an examination had to adjusted." Far from being a sound reason why the prospect of adjusting marks on this year's Grade 13 English examinations should be regarded as of little importance, this seems to us to point to the necessity of the Department revising its method of setting examinations.

It seems to us axiomatic that, though the worst injustices may be partially remedied by adjusting marks after an examination is written, it is impossible thereby to completely eliminate all danger of grave injustice occurring in the case of some individuals. A student who might have been capable of obtaining an average of 70 per cent had he had sufficient time to write all the examination may have obtained only 60 per cent or as high as 80 per cent on the question which he did answer. There is also the question of the effect on the student of being faced by an examination which he discovers is too hard or too long, unreasonably hard, that is, or unreasonably long. This is more a test of nerve than of knowledge, of temperament than of scholarship.

Mr. Rendall says that "every year there are complaints about examinations that are too hard or too long." We can readily believe that. It was always so. Failures always seek alibis. We see no reason to be alarmed by these complaints — unless they are justified. And then, we think, there is sound reason to be very alarmed indeed, not to take the situation as a matter of course, as Department of Education officials appear to be taking the matter of this year's Grade 13 English examination.

U.S. Changes Trade Policy

The U.S. commerce department has decided to permit the sale of subsidized farm surpluses to Russia and her satellites.

This raises two interesting points.

The first is what is the effect of this decision going to be on the exports of other countries, such as Canada, which have been selling to these countries? Part of this same question is the whole problem of the ethics of competition from subsidized products in foreign trade.

Secondly, what caused the commerce department to change its former policy, which forbade such sales to Russia and Communist satellites with the exception of Poland? Does it represent a softening of U.S. views on trade with the Communists? Or, perhaps more likely, was it made as a type of retaliation against trade between U.S. allies and Communist lands?

There are so many questions which beg answers, answers which we are not likely to get from any person qualified to speak with authority.

I know that given something for which to fight, the peoples of Asia will man the ramparts of freedom with valor. But . . . people do not fight in the steaming jungles to preserve hunger, squalor and oppression.—U.S. Vice President Johnson, home from tour of Asia.

Two Views About Dollar

From Finance Minister Donald Fleming's budget speech, June 20, 1961.

As I have said, it is the June Government's intention that our import surplus of goods and services, which has been running in recent years about one billion dollars annually, should be reduced substantially, and that this should be brought about through an appropriate adjustment of the exchange rate rather than by direct Government controls or subsidies, quotas or tariffs.

No one can say today what the appropriate level of our exchange rate would be when our balance of payments is in a position better suited to our present economic circumstances. But the rate will certainly be lower than it has been of late, and it may well be appropriate for it to move to a significant discount. It will be a Government policy to facilitate such a movement.

Accordingly the Foreign Exchange Fund will be prepared, as and when necessary, to sell substantial amounts to its holdings of United States dollars through purchases in the exchange market. This would have the effect of increasing the foreign exchange reserves available to Canada to be used in case of need. As many competent observers have pointed out, these reserves have not grown over the past decade in line with the growth of international transactions. Once an exchange rate more closely in line with Canada's economic position is achieved, the Government will use the resources of the exchange fund to insure that the rate is kept within a range appropriate to Canada's changing economic situation. The value of our currency must, of course, ultimately depend upon our pursuit of appropriate economic policies.

Governor of the Bank of Canada, James E. Coyne speaking before a special Senate committee on manpower and employment, April 26, 1961:

I have not mentioned one specific proposal which is advanced by some people, namely devaluation of the currency or deepening the present discount-al exchange value of the Canadian dollar. This to my mind comes close to being the group of inflationary or "something for nothing" proposals with its appearance of sleight-of-hand and painless benefits. If it were easy to devalue we would do it would be in frequent use, not just in Canada but in every country in the world. In fact, most countries have come to foreswear this dangerous drug, having learned to their cost how much harm it can do. At best it is a confession of failure, a recognition that the whole economic structure of the country has gone so far astray that the rest of the world that there is no use trying to conceal the fact any longer. This is not at all the position in Canada, and in my view we would be a great disservice to the Canadian economy as a whole and to many personal and private interests by engaging in deliberate exchange depreciation. Quite setting the presumed powers of monetary policy with the definite object of reducing the Canadian dollar to a discount, desirable to maintain a premium on the Canadian dollar, and indeed would hope to see such a change in our economic arrangements as would prevent a permanent and ever-increasing again, but this is quite a different matter from attempting to bring about the inflation of all prices and all costs which is the chief effect and avowed objective of deliberate depreciation of the national currency.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE SOCIAL GOSPEL

Some people regard their religion strictly as their own personal possession. They gather it into their hearts, lock the door, and gratify the Lord for the fine understanding which exists between Him and themselves. For them, religion is a strictly personal matter.

And, of course, religion ought to be a personal matter. God deals with us not in groups but as individuals. Actually all as individuals finally stand before the judgment seat of Christ. But no man has a right to lock up his religion in his own heart and consider it as definitely his possession as is the blood in his safe deposit box. For he can balance in his saving account.

Religion has to do both with us individually. We "stablished" are to love God, but we are also to love our neighbor as ourselves. This latter responsibility has sometimes been termed social service. Christianity starts with the individual. It takes in the family, the community, the nation, and finally the world. The person who thinks of his religion only in connection with his own salvation unfortunately benefits little as a Christian in the truest sense of the word. His thoughts are too much upon himself. He must be socially minded in his thoughts and endeavors else he is not the Christian he ought to be.

There is more to Christianity than social service, but there is no Christianity without Christian service.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

June 27th, 1941.

Upwards of two hundred and fifty pupils, parents and officials of Bridge Street Church Sunday School enjoyed the annual Sunday School picnic yesterday at Twelve O'clock Point. Ideal weather conditions prevailed and the natural facilities of the Point, made the affair one of the most enjoyable in years. The children were conveyed to the scene in large buses while others were taken in family cars.

And ideal weather favored the annual St. Andrew's Church Sunday School picnic held on Wednesday at Sears' Beach at Oak Lake where the conventional races for the children were featured and basket luncheon was another feature of the program for the day. Pupils were conveniently transported to Oak Lake by motor and an afternoon of recreation and swimming was enjoyed.

Although it took them an extra hole to do so, the Belleville Golf Club team was the possessor of the Quinte Cup and won the Bay of Quinte golf championship at Trenton on Wednesday. It was Tommy Cather's deadly putter, on the extra hole which gave the Belleville team the district golf title marking the first time the local Club has won the Quinte Cup. In scoring, Cath was also the third winning of the district golf golf honors since its two decade existence. The champion Belleville team was composed of Messrs. Harry Ridley, Walter Thompson, Jack Marsh, Joe Legault, Tom Cather, Charlie Davis, Wally Waldorf, Ted Hughes, and Sam Hibbard.

Mansfield's Bold Plan

Vancouver Sun

Senator Mike Mansfield is one American politician who believes in bold solutions to world problems — bold short of war, that is.

His plan for settling the Berlin crisis for example — to make a free city unwilling West, not East Berlin, with a defined corridor to the West, status and access to be guaranteed by NATO and the Warsaw Treaty countries.

It has drawbacks, West Germans don't like it. The East German regime has taken the position all along that East Berlin is its capital and West Berlin alone is the problem.

The Western insistence that West Berlin is a free city, and equally the Communists' determination to sovietize it, are Khrushchev's and Ulbricht's Brandt's city from Western hands, have between them set very obvious roadblock. Persisted in, these attitudes can only lead to war.

With Senator Mansfield's plan both sides in the dispute surrender something, but each gains an advantage, not a drawback.

The senator probably would get any takers at present. But eventually something must give, unless Germany and her allies on both sides of the curtain are to experience something far worse than a saw-off.

Some Mothers Cannot Cook

Brantford Expositor

"Just like mother used to make" is a corny advertising slogan, varied by "just like grandma's cooking", employed by some makers of food commodities. But nostalgic suggestions are supposed to make your mouth water — and impel you to buy the succulent products.

But it may depend on which mother or grandmother. Some of them were wonderful cooks and some of them definitely weren't and aren't. Some of them still have can openers. In the latter cases the slogan is likely to turn sour.

Take, for example, the instance in Chatham, Ontario, where a not-so-youthful 29-year-old son was found guilty of being rough with his mate. The charge? Cruelty. It was considered, her cooking was unappetizing.

In food marketing, as in most other respects, the prospective consumer should be picked with perspicacity. Shoppers may be soppy but they shouldn't be sloppy.

Too Much Too Soon Is No Good

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

David Ise around in his crib much of the day sucking on an old rubber bone or fluttering some rag of a toy one of the older children has discarded.

He is perfectly contented with the leftovers he gets; nor do we feel that he is in any way neglected. This is something that parents of a first child are incapable of believing — that an infant set his own pace.

When Ise had only a baby, I brought him more toys in a week than David has seen in seven months. They were the volume ridiculous, but the toys themselves were far beyond his capacity to handle or enjoy.

When he was three months old, I invariably bought him something for a six-month-old baby; when he was one year old, I got him something for a two-year-old. Without meaning to, I was trying to hurry him to get older, grow up faster and develop skills before he was ready.

Most little children are pushed too fast in their early lives — and all first children are. New parents can hardly wait for their child to sit up, to crawl, to take his first step, to drink unaided, to feed himself and to play self-reliantly. Yet, while they want the infant to become physically independent, they insist upon his psychological dependence in far too much for him too long.

David is the happiest baby I have ever seen, because nobody is pushing, pulling or prompting him. He'll walk when he's ready to and he'll talk when he has something to say. And, eventually, he'll learn to do whatever old pans and rem-nants happen to be around. It gets lots of petting, but no prodding.

In primitive cultures, babies never cry. Crying is a convention of civilization. Primitive civilization tries to make adults out of infants too soon. In primitive cultures, children are encouraged by their mothers to keep quiet the ages we would regard as "sensible," and are given the deep security of knowing that they are loved and cherished for them on a clinical timetable.

The modern mother in Western society can't wait for the baby to get out of diapers, be toilet-trained, get off the knee of the house and go to school and learn to read (or at least try to). She resents it when a two-year-old acts like a two-year-old.

The paradox of childhood, I can occasionally see, is the frequent fact that the longer a child is allowed to remain a child, the more likely he will find it to mature. Nature has its own rhythm, and we harken it only at our own peril and expense. Urging the child to grow up too soon is the surest way to increase his chances of never growing up to full adulthood at all.

Issues Call For Conquest

Petit Journal, Montreal

My homeland is not confined to the limits of Quebec — it extends from one end to the other of this Canada or ours, this sovereign state which forms an integral part of the British Empire.

Quebec cannot withdraw herself from this geographic and human complex; to think otherwise is something I do not even feasible, she would thus absolutely cut herself off.

In this ocean of more than 20 million human beings, our several millions Laurentians in their "island" will never be able to avoid living with their neighbors. Maintaining our own culture and language does not make us any poorer from contact with the English-speaking majority.

Most of the people who live in Quebec province agree with the point of view of the peaceful separatists are being manoeuvred by hotheads seeking to divide and rule.

Jean-Baptiste is a realist. His fate is the best guarantee of adventures leading to confusion and disorder and will continue in the future in this attitude.

"Let us separate from Canada" will never be his motto, but rather "Let's take over Canada."

Why say farewell to Canada at a time when our compatriots dissatisfied with the percentage of the population of the Maritimes are looking around our quarter of Ontario? We can make the peaceful conquest of the Maritimes outside Quebec by constitution means and true patriotism.

We can feel a certain kinship with the Scots, who are not separatists although they feel and through ability and business acumen, they will be our peaceful conquest of Canada

Babies' Fingernails Can Be Dangerous

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

It was one of those "didn't" days. Doesn't all this explain why, at times, I rant about the danger of air rifles, slingshots, and other such childhood toys?

Our boy children are understandably interested in air guns, slingshots, and the like. It isn't they are dangerous.

It may look like the dickens after Junior gets hit in the eye with a baseball, or another little boy's fist. However, the black eye will fade, and no lasting harm is done. But one little BB pellet that happens to hit the eye can destroy it forever.

Maybe we can't protect our beloved youngsters from all perils, but let's at least lean with restrained parental influence against the dangerous little things that, from time to time, happen to hit, and blind, an eye.

The same can be said of the ingenious little plastic toys which if small enough, and operated by springs or other motive power, can puncture the eye. I'm not against toys, and I'm not against boys, after some of the "accidents" I've seen. . . . Well, I'm not.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

Six or seven years ago, at a bus stop, there was a line-up mostly women and children and a couple of men on their way home at day's end. As I boarded the bus last man ahead I was smoking my pipe, and I like to knock it out on the heel of a boot on the last. Most pipe smokers are like that. They are not gallant. They just like to get the last puff.

As the bus approached, a prosperous-looking man with the bearing and air of an educated man, stepped sideways and took his place at the head of the line. Calmly he guarded ahead of the women and got himself a seat. There was something curious bruital about the performance, perhaps because he looked so like what we call a gentleman.

Two years ago, I met the man and have since been thrown into business social contact with him. He is affable, intelligent, witty, a prosperous-looking man. Some friends, my friends, think the world of him.

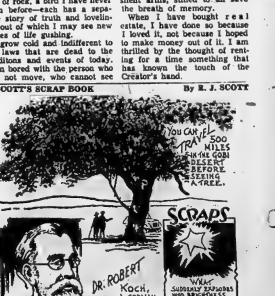
But sometimes when I see him as I will, I just can't cotton to him. However pleasant the occasion, I always see him stolidly up to the head of the bus to get the seat. Calmly, dispassionate and spring aboard the bus ahead of everybody.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE BEAUTY OF EARTH

When I get too disappointed in human nature, when the failures mount too high for me to see light and truth, I always turn to the earth.



There I know I always find compensations which make up for all that I seem to have loved and lost.

We must all pick out our own pet philosophy of life. But the beauty of earth furnishes me with the best material I can think of from which to extract at least one sound philosophy of life.

I find, for instance, that a blade of grass, a leaf, or a strange flower, a new composition of rock, a bird I have never seen before—each has a separate story of truth and loveliness out of which I may see new and more beautiful meanings in life.

I grow cold and indifferent to old lies that are dead to the conditions and events of today. I am bored with the person who will not move, who cannot see six months the Canadian dollar will look like that, and in a year will look like that."

MENTIONS DEFICIT

Mr. Pickersgill, referred obliquely to Mr. Fleming's forecast of a $650,000,000 deficit in the current fiscal year, and added:

"They have not got the courage to deal with it in a proper fashion and they want some subservient politician in that office to start the printing presses. That is what they want. That is the real danger to the people of this country."

Words Minister—Walker said the Liberal MP was in "a semi-hysterical state of mind." He also suggested Mr. Pickersgill has been a confidential adviser to Mr. Coyne.

"I would simply say that that libel answers itself," Mr. Pickersgill said.

Earlier, Mr. Pickersgill and he was a friend of Mr. Coyne's and had been for 30 years. Challenged by Mr. Walker to say whether he had been "in touch" with the governor, Mr. Pickersgill replied:

"I said I had been in touch with him as a friend of many, many years. I saw no reason, simply because of this action, to alter that friendship in any way whatsoever, nor do I think it is necessary to do so in a free country."

Did Mr. Pickersgill help the governor in writing his public statements and letters? Mr. Walker asked. "The answer to that is no," the Liberal MP replied.

Ont he question of a parliamentary hearing for Mr. Coyne, Mr. Walker said the governor was acting "more like an archbishop than a governor of a bank."

Mr. Coyne had published letters in The Pickersgillian style," had called press conferences, had been "kicking up all kinds of all directions," and had appeared before a Senate committee.

"Why exacerbate the already self-inflicted wound of this gentleman? I feel sorry for him for the first time because I know he has been misguided.

"But, to bring him before a parliamentary committee like at this time would be to create greater shame and greater degradation than have already taken place. And to what avail? . . . What is there that can be said in this whole shameful story that has not been said already over and over again?"

Mr. Walker said the governor "has set himself up as Mount Olympus superior to the government of Canada . . . and in conflict with the people of Canada themselves."

RECALLS 'SOLDIER'

From the time the bank's board of directors on Feb. 15, 1961, raised the governor's annual pension figure to $25,000 from $12,000, Mr. Walker said, Mr. Coyne had become "a soldier and bolder and bolder." He had criticized the government on all sorts of issues.

"If I had been the minister of finance, and it is a good thing I was not, he would have been fired right out on one of those terms as have happened under all the circumstances."

Mr. Fleming opened the debate by saying for the first time that in the matter of 1957-58 Mr. Coyne had rejected "firmly and angrily" a government request involving an easing of the money supply.

Mr. Coyne's refusal on that occasion set the framework for his subsequent relations between him and the cabinet on monetary policy, Mr. Fleming added. "The policy followed as always the governor's policy."

The minister said Mr. Coyne's conduct since June 12—an obvious reference to the governor's action in making public letters, memos and statements—"of itself" has made his dismissal necessary.

ISSUES MORE

Meanwhile, Mr. Coyne was issuing more letters. The House of debate had barely got under way when he distributed a copy of a letter to Mr. Fleming, dated Monday.

Mr. Coyne said he wants to go before a parliamentary committee to tell his story "before I am wrongfully removed from office."

The use of smear tactics, and the attempt to intimidate public servants with the idea that should not be allowed to go on."

In the letter, Ernest Herbert Gier (CCF—Burnaby - Coquitlam) suggested full CCF support to the Liberal move to get the governor before a committee.

Mr. Regier said the government was using nothing but "character assassination" in the controversy. An election was near. The Conservatives wanted somebody else to blame for their own lack of action.

Egan Chambers, parliamentary secretary to Defence Minister Harkness, said opposition spokesmen have demanded that Mr. Coyne deserves the right to be heard.

"Heard! We've heard nothing else for the past few weeks. It has become deafening."

SAYS BROKE OATH

Mr. Chambers also contended that Mr. Coyne broke his formal oath of office in making public correspondence with Mr. Fleming. His position as a section of the Bank of Canada Act requiring employees to swear not to reveal documents or papers on bank business.

A committee debate between Mr. Fleming and Mr. Coyne would be a "circus" and would damage the bank's and Canada's world reputation, Mr. Chambers said.

"Our concern is to get over with this unfortunate matter with the least damage to the bank."

Mr. Pearson said earlier that he, too, wanted to clean up the situation as soon as possible.

"But it should be done in the right and proper way. Justice cannot be subordinated to speed, desirable as speed is in this case."

SUPPORTS PEARSON

Murdo Martin (CCF — Timmins) said the government case against the governor 'is based on assumption 'from first to last." He supported Mr. Pearson's contention that no man should be condemned without a proper hearing.

W. E. McMillan (L—Weiland) said any censure over Mr. Coyne's pension increase ought to be directed against the men appointed by the government to run the bank. Only bank directors had voted on the increase, not Mr. Coyne.

He noted that the 'Bill of Rights be turned face to the wall and dragged in mourning" if Mr. Coyne is dismissed without a proper hearing.

FORMS, RULES

The act has a strict penalty section. A person is liable on conviction of a fine of $10 to $1,000. False statements may involve fines from $25 to $10,000 or imprisonment up to two years, or both.

The tax is aimed strictly at the consumer. It is imposed upon the final purchaser of "tangible personal" goods and commodities.

Any machinery used directly in the production of goods for sale is not taxable, nor is any material expended in the production of goods for sale.

There are 52 classifications of exemptions including food products for human consumption, farm equipment, children's clothing, electricity for all purposes, fuel oil and natural or manufactured gas used for cooking and heating, coal and coke for all purposes and long distance telephone tolls, along with all items costing less than 17 cents.

Ontario is the eighth province to introduce a retail sales tax. Only Alberta and Manitoba are without it.

The treasury expects the tax to raise about $80,000,000 in the last half of the current fiscal year and $150,000,000 a year thereafter.

Drought Hits Alberta Wheat; Seek U.S. Hay

EDMONTON (CP)—Manitoba and Saskatchewan agriculture officials searched Monday for sources of cattle feed for drought-stricken livestock while 2,500,000 acres of Alberta's wheat crop were described as "beyond the point of recovery."

Drought, speculation sent prices to seasonal highs on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange. Then a forecast of rain for the western prairies brought a selling wave and dropping prices before the session ended Monday.

The weather office said later there would be "very little rain —only scattered showers. And it looks as if the drought belts will be missed again."

Agriculture Minister George Hutton of Manitoba sent a telegram to Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman of the United States asking about the availability of cattle feed from land now idle under the American soil bank program. A bill before Congress could free such hay supplies, not normally cut for feed, for drought disaster areas in the Dakotas.

ASKS FEDERAL AID

Mr. Hutton said he asked Agriculture Minister Hamilton for federal participation in a plan to transport feed to drought areas.

Agriculture department field men searched the province for pasture. They found about 10,000 acres available in the north, but it was not enough.

COYNE ACCUSES

Canada's central bank will be destroyed, and the whole institution will become merely an arm of a political machine, if the governor is to be terrorized into resigning whenever the government of the day wishes him to, without any issue of policy being raised, between the government stating its monetary policy in Parliament or elsewhere, and without the government accepting responsibility for monetary policy."

(Monday Mr. Fleming said the government hasn't had this responsibility since after Mr. Coyne "firmly and angrily" rejected a government request in the winter of 1957-58 aimed at easing tight money.)

WANTS INVESTIGATED

Mr. Coyne said the public is entitled to have the minister's charges against him, issued behind the shelter of parliamentary immunity, reviewed by a committee "before I am wrongfully removed from office."

"I demand that they be reviewed by a parliamentary committee where I can be given fair opportunity to be heard, and where they can be submitted to the test of informed opinion.

"To use of smear tactics, and the attempt to intimidate public servants with the idea that such tactics will be used against them in public if they refuse to improper suggestions from the government, should not be allowed to go on."

Adlai Finds U.S. Suffered Black Eye in Cuban Invasion

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Adlai Stevenson's 18 - day swing through 10 Latin American countries has brought home the Kennedy administration the extent of the damage done to United States prestige by the Cuban exile invasion attempt.

The shrewd and discerning Stevenson obviously was sent into South America not so much to seek reaction to Kennedy's $500,000,000 program of economic aid as to measure how much friendship and support of U.S. foreign policy there is in South America in the wake of the Cuban invasion.

He came away depressed. Stevenson told a National Press Club luncheon in Washington Monday that he found the U.S. had suffered a "black eye" in organizing, trying to aid and encouraging the Cuban exiles in an unsuccessful bid to overthrow Fidel Castro.

More than that, he found evidence of Communist-inspired influence among the impoverished Latins covering a continent-wide U.S. image that decades considered part of its own backyard.

NOT ENOUGH

It will take more than the $500,000,000 program, says Stevenson, "sudden outpouring of poverty, social dissatisfaction and the lack of education that continues in provinces and foment revolution.

Perhaps one part of the answer, he suggests, may lie in commodity stabilization agreements. An increase of just one-half cent a pound in the price of coffee may have more economic benefit than all the dollar loans the United States would be able to make under the $500,000,000 program, he said.

Even so, it will take years—perhaps as much as a decade—before the Latins can hope to overcome economic despair at home.

Meanwhile relations between the Latin Americans and the United States may grow worse. A point is the continuing wide gulf in views on the Cuban issue.

Despite all that Kennedy has said about Castro representing a Red dagger at the heart of the entire continent, Latin Americans view the Cuban problem as mainly a fight between Castro and the American government, Stevenson found.

Moreover they don't like American attempts to intervene in Latin domestic politics. They've said as much in the past. Apparently they said it with even more vocal force in Stevenson's presence.

Diefenbaker Says Liberals Have Lost Confidence

Prime Minister Diefenbaker said Monday night the Liberals have lost confidence in the government and are trying to "sabotage" it.

Speaking at a Conservative rally in Toronto, he said the Liberals are trying to "sabotage" the government's efforts to get the country moving.

"They have lost confidence in the government and are trying to sabotage it," he said.

"They are trying to sabotage the efforts we are making to get the country moving."

Mr. Diefenbaker said the Liberals are trying to "sabotage" the government's efforts to get the country moving.

"They have lost confidence in the government and are trying to sabotage it," he said.

"They are trying to sabotage the efforts we are making to get the country moving."

On March 20, all the directors had been told that they shouldn't resign. On June 2, two directors changed their views "after seeing you, Mr. Fleming, and after being told that the government would bring in a bill to remove me, so."

'WE DON'T KNOW'

He said the law provides that directors shall appoint the bank and directors whom they were going to appoint to replace him and "you answer you don't know, We haven't been told that yet."

His letter dealt with the called Insinuations by some that the Bank of Canada was trying to run the country.

He said he would regard it as his duty to resign if the government had any economic policy by which the central bank couldn't properly co - operate with, or if the government initiated a monetary policy which the bank governor couldn't in good conscience carry out.

But he added that the government has not and cannot show any point of principle or policy where the bank under his management had not co - operated with the government.

It was inconceivable that the governor should resign, and default the public trust laid on him by Parliament, just because the government asked him to.

"The attempt to back up such a request with attacks on a public servant's personal integrity and the pressure brought to bear on me after I gave the wishes of the minister of finance by the politically - appointed directors of the bank, are fundamental to the way in which under the present government the standards of public life in Canada have been degraded."

He said the government's legislative move to oust him makes it clear that the government still isn't prepared to accept ultimate responsibility for monetary policy "but merely want to have the power to change the governor at a time when it suits your political purposes to do so."

Mr. Coyne Monday also made public a letter he wrote to Mr. Fleming June 9 urging that the Bank of Canada Act be amended to place responsibility for monetary policy on the government.

This is the third Coyne - to - Fleming letter written June 9 to be made public. The first two were made public June 13 at the start of the controversy.

DANIELS — CURRIE

A lovely June wedding was solemnized in Bethel Chapel, Belleville, on Saturday, June 10th at 1 p.m. when Margaret Dianne Currie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Currie of Belleville, and Alexander Street, Belleville was united in marriage to A. Barry Daniels, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Daniels of 13 Highland Ave., Belleville. Mr. W. E. Belch of Bethel Chapel performed the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father was radiantly lovely in a floor-length bridal gown of white silk organza with fitted bodice and bouffant skirt. The round neckline and tiny short sleeves were appliqued with lace and trimmed with iridescent sequins. Her veil was of illusion tulle and was caught to a coronet which was trimmed with seed pearls. She wore a pearl necklace, a gift of the bridegroom, and carried a bouquet of lily-of-the-valley which was centred with a mauve orchid.

Mrs. Burl Lott, of Belleville was matron of honor, wearing green chiffon over cotton print. Miss Gail Virgin, of Weston and Miss Bridesmaid in mauve chiffon over print and Miss Dawne Clark, of Belleville was junior bridesmaid and wore mauve chiffon over print. All of these gowns were similarly fashioned with fitted bodices, bouffant skirts and frilled capelets. All wore matching hats and white shoes and gloves and carried white baskets filled with mauve lilacs, white Shasta 'mums, and lily-of-the-valley with trailing ivy.

Mr. Brent Daniels, brother of the bridegroom was groomsman and Mr. Harry Hitchcock, Belleville and Mr. Ralph Thornton of Weston were the ushers.

A reception was held in the parlor at Bethel Chapel which was appropriately decorated with the bridal table appointed with white linen damask centred by a three-tiered wedding cake topped with lily-of-the-valley and a white dove, which was encircled with misted tulle around the base and flanked by tall white candles. The bridal bouquets added a lovely nuptial touch.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing a green lace sheath gown, with white accessories. She wore a corsage of pink sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley. She was assisted in the receiving line by the bridegroom's mother who was gowned in a bone colored sheath with white accessories. A corsage of pink sweetheart roses and lily-of-the-valley completed her ensemble.

For travelling to Papineau Lake, Ottawa, Hull, and points in Northern Ontario, the bride chose a yellow sheath dress with contrasting three-quarter length coat of mocha linen with matching shoes and purse, bone colored pill box hat and gloves complemented with a corsage of yellow carnations.

Guests attended from Detroit, Mich., Woodstock, Brantford, Weston, Coe Hill, Peterborough, Cherry Valley and Belleville, Ontario.

The bride previous to her marriage was honored at many miscellaneous showers; one at Peterborough "Teachers' College given by her classmates, at the home of Mrs. P. Murray, Prince of Wales Drive with Miss Sharon as hostess; at the home of Mrs. Kemp, Highland Ave. and also at Bethel Chapel where friends gathered to honor the bride and bridegroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels will reside in London after the summer holidays, where the bride will be attending Teacher's College and the bridegroom will attend the London Bible College.

Sunday School Picnic

THE ALLIANCE CHURCH

In spite of the cool day, a record attendance of over 200 Sunday School children, parents and friends from the Alliance Church gathered at Tweed Park on Saturday afternoon for the annual church picnic. The chartered bus which left the church at 1 p.m. was packed to capacity and a large number of cars followed as well.

Mr. Lawrence Dent, assistant superintendent of the Sunday School was the director of the afternoon's activities. The cloudy weather did not deter many of the children from enjoying swimming in the early part of the afternoon, and at the same time a lively baseball game was going on with many of the adults and teenagers taking part. At 3 p.m. the much-looked for races began and these were under the supervision of Mr. James McKay and Mr. Alf Rogers. There was a race for every class and prizes were given to the ones coming first and second. Several novelty races were featured among which were the mother and daughter three legged race and the father and son race. These two races were particularly enjoyed by both the participants and the spectators. The small children were all given balloons and suckers.

When the races were finished, ice cream cones were distributed to all and the committee in charge of this included Mr. G. Freeman, Mr. J. Chambley Sr. and Miss Hannah Dyck.

After another period of games, a bounteous supper was served by the food committee which included Mrs. F. Hawley, Mrs. F. Allan and Mrs. J. Leonard. The picnic supper consisting of sandwiches, salads and pickles, cookies and cake, ice cream, chocolate milk for the children and tea and coffee for the adults. A special item at the supper was the presentation to the church organist, Mr. Wilbur Leonard and his wife, of a beautiful decorated anniversary cake, on the occasion of their wedding anniversary.

After the supper hour games of ball and other ball games were played and more swimming by several of the children.

At 7 p.m. the children boarded the chartered bus to return to Belleville, tired but happy that they had enjoyed another wonderful Sunday School picnic.

Miss B. Sharon Sutton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W. Sutton, 370 Victoria Ave., Belleville, recently graduated from the School of Nursing, Kingston General Hospital.

Coronation W.A. Presents Parting Gift

The final meeting of the season for the Coronation W.A. of Bridge Street United Church took the form of a potluck picnic at which the members' husbands were guests. Dr. and Mrs. Russell Bateman kindly opened their beautiful cottage at Oak Lake for the event.

The cool, wet weather failed to dampen the spirits of the group as they assembled beside the fireside in the large living room of the cottage. A sumptuous meal of a variety of casseroles, salads, luscious desserts and coffee was served buffet style.

After the supper hour, when the tides cleared, the guests enjoyed a tour of the lake in Dr. Bateman's motor boat.

Mrs. Charles Bristol later called the group to order and, on behalf of the Coronation W.A., expressed regrets that the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Sherwin are leaving Bridge Street Church. Mrs. Sherwin has been an invaluable assistance in the W.A. and will be greatly missed. Mr. and Mrs. Sherwin were presented with a beautiful lamp as a token of the esteem in which they are held.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherwin thanked the members and said that the lamp would remind them of the pleasant association they had had with the Coronation W.A.

Egerton Boyce's Sr. Pupils Present Excellent Recital

By GLADYS WARD

At Memorial Chapel on Monday evening, Mr. Egerton Boyce, R.M.T. presented his students of piano and voice in a recital under the auspices of the Albert College Conservatory of Music. These were the senior pupils, playing advanced music of the great composers, and it made a fine evening of musical enjoyment. The vocalists, too, sang some difficult selections that were a true test of both vocal powers.

Dr. A. E. MacKenzie, principal of the college, gave a gracious welcome to the visitors, and spoke of the pleasure they had had in their association with Mr. and Mrs. Boyce at the school.

The excellent performances and skillful execution of the performers were a tribute to their instructor. Francis Rose, Bonnie Rowe and Sandra Timms were all winners of Albert College bursary at the festival of sacred music at Stirling. Mr. Boyce accompanied the vocalists for all their numbers, some with piano and others with piano accompaniment. The piano and organ duets rendered pleasing arrangements, and effects.

The performers appeared in the following order:

No Surprise For Woman to Become P.M.

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — If a woman ever becomes prime minister of Canada she'll premier of Ontario it will not surprise Mrs. Agnes Macphail, first woman convention here of the Ontario Liquors and Reeves Association.

Among the 200 delegates are five women mayors. Three women reeves and a deputy-reeve.

They feel women have proved their ability in municipal politics and there is no reason why they would not be valuable at the head of government.

"Fifteen years ago, no one would have believed the place women are taking in public affairs today," said Mayor Roby Bryan of Englehart. "I think it's quite possible for a woman to become prime minister any time, and there are women available who could do it."

Mayor Marie Curtis of Long Branch said that running a community is like running a home. "You get it organized and then you run it."

Mrs. I. C. Thomas, mayor of Oshawa and wife of the Oshawa member of the legislature, believes that the need women's opinions in all levels of government. Their views are particularly valuable in the humanities.

Mrs. Margaret Macdonald Likes Good Game of Bridge

CARDIGAN, P.E.I. (CP)— Mrs. Margaret Macdonald, a middle-aged mother of three who likes to play bridge, has become Canada's first woman member of Parliament from east of Ontario.

The pretty brunette is no stranger to politics. She herself never before held office but she helped her husband John to victory in the 1957 and 1958 federal general elections. Mr. Macdonald, a general merchant and agricultural dealer, died in January.

If the energy she showed in her Progressive Conservative campaign to win the May 29 byelection is any indication of the weight she will pull in the House of Commons, her Kings County constituency will be well represented.

From the opening of the three-week campaign she had hired help to look after her village home and her children, devoting her own time to meeting almost all of the 20,000 constituents.

HECTIC ROUND

"I don't drive, so I had someone drive me. . We started every morning at 9 and didn't return until supper time. Then there were speeches and meetings every night," she said.

"I tried to meet everyone, including the Liberals . . . especially the Liberals, and I almost did. I wish there had been more time."

Five-foot-six and 140 pounds, she dresses conservatively. She cooks well and "sews a little," but her chief interest since marriage in 1941 has been home-making.

Before her marriage, she was a school teacher for a year in her native East Chezzetcook, N.S., and worked as a secretary in Halifax. It was there that she met and married John A. Macdonald of Cardigan, then an officer in the Prince Edward Island Highlanders, who served overseas and became the regiment's lieutenant-colonel.

Oldest daughter Judy, 18, plans to take a nursing course at Prince of Wales College in Charlottetown this fall. Heather, 13, and John, 11, will continue in school — if a federal election is held this fall. If not, they will go to Ottawa with their mother.

Readers' Bonus Column

By Mary Moore

(Note: Since we have an abundance of readers' letters to answer and because there will be no newspaper on Dominion Day, I am usurping Tuesday's column for my answer to a teacher who is going to be a pastry cook at a summer camp. Other summer camp cooks will welcome these quantity recipes.)

Question: Although I am teaching now I have taken a summer job as a pastry cook at a summer resort which usually has about one hundred and fifty guests. While I have had quite a bit of experience cooking for a small family, the problem of quantity is troubling me. I will be responsible for making rolls — about 12 dozen at a time — and the same quantity of muffins first thing every morning. I thought perhaps you could help me. I would appreciate it very much if you could send recipes for these . . . J.G.

PLAIN MUFFINS
(Makes 200 muffins)

9 lbs. flour, 9 oz. baking powder, 2 oz. salt, 2 lbs 6 oz. sugar, 3 1-2 cups (approximately 21) eggs, 4 qts. milk, 2 lbs. melted fat.

Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Add sugar. Beat eggs. Add milk to them and mix well. Pour liquid into a hollow in centre of dry ingredients. Add melted fat. Mix quickly until dry ingredients are dampened (approximately 1 minute). Pour into greased muffin tins, allowing approximately 2 oz. batter per muffin. Bake at 425 deg. Fahr. until golden brown (approximately 20 minutes).

Variations: (1) Add 3 lbs. raisins (washed and dried) to dry ingredients. (2) Add 2-1-4 lbs. grated dry cheese to dry ingredients. (3) Substitute 3 lbs. cornmeal for 3 lbs. flour and reduce milk to 3 qts.

TUESDAY

Cederal Purpose Casserole
Buttered Broccoli, Generous Tossed Salad of Sliced Tomatoes, Green Onions, Spinach Leaves and Leaf Lettuce, with Herb French Dressing; Cherry Cottage Puddings (see Monday); Tea.

ANSWER: HOT ROLLS
(Approximately 156)

1 oz. active dry yeast, 1 qt. lukewarm water, 1 qt. luke-warm milk, 1 1-2 lbs. fat, 1 1-2 lbs. sugar, 3 1-2 oz. salt, 2 cups (approximately 10) eggs 1 teaspoon vanilla (optional) 8 1-2 lb. bread flour.

Dissolve the yeast in 1 pint (1 lb.) of the lukewarm water (at 80 deg. Fahr.) with 2 oz. of the listed sugar. Let stand for 10 minutes. Scald milk in thin cool to lukewarm. Cream fat. Add remaining sugar, salt and cream well. Add eggs gradually and mix well. Add flavoring if used. Add remaining water and scalded milk. Add 5 lbs. flour, mix well. Add yeast mixture, then remaining 3 1-2 lbs. flour. Knead until smooth. Place dough in lightly greased large container. Let rise in a warm place (78 to 82 deg. F.) free from draught covered with a clean dry cloth. Allow to stand 2 to 2 1-2 hours until fully risen. (Dough is light when an impression remains if pressed lightly with the finger). Punch down dough and let rise again. Cut off pieces of dough approximately 1 1-2 oz. in weight. Roll on lightly floured board until smooth and round. Place on greased baking pans. Set in warm proofer or cover with clean dry cloth and set in warm place to rise until double. Bake at 435 deg. Fahr. for 15 to 30 minutes. Remove from oven and brush with melted butter, if desired.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

ARE YOU A GOOD NEIGHBOR?

If you love your neighbor, then don't burn leaves near his back door or mow your lawn at six in the morning. Inconsiderate behavior like this puts a strain on even the strongest good-neighbor policy.

A luckless reader writes that she and her family find the noise and fumes of the city only to have the same nuisance in the new backyard.

Mrs. J. C. of Easton, Conn., writes: "During the winter we moved into a large house on acre which, despite the snow, seemed like heaven after a small apartment on a noisy street. Now I'm not so sure. With the coming of Spring, our neighbor has been burning everything in sight and rides his lawn mower at all hours of the day and night. If a poor soul were chasing him. There's no ordinance to stop him, but I thought a kind word from you about country neighborliness might help put the brakes on."

Perhaps an over-the-fence chat with your neighbor's wife might set him straight. It's just possible he doesn't realize that a word from his spouse might be more effective.

But, while we're on the subject, it would be well to point out that country neighbors have an even greater obligation to be courteous to each other than do city dwellers.

Fire and blight spread only too quickly from one property to another. Leaves and debris should be burned only on calm days — in a special container, in a deep hole near the road, or in a clearing where brush and trees can't catch. If smoke carries in annoying degree, it's too windy to be burning, anyway.

Good neighbors also take quick action against such insect pests as the elm beetle and tent caterpillar. Prompt spraying usually keeps them under control. If left unfinished, insect blight can spoil whole areas in the course of a season.

The nicest people to live next to also; keep trash cans tightly covered and out of sight of the street, control chickens and pets so they don't run hog wild through a neighbor's vegetable garden or prize border; keep lawns and shrubs in trim, but not at the expense of another's sleep or good humor.

It's so a pleasant life in the country — when everyone practises courtesy.

Parkdale W.I. Topic 'Rescue Breathing'

Parkdale W.I. held its June meeting at the hall on Wednesday evening. The president, Mrs. G. Priest, opened the meeting by thanking members for their willing help with the Spring Coffee Party and entertaining at the county home.

After the regular business, Jenny Robinson gave a report on the county plowing match; Mrs. Laura Lewis read an interesting report on "Conservation" and Lil Street thanked members for the gift of a new Brownie hat.

Everyone agreed that instead of the usual picnic there would be a "Fun Night" early in September for members and their children.

A motion was passed that Mrs. C. Keeble, Historical Research convenor would represent the W.I. at Hastings County Historical Society.

Mr. Bert Waters was a most welcome and appreciated guest. He first showed color film on 'rescue breathing' and the many ways it can be applied successfully. He then demonstrated other life saving methods, with the assistance of Mrs. G. Priest.

A question and answer period followed, from which everyone benefited greatly.

Refreshments were served by the co-hostesses and a social hour was enjoyed.

After purchasing a frozen fowl, it should be kept in the freezer until time for thawing and cooking.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Carl G. — They let my sister boss me around.

Mrs. M. G. — When we're out, she's in charge.

Carl G. — I'm 10 and whenever my parents go out they leave me in the charge of my sister who's 14. I think I'm enough for them to leave me in charge of myself. Myrna comes around and makes up all kinds of wild stories about me to my parents. The funny thing is that they used to leave Myrna in charge when she wasn't much older than I am now. They forget that I don't need a baby-sitter any more because I'm not a baby. But if they insist on having somebody keep tabs on me, let them hire a stranger, or else let me keep over at my friend's house. Anything would be better than being left at the mercy of my zombie sister.

Mrs. M. G. — It just happens that Myrna is a careful, conscientious kid who loves to look over whenever my husband and I go out. She takes the responsibility of "being in charge" very seriously and we have a complete peace of mind leaving the house and Carl in her hands.

I realize that Carl resents Myrna's authority. But he's at an age where he resents my every order, too. I know that he'll obey me, and he'll obey Myrna, but only after a struggle. I've told her not to fuss with him, just to tell him when to come in, what to eat and when to go to bed, and then report to us. But I guess she'll do it with a heavy hand. Still, no hired baby-sitter would be as reliable.

The Council — These parents are making the common mistake, a tempting one too, of believing that an older sibling is the best possible parent substitute. This is rarely true. A 14-year-old sister isn't far enough removed from a 10-year-old brother to see him with any perspective. As a general rule, we agree with Carl. A mature, hired baby-sitter is preferable.

All things being equal, we'd advise Mrs. G. either to go out less often or to invest in a paid sitter. We realize that it's cheaper, more convenient and more "natural," to leave Myrna in charge. But, if there's any alternative, it would be fairer to both children to let an older woman take over.

It would be fairer to Myrna because it would enhance her relationship with her brother who now regards her as being on the other side, massed with his parents "against" him. She wouldn't be under instructions not unlike and tattle. That bit would belong to the outsider.

And it would be fairer to Carl because it would be keeping his status as one of his parents' two children. This way he's the "baby" whom Myrna, his sister, must "tit" for!

No, whenever possible, a sister is someone to grow up with not under. And that's why to turn older children into babysitters while they are still themselves merely children are thrusting too much responsibility upon them too soon, and assuming that they have a maturi-

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Should Widow Go Home

DEAR DORIS:—My husband was a White Russian. We lived on bits and pieces for years, as he always had trouble getting work. Finally, the agony of chronic asthma, combined with his general feeling of being a failure, drove him to commit suicide.

DORIS CLARK

This was three months ago. I felt just about as bad as a person could feel, and our little son, who was not told what really happened, only knows his daddy is dead. I have been home with my mother, who wants me to move back (a thousand miles), so that she can take care of us.

I have some doubts. My mother is possessive with us children and might try to run things. My son is pretty unruly and she would yell at him. Yet I have nowhere else to turn. Do you think I should go?—WESTERNER.

DEAR WESTERNER:—Stay where you are. In spite of your lean years, you have gone a long way toward owning your home. You have friends in your church. You also tell me (in the part of your long letter which I did not have room for here) that you used to be a stenographer.

Right now you are still reeling from a blow which is just about as bad as one can get. Suicide brings a shock of rejection as well as the sorrow which accompanies the death of a loved one. Yet you can come up again under it, time.

Brush up on your typing, get some part-time care for Sonny (when he is not at school), and see what you can do on the employment market. Canada needs good stenos, and they tell me that widows with children to raise are considered wonderfully steady employees.

Your mother is someone to come home to—for a visit.

DEAR DORIS:—I have a cousin who is boy crazy. I hear about her going out to a party and coming in at 4 a.m. and nobody says anything. Then another time she came in at midnight and is bawled out for staying out so late. When she was little her mother used to spank her, then comfort her and give her candy when she cried.

Now her little sister is fussed over and seems to be better loved. She has a much better disposition than her older sister, whose temper is terrible. But I often wonder who is most at fault—daughter or mother and father?

I get to hear about it when my cousin brings her troubles to me. It's all so mixed up that I get mixed up too.—FIRST COUSIN.

DEAR FIRST COUSIN—Your cousin sounds like a desperate, rebellious teenager. How can she know where she is at, when her parents don't know, themselves? Somebody has to make up their mind about something and stick with it.

Can't that household set up some rules about coming in at night, just what constitutes misbehavior and how to treat it? Young people need some security. Erratic pattern, their thinking after the examples they see, and dependon adults to be firm with them.

These parents are not only foolishly critical, then unreliably indulgent. They also give their love unevenly, set that the first mixed-up kid also feels unwanted. Perhaps you can help her by making her see this. A counsellor for teenagers can be found in a YWCA or church organization—would know of other such situations and how to cope with them. The Children's Aid Society, 63 West Moira Street, Belleville, can direct her to such counselling.

South Hastings Baseball

Led by "Soup" Campbell's four-hit hurling Foxboro handed the Belleville Keemor Y's a 3-2 defeat in a South Hastings Baseball League tilt played Sunday afternoon at Foxboro.

Campbell let down thirteen batters on strikes and walked two over the nine inning route.

Glenn Dainard started for the Keemorites and was relieved by Bill Latchford in the eighth. They were touched for eleven hits, walking two and whiffing five.

Charleston sparked the winner's attack with three singles; Bagley had a triple and a single and Dickey collected two hits.

Larry Soule was the best for Belleville as he hit safely twice. Parker and Duguid had a single apiece.

Aussies Win Second Test

LONDON (Reuters) — Australia survived a shock assault by England's pace attack Monday to win the second test cricket match at Lord's by five wickets.

The Australians needed only 69 runs for victory but they lost their first four wickets for 14 runs to the fiery bowling of Brian Statham and Freddie Trueman. But Australia safely reached 71 for five to clinch the match.

England scored only 206 in its first innings, the Australians replied with 340, and England was all out for 202 in the second innings Monday morning.

Letter To The Sports Editor

Needs Coaches

Sports Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I would like to make a final appeal to the citizens of this city for assistance in operating the softball division of the Belleville Minor Sports Association. This year we have over 500 boys and 300 girls registered to play minor softball. At the present moment 23 teams (18 peewee, 5 bantam) are in operation. The squirt division (boys 8-10 years) with eight teams or 200 boys approximately, is still dormant because of the lack of coaches and assistants. We are not interested in how much they know about the game. What we need is three or four assistants for two hours, one night a week, to help control and supervise these boys in order to see that all get a chance to play in each game and that all enjoy themselves. The main appeal here is to the fathers of these boys. How about it fathers, let's make a participating father and son team instead of spectator and player, respectively. The squirt division will be holding a meeting this Tuesday (tonight) at 7:00 p.m. at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street to set up schedules, etc. for the summer. If there is not sufficient interest there will be no minor softball for the boys of this group this summer.

Women, this letter is directed more towards you. This year the minor softball division is making efforts to operate a girls' division. At this moment close to 300 girls are registered. It is my belief that the average father has failed his son within the minor sports circles. Are you going to do the same to your daughter? As I mentioned earlier, it is not what you know about the game, but your desire to help. This would mean about two hours, one night a week. The strength of this minor girls' league now and in the years to come, is entirely dependent on what happens this year. It is the wish of the Belleville Minor Sports Association to give the girls an equal chance to that of the boys in minor sports. There will be a meeting Tuesday, June 27, at 7:30 p.m. at the Recreation Centre on Pinnacle Street, for all those interested. We need about thirty or better participants to get this league rolling. As I mentioned about the squirt division, if there is not sufficient interest here, also, there will be no minor girls' league.

I would like to point out that this is the final appeal for assistance. Our minor softball leagues operate on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings only. Each group has only one evening, though. Fathers and mothers please come forward now and support us before it is too late!

Yours truly,
Allan Sills.

Minor Softball representative for the Belleville Minor Sports Association.

Meets Beamanoff Tonight

Pressure on Chuvalo

TORONTO (CP) — The pressure will be on George Chuvalo tonight when he climbs into the Maple Leaf Gardens ring for a 10-rounder with Willie Besmanoff.

For one thing, the fight crowd has been speculating whether the 23-year-old Canadian heavyweight champ early clashes of talent are about to blossom into full - blown ring maturity.

For another, the fifth-ranked world contender already has been tabbed by champion Floyd Patterson as one of a select handful he is considering for his next defence, possibly this year.

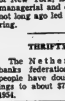
A win over the unranked German would not necessarily enhance Chuvalo's chances for a loss could do him nothing but harm.

A third reason is simply that Besmanoff, 28, has proved himself a rough and durable customer during his up-and - down boxing career. Only Sonny Liston ever stopped him and he has handy wins over men who have given considerable trouble to an admittedly younger and less-experienced Chuvalo — Bob Baker and Pat McMurtry, for instance.

CHUVALO FAVORED

All this to the contrary, local oddsmakers were expected to make Chuvalo a favorite of about 7 to 5. He has been more active recently than Besmanoff and in practice workouts appeared sharper and in better trim.

Chuvalo was expected to register about 206 pounds, lightest of his pro career, at today's weigh - in. Besmanoff, another big man, figured to weigh a couple of pounds lighter.



Montreal promoter Eddie Quinn came to town Monday to confirm an offer of a match with Bob Cleroux if Besmanoff gets past Chuvalo.

Chuvalo's last outing was a split decision over Alex Miteff of Argentina.

Besmanoff, now fighting out of New York, has a history of managerial and other woes that not long ago led him to quit the ring.

Seeded Players Wins

Rain Chills Wimbledon

LONDON (CP)—The 75th Wimbledon tennis championships resume today with a schedule jammed with men's and women's matches as a result of chilling rains which ruined most of the opening day program.

This—the second day of the tournament — is traditionally "ladies' day," but three-quarters of the men's first-round singles play scheduled for Monday was washed out by the downpour.

Despite the rains, six of the eight seeded players, including defending champion Neale Fraser of Australia, managed to complete their matches between showers and all came through with victories.

Canada suffered a setback when Francois Godbout of Waterloo, Que., was eliminated by Orlando Sirola, an Italian Davis Cupper, 6-3, 6-4, 6-3.

Canadian champion Bob Bedard of Montreal, whose match Monday was rained out, meets Mike Sangster of England today.

In the women's singles, Eleanor Dodge of Montreal drew Michele Bourdonais of France as her first - round opponent, while Mrs. Hanna Sladek, another Montrealer, was matched against Lynne Hutchings of South Africa.

Second - seeded Rod Laver, Australia's other left - handed star, disposed of Russian Tomas Lejus 6-4, 6-1, 7-1, dropping his service only once in the straight set triumph.

The other four seeds to gain the second round yesterday without serious difficulty were Australian champion Roy Emerson, Nicola Pietrangeli of Italy, Manuel Santana of Spain and Luis Alaya of Chile.

Skowron Horse-Powers Ford In Win 13

Three-Run Homer in 9th

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

It's getting so that the question no longer is whether Whitey Ford can win 20 baseball games in one season, for the first time. Some experts are speculating whether he can take 30.

No major league pitcher has won 30 since Dizzy Dean did it for St. Louis Cardinals in 1934. The only American Leaguer to come close since then was Hal Newhouser, who won 29 for Detroit Tigers in 1944.

Ford, who won No. 13 Monday night for an 8-6 victory over Los Angels that made him the first man to beat every club in the expanded 10 - team American League.

He has three more victories than any other pitcher in the majors this season. And coming in the only game scheduled in the American League it put the second - place Yankees within one game of the league - leading Tigers.

OWENS WINS

Philadelphia Phillies knocked off San Francisco Giants 1-0 and Milwaukee Braves beat St. Louis 6-5 in the National League. The Phils did it behind a joint, eight - hit pitching performance by Jim Owens and reliver Dallas Green.

A three - run homer by Bill Skowron with two men out in the ninth inning gave the Yankees their only lead against the Angels and beat reliever Jim Donohue (1-2) at Wrigley Field in Los Angeles.

Albie Pearson, Steven Bilko and Ken Hunt honored off Ford. But the Yankees blasted back against starter Ken McBridge on home runs by Mickey Mantle, his 22rd of the season, and pinch - hitter Johnny Blanchard and a two - run single by Yogi Berra.

Skowron's winning shot came off righthander Art Fowler, 11, was the Yanks' 101st home run, top total in both leagues.

Ford (13-2), gave up six hits and walked four men, but fanned seven in eight innings, increasing his strikeout total to 100. Lefty Luis Arroyo mopped up 1-2-3 in the ninth.

NEEDED HELP

Owens gave up four hits, walked two and struck out four in his first start for the Phils. He went six innings, then admitted he "ran out of gas."

The Phils managed just four hits off loser Jack Sanford (3-5) and Stu Miller, scoring in the fourth on a triple by Don Demeter and a single by Charlie Smith. The third - place Giants now trail the first - place Cincinnati Redlegs by five engagements.

Joe Adcock rapped a two-run homer, capping a six - run third inning for the Braves, and then singled home the deciding run in the fifth. Larry Jackson (5-5) was the loser, while Lew Burdette (7-5) won his third in a row, with relief help from Don McMahon in the ninth.

The Braves' big third inning began with a two - out walk. Frank Bolling, Ed Mathews and Hank Aaron followed with singles that brought in two runs for a 2-2 tie. Frank Thomas then hit a two - run triple ahead of Adcock's homer.

Yankees Lead With 101

Home Runs May Set New Record

NEW YORK (AP) — Homers are being hit at such a record-breaking pace this season that standards of both the American and National Leagues and seven individual teams are in jeopardy.

The combined home run total through Monday's games was 1,213. The major league record was set in 1956 when 2,294 were hit.

The American League, playing with 10 clubs for the first time, is almost certain to smash its mark of 1,091 set in 1950. The batters already have walloped 697 circuit blows, Associated Press figures show.

The National League record is 1,260 established in 1953. With more than two weeks remaining before the season's halfway mark is reached, the senior loop's aggregate is 516.

New York Yankees pace both leagues with 101. Detroit Tigers are second in the American League with 85 followed by Los Angeles Angels 88, Minnesota Twins, 86, Kansas City Athletics 46 and Boston Red Sox 44.

Los Angeles Dodgers lead the National with 83. Then come Milwaukee Braves 80, San Francisco Giants 86, Cincinnati Reds 69, Chicago Cubs 57, Pittsburgh Pirates 56, St. Louis Cardinals 51 and Philadelphia Phillies 34.

The Yanks may eclipse their own and the American League mark of 193 set last season.

WINNIPEG DROPS OUT

SEATTLE (AP) — Western Hockey League directors Monday gave approval for Winnipeg to suspend operations for at least one season.

Hitting: Bill Skowron, New York Yankees, went 3-for-3 and beat Los Angeles 8-6 with a three-run homer with two men out in the ninth inning.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By CHED H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Gerry Joyce hasn't been on very good terms with the weather man since the old bloke turned a watery countenance on him the last time his Real Estaters were scheduled to tangle with Bob Temple's Bobcats, but tonight could be another story.

Well, not exactly the last time because when the Cats were playing the host role in the intra-city battle, Joyces, behind the two-hit hurling of Bobby Hall, trimmed the Bengals' whiskers with a pair of 9-2 clippers.

The Estaters have not been setting the world afire with their clouting but more recently they have shown that they are about the best team defensively in the B and D circuit.

They have been fielding flawlessly against opposition batting the last few times out and this with some unexpected fine pitching has catapulted them to the top perch of the league. As of now they have a 6-3 record, owed for twelve points in the right-hand column and two points in front of the second-place Cobourg Merchants.

But don't tell Temple's Tabbies about. True, they share third spot with Picton and the Trenton Flyers with six points. They're about due to "bust out" and Temple cannot think of a better time to do it than tonight when the city outfits tangle at the Fair Grounds in an 8.15 hassle.

This could be the Night of the Hunter. It is assumed that Bobby will get the mound nod from the boss and the Cats' ace righthander would like nothing better than to wreak revenge for that 9-2 defeat he suffered at the hands of Joyces the last time out.

Doug Ellis will go to the hill for the Estaters. Doug has a 3-1 record, having set back Picton and the Trenton Flyers. His lone loss was a 1-0 squeaker at the hands of the Sytcos.

With the Cats yearning for vengeance and the Real Estaters out to shrink their lop-sided margin, tonight's game looks like a "must" for the faithful.

The fleet-running Belleville Kenmore, currently riding the crest of a five-game winning streak, meet a tough test here tomorrow night when they clash with the Port Hope, Ontario, in a "Bill Veeck Night" at the Park Outfield.

The Port Hopers are the only club in the Lakeshore Intermediate Baseball League that Ken Soden's Kenmo have failed to defeat. The last time they met the Hopers tied a 4-0 shutout on the bats of the Kenmors.

Since that time, with their pitching staff settled down the city squad has found its batting eyes. The last three or four times out they have savaged baseballs to all corners of the diamonds whether home or abroad. Against Peterborough and Newcastle they unleashed a collective barrage of 32 clouts.

In the Newcastle game they turned in one of their best defensive efforts of the season. They accepted all chances but one in a style reminiscent of their junior "A" championship form of a year ago.

Tomorrow night sees the first night baseball game under the lights in many a year. And it's coming in with a Chicago White Sox touch. Oh, there won't be any fireworks-spitting scoreboards or bunny rabbits popping out of the ground to present the plate umpire with new baseballs, but there will be other sideshows.

For instance the first 250 fans will get free cokes and potato chips. There are eighteen door prizes. One will be drawn every half inning. They range from turkeys to lingerie and so on and so forth.

CUP RACES

Dick Burrowes has postponed his proposed stock-car race opening scheduled for July 1st and will stage a sports car race instead. The Big Car (Indianapolis type) Association is bringing a dozen of its red speedsters here for a meet at the Ekenseneville Parkland Speedway on the holiday and that should provide plenty of thrills and perhaps spills.

On June 16 the Red Devils raced at the CNE track and drew a huge crowd. All are expert drivers and the car-racing public should not pass this one up. The meet starts at 2.00 p.m. Mr. Burrowes says interest in stock car racing is very high and he expects to get it under way in the very near future.

Makes Players Available

National Readies For Expansion

CHICAGO (AP)—The National League today adopted a "liberalized" plan with a sliding scale to provide major league talent for its newest members—New York and Houston Colts.

Although most of the plan is similar to that of the American League, the National will make available more players from which the newcomers can choose, including premium picks of $125,000 a player.

New York and Houston will pay $75,000 each for most of their players. But they will have a choice of making $50,000 purchases, and each club will wind up with four $125,000 premium players.

In stocking Los Angeles and Washington, each American League club made available 15 players from which the new teams chose seven at a flat price of $75,000 a player. Each team spent $2,100,000.

The National will make available 17 players from each established team, with each new club spending a minimum of $1,700,000 to a maximum of $2,100,000.

AVAILABLE LATER

Under the plan, each club will make available after the world series 15 players from their roster as of Aug. 31, 1961. Of these 15, seven must be from the active list and the other eight from each team's major league roster of 40.

The new clubs must take a total of 37 players at $75,000 a player, giving each newcomer 16 with the established teams losing four apiece. Next, New York and Houston each have also choice of selecting one player from every club at a price of $50,000.

Finally, each established club must then make available two premium players and from this list the newcomers must alternately select four $125,000 players.

Each new team will end up with four premium players while each established team will have only one. Under the entire plan, the newcomers will have to pick 20 players but can go as high as 28 by exercising the right of selecting eight $50,000 players.

Hurls Picton's 6-4 Win

"Chief" Tames The Cats

By GARRY ALEXANDER

Belleville Bobcats went down to their fourth straight defeat here last night when they blew a 4-0 lead and dropped an 11-inning 6-4 decision to the Picton Wats.

Temple's Tabbies scored single markers in the second and third innings and made it 4-0 in the sixth while holding the visitors at bay. Waits, who left runners stranded in all, finally broke through with two in the seventh. They tied it 4-4 with two in the ninth and won it with two more in the top of the 11th.

Ageless Pat Maracle continued to pitch fine ball for Picton, stopping the 'Cats on six well-scattered hits, striking out his season's high of 15 and walking but two. It was his third win of the year.

Bob Green was the loser in relief of Bobby Hunter. Green took over in the ninth with the 4-4 lead and dropped an 11-inning 6-4 decision to the Picton Wats.

Johnny Batchelor's double and an error on the play set up the Bobcats' initial run. He scored on Earl Cousins' high fly to left. A walk, passed ball and Brown's single to centre made it 2-0.

Cousins singled off Maracle's shins and Pat Gilmour belted his first hit of the campaign, a solid homer to left-centre, for the 4-0 lead in the sixth. After that the only runner Maracle allowed was Crawford on a tenth-inning double.

Marve Stacey had a perfect night at the plate for Picton. He homered, doubled, singled twice, walked twice and scored two runs. Ron Weese had a double and single while Keith Stacey and Denny Hayden had doubles, Maracle and Keith MacDonald singles.

"Wiener" Brown topped the losers with a double and single. Johnny Batchelor and Floyd Crawford doubled, Pat Gilmour homered and Earl Cousins singled.

Fight Or Lose Crown!

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Paul (Pinky) George, manager of Argentine heavyweight boxer Alejandro Lavorante, demanded Monday that world champion Floyd Patterson fight a ranked contender or lose his crown.

George, in a statement in reports that Patterson plans to fight unranked Tom McNeely at Boston, declared "If Patterson and his manager, Cus D'Amato, go through with the McNeely fight, then a tournament should be set up to determine a new champion."

George, here for Lavorante's fight Thursday night with Monroe Ratliff of Los Angeles, made his proposal to Willie Ritchie, chief inspector of the California State Athletic Commission. Ritchie said he would bring the matter before Douglas Hayden, chairman of the state commission.

Favored To Retain World Title

TOKYO (AP) — Lanky Pone Kingpetch, the first Thai to win a world boxing championship, is a 4-5 favorite to retain his title tonight against Japanese challenger Mitsunori Seki.

The Kingpetch fight is the third for the 112-pound division crown in Japan since 1955.

Pone, 25, took the world crown from Argentina's Pascual Perez by a split 15-round decision in his hometown of Bangkok on May 5, 1960. He then knocked out the former champion in the fifth round in the return match at Los Angeles in September, 1960.

The Thai's record, dating back to 1955, shows 26 victories and four losses. He scored eight knockouts and has been stopped cold once.

Doug Sanders Won't Enter British Open

HUNTINGTON, W. Va. (AP) — Doug Sanders, runnerup in the U.S. Open and golf's No. 1 money-winner this year, said Monday he has decided not to play in next month's British Open.

Sanders said: "First, I've been playing the tour a lot this year and I think it would have knocked me out to go over there and then rush back.

"Then I talked it and since (Arnold) Palmer and (Gary) Player will be over there, it's a good idea for me to stay here since I'm only $10,000 or so behind the two of them in money winnings. I'll stay on the tour steadily at least through September."

Player the Masters champion, leads the PGA tour with winnings above $53,000. Palmer, who won the Masters and U.S. Open and was runnerup to Australia's Kel Nagle in the British Open last year, is over $50,000 with Sanders just over $40,000.

Unwilling Specialists In Postponed Pictures

By BOB THOMAS

STOCKHOLM (AP) — George Sealon cast an anxious eye on the leaden Swedish sky. Drops of rain fell on his forehead and he swore softly.

The director - writer and his producing partner, William Perlberg, have become unwilling specialists in postponed pictures. The first was The Pleasure of His Company, which was going to rapid shots when the actress decided to strike. The industry-wide actors' strike put Perlberg-Seaton in a bind.

They had commitments with William Holden and Paramount studios to film Counterfeit Traitor. What to do? They suspended Pleasure for Counterfeit.

"It was a long chance," said Sealon as he huddled under a beach umbrella in front of Stockholm's massive town hall.

SICKS RAD WEATHER

Some of the worst summer weather in recent European history set in during the filming of Counterfeit. Last October Seaton was in Stockholm trying to shoot summer scenes in 15-degree weather. After two sunless days, the company disbanded.

Seaton returned to Hollywood to finish Pleasure after a six-month hiatus, meanwhile planning for Bill Holden's health. The

Most Actors and Actresses Make Poor Game-Players

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—Big theatrical names in playing TV games may help attract audiences, but, in the opinion of Mark Goodson who ought to know, most actors and actresses make poor game-players.

"I think it is because they are trained to use their people's lines, and I also think that actors by nature are illogical and become disinterested when called upon for free - wheeling imagination," the producer explained.

Goodson is a specialist in the field. His program producing firm, Goodson-Todman, now is celebrating its 15th year in network TV and has developed such long-running programs as What's My Line, To Tell the Truth, I've Got a Secret, Play Your Hunch, Beat the Clock, Number Please and many others.

One of the big changes in TV since Goodson's first struck it rich in 1946 with Winner Take All, is that nowadays, no one gives a show, off to a wobbly start, a chance to work out the bugs.

"I think that if What's My Line? were to start out new in this era with an unknown panel, it wouldn't have a chance for survival," Goodson said.

star remained intact and the Counterfeit Company grouped here this June.

"We had 10 days of key, opening scenes," Seaton said. "We couldn't start the picture in Berlin. So we had to return."

But he had only six days' use of Holden, who had to report to London for Satan Never Sleeps. That was why Seaton eyed the sky.

"I figure these delays cost us $200,000 on each picture," Seaton said. "I'd be not recommending this as a way of making movies.

All-Stars Defeat Tribe 2-0

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Combine a two-run fifth inning and an effective four-hitter by five pitchers and you have the ingredients of Monday night's International League All-Stars' 2-0 victory over Cleveland Indians.

A record crowd of 21,885 in Buffalo's War Memorial Stadium saw a seven-man single by Rochester's Bob Johnson, the league's top batting leader, decide the tight pitching duel. The victory gave the Stars their third straight triumph over a major league opponent in the three-game series started in 1956.

Ray Washburn of Charleston Marlins worked the first three innings and allowed only a hit. Bob Veale of Columbus Jets who pitched the next three was the winner.

Buffalo's Ted Savage launched the winning rally with a single and then stole second. Losing pitcher Tom John bobbled a dribbler of Jim Gentile, Jersey City and he too stole to set the stage for Johnson.

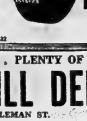
$2.00 Bet Pays off $39,412

BOSTON (AP)—An unidentified person at Suffolk Downs collected $39,412 Monday, reported to be the highest payoff in United States racing history on a $2 wager.

The big payoff was the prize for picking four straight winners in the twin daily double.

There was some worry as the 4 x 4 x 4 x 4 entertained a claim of foul on the final leg of the multiple betting play, Jeddah Chant had won the seventh race by a half-length over favored Silversmith but Phil Grimm, who rode Silversmith, claimed interference.

The stewards found no evidence of interference and the result was allowed to stand.



The previous high payoff for a $2 wager was $35,378 earlier in the Suffolk Downs meeting.

The winning horses Monday were Peace Ship, $8.40, Wise Flushing, $10.60, Pawnmore, $4.40 and Jeddah Chant, $36.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

General Tendencies: This is one of those days when the policies under which you decided to operate can be reduced by a very conscientious attitude on your part to a workable basis in which a solid and secure structure to your existence should be the basic factor involved in today's activities. Handle whatever applies to real estate, produce, mining, sound or the production of sound, acting.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Business and civic affairs need your undivided attention today if you want to take advantage of the fine aspects at work now. Make hay while the sun shines, as it were. Then tonight you can dine out in style and see a good floor show.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Don't waste a moment of this fine day which is so full of new and interesting ideas and outlets for your talents and abilities. Meet the right people and then work together ingeniously and in perfect harmony. Expand. Be polite.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Day hours should be spent finding better methods of increasing abundance and efficiency. Be financially secure. Then dress nicely in the evening and go to see the person who is closest to your heart. Reach greater rapport.

Moon Children (June 22 to June 23) — Be careful that associate with whom there has been some kind of misunderstanding, but be sure you do not get sentimental or there is no hope of reconciliation. Be objective, cool and get results. Then get out together in P.M. for fun.

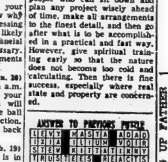
Cancer (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Resolve to do a good deal of work that is awaiting you enthusiastically, instead of wasting your time with persons who never accomplish anything. You can also be very helpful to co-workers, P.M. take health treatments. Get clothes in order.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) — Be sure you bring your talents before the right people who can help you to commercialize on them during day hours. Then enjoy sports, cultural pleasures, etc. Evening is fine for romance or family.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — See that you attain greater financial security now and can then be an inspiration to others who will look to you for guidance. P.M. do whatever is necessary to make your home a haven of rest and happiness.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) — Strive for better understanding with all associates by working along with them more harmoniously today. Listen to their ideas and express your own kindly. Then get out tonight for a fine social evening together. Grow.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Find out where your trouble is today and know why if you have not been progressing as well as desired. Very likely it is some error of a financial nature. Get a loan, if necessary. P.M. take health treatments you need.



Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — If you reach a decision a.m. on just what you want in your every-day existence, you will know just how to start the ball rolling in the right direction. P.M., get the influential to back you in every sphere.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — While your main concern is in helping others, this is one day when you must give full attention to own personal affairs and get them in good order. Then be sure you have an evening off and have fun at favorite recreation.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Spare time should be spent getting personal matters on even keel today and be sure to think of the welfare of your associates and friends, P.M. get out socially and meet the right people who can be helpful to you in the future.

If your child is born today— he, or she, will soon evolve into one of those remarkable people who sit down and plan any project wisely ahead of time, make all arrangements to the finest detail, and then go after what is to be accomplished in a practical and fast way. However, give spiritual training early so that the nature does not become too cold and calculating. Then there is fine success, especially where real state and property are concerned.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this inexpensive substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually packed convenient Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug stores. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Govt. Suggests Easing Of War Measures Act

Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — A proposal to ease the severity of provisions of the War Measures Act by providing deportation of Canadian citizens or removal of citizenship status was presented Monday by Justice Minister Fulton, QC.

This proposal, and others, were in a draft bill placed before a special Commons committee charged with reconciling, as far as possible, the provisions in the War Measures Act with the provisions of the Bill of Rights.

Mr. Fulton said the draft legislation constituted "a practical reconciliation" between the personal protections in the Bill of Rights and the "tremendous powers" a government could assume by invoking the War Measures Act.

But Judy LaMarsh (L — Niagara Falls) said she doesn't think the two measures can be reconciled.

"I think we're wasting our time trying to do it," said Miss LaMarsh, a lawyer.

The draft bill, besides its specific protection for Canadian citizens, would make it mandatory that any government order for wartime detention of persons be accompanied by provision for review of their cases.

WOULD STRIKE OUT

It also would strike out two arbitrary powers provided in the War Measures Act.

One prohibits the reclase on bail of persons held for deportation or of enemy aliens except by consent of the justice minister. The other provides for automatic seizure of any goods in which an alien enemy or declared enemy has an interest.

Mr. Fulton suggested that the committee seek the views of public organizations and individuals on the draft bill following the summer adjournment of Parliament.

Claims Thirty Lidice Children Seen in Poland

By LIONEL WALSH

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — Thirty children of Lidice survived in Poland at least until 1945, an affidavit on behalf of Adolf Eichmann claimed today.

The Nazis, in revenge for the Czech partisan killing of Reinhard Heydrich, Nazi "protector of Bohemia and Moravia," razed the Czech village of Lidice in 1942, killed its men, deported its women and children, and expunged its name from records.

Among the charges against former SS Lt.-Col. Eichmann is that he took part in the deportation of the Lidice children to Poland and their killing there.

Eichmann, whom Israel is trying for complicity in the wartime slaughter of 6,000,000 Jews, said Monday the matter did not come under his department.

SAW CHILDREN ALIVE

Today, Eichmann's West German lawyer, Robert Servatius, submitted an affidavit from a Mrs. Elise Freiburg, 34, who said she had seen 30 of the Lidice children almost daily near Poznan, Poland, until she fled the country in 1947.

Premier Smallwood Will Unveil Tablet At Beaumont-Hamel, France, in Memory Of Newfoundland's World War I Heroes

Written for
The Canadian Press
By Michael F. Harrigan of the St. John's Telegram

There is a part of France that is forever Newfoundland.

It is a 40-acre memorial park at Beaulieont Hamel, about 60 miles north of Paris and not far from the Belgian border.

There, on Sunday, July 2, Newfoundland's Premier Joseph Smallwood will unveil a tablet in memory of the extraordinary heroism of the Royal Newfoundland Regiment in the First World War Battle of the Somme.

To most Canadians July 1 is a day of rejoicing—the birthday of their nation. To Newfoundlanders, the newest Canadians, it has been a day of mourning for 45 years.

On that day in 1916 the flower of Newfoundland youth—the average age of the regiment was 24—was cut down like grass before the scythe in the frontal assault against the German lines that was doomed before it began.

The regiment, which went into action with a strength of nearly 800—most of whom went over the top—could only muster 68 at roll call some hours later. At least 100 were dead, 210 missing and 374 wounded. Half the officers became casualties, then being counted the first list of dead.

PROUD AND SORROWFUL

There was scarcely a home that was not affected in a tightly knit island community then numbering about a quarter of a million people. Sorrow was mixed with pride.

Funds were raised to provide beds for the wounded; recruiting was stimulated and two full companies left St. John's before the end of the month.

When Newfoundland took note of the unlimited tribute paid to the gallantry of her sons, it was consoling balm for the heartbreak she felt.

The Newfoundlanders were the only overseas unit that took part in the attack. No other unit suffered so dreadfully in proportion to the number of men engaged. Praise came from all quarters for the astonishing bravery and steadiness of this relatively untried regiment.

The assault at Beaumont-Hamel was one phase of a great Allied offensive on the Somme. It was launched along a front that extended 20 miles north of the river with 15 British divisions under Gen. Sir Henry Rawlinson, and south of the Somme by the French with five divisions.

BRITISH EFFORT

The attack was mainly a British effort, for the French had been drained by the months struggle for Verdun. Indeed, the offensive was designed to some extent to take the pressure off that beleaguered fortress.

Tremendous preparations were made for this offensive. For the first time since the war started the Allies had enough of everything, men, guns, ammunition, supplies.

Everybody knew something big was coming, including the German. There was no room at the front for any more artillery, and enough three-ton lorries to make a line 40 miles long had been rumbling up to the front with shells for the guns for weeks prior to the battle.

There was real need for such artillery support. Since the Germans had been driven back across the Marne in 1915, they had been digging in for the stalemate that was to become known as trench warfare. The German trenches were actually permanent fortifications, so elaborate as to rate attention in architectural magazines.

Some of the dug-outs could accommodate a whole platoon, the troops could remain deep underground out of reach of the heaviest shelling. A positive jungle of barbed wire and a cunningly arranged system of machine-gun posts enabled the enemy to direct a destructive flanking and enfilading fire. This was so intense that it was likened "to a heavy wind sweeping through the grass." Survivors said they could almost see the bullets coming.

HEAVIEST BOMBARDMENT

The artillery bombardment began about a week before the offensive, increasing in intensity until the morning of the attack, when it reached proportions never known in the entire history of the war.

At Beaumont-Hamel, three brigades stood in readiness, the 86th, 87th and 88th the last including the Newfoundland Regiment. There were three systems of German trenches ahead. The first and second were to be taken by the 86th and 87th, the third by the 88th. One of those who were briefed observed that "it looked easy on the map."

On the last day of June a divisional order commanded the brigades to muster on the outskirts at Louvencourt. Farewell concerts were held that night after which the regiments left Louvencourt to go into the line.

By midnight they were in position at "St. John's Road," a new support trench they had dug. The plan of battle was for them to go over the top from this trench, cross the two "captured" trenches on foot bridges, then walk across no man's land to their objective. As it turned out, most of them fell before they reached the front line.

RESISTANCE STIFF

The night was very dark and July 1 dawned with a deep haze on the ground that melted away as the sun rose. The guns opened up in earnest after daybreak. Huge mines were exploded under the German positions as 7:30 a.m.—the zero hour—struck. The first waves went forward. These included the Royal Fusiliers, Welsh Borderers, Inniskillings, Lancashire Fusiliers and other English line regiments.

As the shelling lifted in advance of the troops the Germans came up from their dugouts. Though somewhat dazed, they put up machine-gun defences that stiffened every minute.

Neither the 86th nor 87th reached their objectives. They were slashed down by the fierce fire of machine-gun fire. It was obvious things were going badly as remnants of the regiments came limping back. But the train of events had been set in motion and there was no effort made to stop it. About 8:40 a.m. the order came down the line that the 88th, the men and Newfoundlanders will advance as soon as possible." At 9:15, Brigade was notified the Newfoundlanders, were moving off.

DANGLING TREES

From the pen of Lance-Corporal J. J. Ryan came the most graphic eyewitness account of the action from there on. The heavy wire remained uncut even after the storm of shell-fire. Machine-gun bullets ripped through the ranks.

The German artillery was surprisingly powerful and accurate. Shrapnel killed men around the "danger tree," now a stump with a metal cap on the battlefield.

A shell dropped into Ryan's group and only three or four crawled away. A merc handful of A and B Companies reached the front-line wire followed by C and D Companies at a steady walk.

The ground toward the Germans positions was a gentle declivity which left the advancing troops completely exposed. But, in spite of the appalling losses, the unanimous account is of men advancing without flinching, through a blizzard of fire by their comrades dropping to right and left.

An unofficial history of the regiment says: "... (Lieut.) Ralph Herder, Lance-Corporal Ralph Andrews and Jack Caul got as near to the German front line as any survivor on that awful day."

On the way Herder passed his brother lying dead.

C. F. Garland, MM, with a bullet in his arm and leg, crawled back "over broken ground and through shell holes to eventually tumble into a trench, its bottom covered with dead and dying comrades."

Private Ewen Hennebury remembers "the scorching pain and intense heat" as he helped bring in the wounded.

Privates J. Cox and S. Dewling each won the Military Medal in the reserve trenches.

Lieut. C. S. Frost, MC, an accountant who later became president of the Bank of Nova Scotia, carried in three men on his back, two of whom died en route.

It was all over in less than a half-hour. By 10 a.m. the corporal's guard of survivors was back in the reserve trenches. Only two of one company answered their names.

Gen. Sir Beauvoir de Lisle, commanding the 29th Division, the one that included the Newfoundlanders, wrote to Sir Edward Morris, prime minister of Newfoundland.

"When the order to attack was given, your men moved forward to his appointed objective in his appointed time. It was a magnificent display of trained and disciplined valor, and its assault only failed of success because dead men can advance no further."

BETTER THAN BEST

Gen. Sir Aylmer Hunter-Weston, Eighth Army Corps commander, told survivors: "You have done better than the best."

Field Marshal Earl Haig cabled Sir Walter Edward Davidson, Newfoundland's governor: "... Newfoundland may well feel proud of her sons. The heroism and devotion of which they displayed on the 1st of July has never been surpassed."

The Times History of the War, describing the various strongpoints assaulted that day, singled out Beaumont - Hamel "where the Newfoundlanders distinguished themselves and lost heavily."

Although victory was not achieved at Beaumont-Hamel, the diversionary nature of the attack had considerable tactical value. The French, not expected and thus not strongly opposed, made good progress. At the southern end of the British line the German front was shattered for a mile between Fricourt and Montauban. Two weeks later their second line was pierced between Longueval and Great Bazentin.

The sacrificial aspect of this sorrowful, though glorious, episode had a great impact on the people of Newfoundland. It was natural that even before hostilities ended, a move should be made to commemorate the "July Drive."

PURCHASED FIELD

Lt.-Col. Thomas Nangle, Roman Catholic padre of the regiment, was instructed to go to France and report on the condition of the Newfoundland war graves. He recommended the government purchase the battlefield of Beaumont-Hamel and maintain it as a memorial park and cemetery. The government, headed by Prime Minister Sir Richard Squires, gave him authority to spend up to $10,000 to do this.

Father Nangle at once began negotiations with the 250 landowners scattered by the war from Monchy-le-Preux to Morocco. The majority readily agreed to sell the land. But some, convinced he had struck gold, held up the project for three years. The purchase was completed at a total cost of $30,000 with $8,000 raised by a women's committee in Newfoundland and the balance paid by the government.

Father Nangle learned that R. H. K. Cochius, a Dutch landscape architect who had laid out Bowring Park near St. John's, was back in Holland, and persuaded him to live at Beaumont-Hamel until restoration of the battleground was completed.

Five miles of fence enclosed the park, roads were cut, trenches cleared, dug-outs reopened, a log cabin built, and 35,000 trees from Scotland, Holland and Newfoundland planted. An Artificial mound of granite from Scotland and the Ardennes was raised, topped by a bronze caribou in an attitude of defiance. Earl Haig unveiled the memorial and renamed the park June 7, 1925.

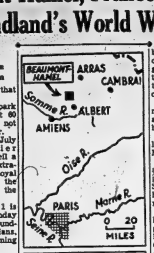
RECENTLY RESTORED

During the German occupation of France in the Second World War the park and cabin fell into disrepair. After Newfoundland became part of Canada in 1949, the park passed under control of the department of veterans' affairs which undertook to restore it. The log cabin was torn down and a new lodge, with reception room for visitors, was erected. A large picture window provides a panorama of the battlefield.

In 1960 Capt. George Hicks, MC, of Gould Falls, now sergeant-at-arms in the Newfoundland legislature, made a tour of the battlefield. He saw the spot where he fell wounded, and, although the original terrain was overgrown, he was able to locate the main system of reserve and support trenches as well as the front line.

He crossed to the German trenches and experienced a strange feeling at being able to look back and see for the first time what the Germans could see 44 years before.

MEMORIAL TABLET



It was decided it would be too costly, and unnecessary, to restore the battlefield in its entirety. Instead representative portions of the British and German positions have been reconstructed to conform as closely as possible to the way they looked in 1916.

It was felt the people of Newfoundland would like to have a personal share in the work of restoration and commemoration. Accordingly, the Newfoundland branch of the Canadian Legion arranged to have a memorial tablet erected in the new cabin bearing a suitable inscription.

The tablet is in the form of a triptych and will bear inscription in the centre panel and the side panels bearing the names and dates of First World War battlefields as they appear on the regimental colors. The public was asked to subscribe to the cost of the tablet.

The fund was oversubscribed. The balance has been used to send several survivors to revisit the scene of their finest hour.

As Newfoundland remembers her dead of three wars at the National Memorial in St. John's on July 2 the minds of all will turn to a similar service 2,000 miles away on the piece of French soil that h forever Newfoundland.

BATTLE SCENE

The regiment later was involved in an attack at Beaumont Hamel, north of Paris, and practically wiped out.

V. W. Miles (front row, second from right) was killed in the attack and Ewen Hennebury (back row, right) was wounded. Hennebury now is a linotype operator at the St. John's Telegram.

VETERAN OF BATTLE

Capt. George Hicks, 75-year-old Sergeant-at-arms in Newfoundland legislature, was with the Royal Newfoundland Regiment when it went into action at Beaumont Hamel July 1, 1916.

The regiment was practically wiped out and plunged the island into mourning. ... memorial plaque marking the battle will be unveiled at the site July 2 by Premier Smallwood. (CP Photo).

Newfoundland Fires Checked By Steady Rain

Firefighters Prepared For Battle for Gambo

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Newfoundland firefighters, their spirits lifted by a steady downpour of rain, prepared today for any surprises the province's forest fires might throw at them.

Deputy Resources Minister Stuart Peters said Tuesday the fire-threatened community of Gambo, 110 miles northwest of here, had tons of equipment on hand and firefighters were prepared to put up a stiff fight.

However, Mr. Peters said seven evacuated communities along Bonavista Bay, 120 miles from here, would remain evacuated for at least two more days until officials were sure the flames would remain under control.

A co-ordinating centre was set up at Gloverstown, 15 miles from Gambo and 40 miles from Trinity on Bonavista Bay to keep track of the supply needs of firefighters.

The fire, although contained by a wide fire-break, was still burning a "lot of forest," Mr. Peters said, and the threat was still quite real.

He added: "We've made a set-back today and that's something we haven't been able to do lately."

Earlier Tuesday, Mr. Peters announced a magisterial inquiry would be held into the fire, many of which are believed to have been the work of arsonists.

He said names of suspects had been turned over to the RCMP who are expected to make arrests shortly. The RCMP also is inquiring into the possibility of employment shortage. During the weekend straps bearing fire-fighting tools used in the Hare Bay area disappeared.

WAITRESS SAYS MAN CARRIED PIECE OF HOSE

4 Charged With Beating Gambler

TORONTO (CP)—One of four men charged with beating gambler Max Bluestein at the Town Tavern March 21 was carrying a rubber hose when he entered the tavern, according to the alleged testimony of a waitress Tuesday.

Elizabeth Torgstenson, a waitress in the tavern for 3½ years, told the court she saw Frank Marchildon, 40, of Toronto holding a 10-inch piece of rubber hose behind his back on the night of the alleged assault.

She testified earlier that she could not see whether Marchildon was holding anything, but changed her story after Crown counsel Herbert Langdon showed her a transcript of a statement she had given under oath before a justice of the peace in April.

Marchildon, Jack Weaver, 32, Fred Gaboukie, 36, both of Toronto, and John Papalia, 37, of Hamilton are charged with assaulting Bluestein.

HOLDS A THUG?

Miss Torgstenson, who now lives in Peterborough, a t d Bluestein is living in Papalia for a few minutes before she heard a noise and looked like his body falling on the floor. She said she could see nothing of the fight because patrons were standing up and blocking her view.

Joseph Sedgwick, counsel for Marchildon, objected to a suggestion by Mr. Langdon that Miss Torgstegeon read her previous testimony "to refresh her memory."

He called the April inquiry a star chamber proceeding where Mr. Langdon put words in the witnesses' mouths through leading questions.

When asked by Mr. Sedgwick why she changed her story about the rubber hose, Miss Torgstegeon said she decided during the noon recess to tell what she knew.

Bluestein, the first Crown witness, testified he was retrieving his hat and paid for it with a hal-check booth when Mr. was struck from behind. He said he did not know who hit him but from the tavern floor saw someone swinging a rubber hose. He appeared to be an iron bar although he didn't see it.

Dr. Frederick Meade, an intern at Toronto's St. Michael's Hospital, said a wound in Bluestein's head required more than 20 stitches to close.

The beating, before about 100 customers in the tavern, touched off a police investigation into feuding between gamblers in the city.

The hearing continues.

Montreal Club Owner's Face Mashed to Pulp

MONTREAL (CP) — Michel Listorti, his face mashed to pulp in what appeared to be a gang-land revenge beating, underwent an emergency operation late Tuesday night.

The 56-year-old night club owner was in satisfactory condition today and police said they will question him as soon as he gets enough strength to talk.

Listorti was one of three men charged last year for the wrecking of the Chez Paree night club on downtown Stanley Street. Tuesday night, he staggered into a rooming house in central Montreal and collapsed.

His face was battered beyond recognition. His windpipe was so badly crushed that doctors at St. Luke hospital had to slit his throat and insert a tube to keep him breathing. He recovered consciousness this morning after the tracheotomy operation.

"Everything leads us to believe he was taken for a ride by members of the underworld," a police spokesman said.

Officials Try to Piece Together Description of Wanted Killer

BUFFALO (AP) — She can walk unnoticed in a crowd. She doesn't wear a hat. She has blue eyes and brown hair. Her cheekbones are high and prominent. Perhaps she wears a grey raincoat.

To a young child, she is "as old as mommy" or "as old as grandma."

She talks about a family of her own, with "six children and my mother."

She carries candy. Probably she lives in the north side section of Buffalo. She would have been kidnapped, one of them killed, in the last two months.

The body of the last one, three-year-old Peter Weber, was found Sunday in Delaware Park Lake. He had been bound with a pair of women's stockings and thrown into the water by drowning.

From these details, a group of Buffalo police, psychiatrists and specialists in abnormal, human behavior attempted Tuesday to piece together a full description of a mentally unstable woman believed to be the killer.

The shreds of evidence come from neighbors of Andy Ashley's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Ashley, who say they saw a woman leading the blue-eyed boy down the street Friday, from passersby who reported seeing the woman and the boy in the zoo or in the park, and from a pair of five-year-olds, Richard Edgington and Susan Benedict, who were lured from their homes previously and left, bound and gagged, beside nearby railroad tracks.

All descriptions of the kidnaper had much in common, police are convinced was the same person — a frustrated or disturbed woman who had no jealousies on others.

At fearful parents kept the usually lively North Park section hauntingly quiet, a picked, 20-man team of police directed the job of sifting through a bewildering welter of clues.

At least a dozen women have been questioned and released, police said, including the wife of Mayor Chester Kowalik.

Mayor Kowalik said elected representatives have not shown concern at evidence of melancholia in a few municipalities because they know most elected officials are honest.

He said there must be more respect for elected representatives, and added: "Good people are not going to seek municipal office and stay in it if they are going to be slandered."

Hopes for Settlement Dim, Mediator Named in Strike

TORONTO (CP) — Brightening hopes for an end to the mammoth construction strike strangling Metropolitan Toronto faded Tuesday night.

The hopes loomed despite plans for settlement by union leaders, a back-to-work appeal by Premier Frost and the appointment of a commission of inquiry.

Even as those developments brought optimism to builders and workers the shutdown spread even farther and strike leaders shelved one of the most promising prospects advanced since the walkouts began.

The leaders declined to discuss settlement terms for bricklayers and laborers because acceptance information on the peace plan was leaked to the press.

Union leader Bruno Zanini told some 1,000 workers stunned by the last - minute manoeuvre: "We regard the disclosures as an act of bad faith. We are not going to discuss the agreement because the papers are full of what we are going to do."

He added: "When it's settled it will be for all the trades. Only committees, our officers, will tell you—no one else. It could be any hour."

But Zanini said the campaign would still be waged against non-union contractors after settlement of "some positive form"

Mayors and Reeves Against Government 'Truth Squads'

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The president of the Ontario Mayors and Reeves Association spoke out Tuesday night against government "truth squads" which might prove the province to investigate the affairs of municipalities.

Municipal Affairs Minister Wishart Spence has said delegates to the association's convention this year his department is considering forming roving inspection squads "to drop in on any municipality at any time to see how you are conducting your business."

Mayor Harriet Newkirk of Chatham, association president, said he did not think elected representatives would appreciate the "truth squad moving quietly through the province."

"I know the representatives would not like to be regarded as criminals. They do not feel they are criminals."

The minister made the roving squad proposal in a preface to his address, and said his department will be happy to get the opinion of the association's executive.

MAY INDICATE

Later in his speech he said that while municipal scandals have occurred in only a handful of Ontario's 900 municipalities, they do not necessarily indicated to some extent that political morality in Ontario was at a low ebb.

He did not indicate whether the roving squad had been proposed because of this, or whether they would specifically seek evidence of corruption.

Mayor Newkirk said elected representatives have not shown concern at evidence of melancholia in a few municipalities because they know most elected officials are honest.

He said there must be more respect for elected representatives, and added: "Good people are not going to seek municipal office and stay in it if they are going to be slandered."

Douglas Seeks New Party Leadership

REGINA (CP)—Premier T. C. Douglas announced today that he will allow his name to stand for the national leadership of the New Party.

He said he would not campaign for the leadership. "I have always said the job should seek the man, not the man the job," he told a press conference.

Mr. Douglas said: "It seems to me that the issues at stake today are so vital to the people of Saskatchewan, whose cause I have championed for over a quarter of a century, that I must do everything I can to ensure the successful launching of the New Party."

He said his decision was "not taken lightly" but that his natural inclination would be to stay in the provincial field.

$100,000 Fire At Orillia

ORILLIA (CP) — The Barrie fire department was called to assist Orillia firemen fighting a $100,000 restaurant fire which broke out here early today.

The fire was not under control after several hours and firemen feared it might spread to nearby smoke-filled buildings.

Adjacent stores and offices were evacuated and valuable papers were removed from the premises.

Cause of the fire was not known. It started in the basement of Carters' restaurant, one of the area's best known eating spots.

COMMONS PLAYS GAME OF PINNING TAIL ON DONKEY

Opposition Says Govt. Is Groping

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons is playing a game of pin-the-tail-on-the-donkey in budget debate.

Opposition speakers charged Tuesday that the Conservative government has been groping blindly through four years in power with no idea of where it wants to go or why.

Government party porters replied that if the opposition groups have any concrete alternative ideas on governing the country, they are keeping them covered in a fog of wild and hysterical charges.

Said the CCF's Harold Winch, member for Vancouver East, in the third day of a possible six-day debate on the budget presented June 20 by Finance Minister Fleming:

"The U.S. is conclusively apparent that the Tory government, since it took office some four years ago, has been slipping and drifting along with no clear knowledge of its destination than a blind man on a raft floating somewhere between the coast of British Columbia and the coast of Honolulu."

CRITICIZED ACTIONS

Said Liberal R. J. Robichaud, Gloucester:

"I suggest we have here a government of confusion which has refused for two or three years to admit that there was a recession; a government which refused to admit that unemployment is its constant, unusual and abnormal unemployment; a government which refused to recognize the recession but which told us two years later that the recession was over and that we were emerging from it."

An exchange between Mr. Fleming and Romuald Bourque (L — Montreal Outremont — St. Jean) gave the minister an opportunity to put forward the government's case in the face of grave weakness in opposition attacks.

The Liberal MP called for Canadian action to curb imports from Russia and said there is an urgent need for the establishment of "some positive form"

Garage Owner Beaten to Death

HULL, Que. (CP)—An elderly garage operator was found beaten to death early today in the basement of his garage at the rear of his home in suburban three miles north of here. Provincial police said it was murder.

Adrien Desjardins, 65, apparently was killed by a blow which crushed his skull. He was found tossed into the basement.

Police said Desjardins' cash was stolen and they have been unable to locate a large sum of money which the garage owner was reported to have kept in the building.

A motorist stopped at the garage to buy gasoline and found the body. Provincial police called police and Provincial Constable Glen Murray discovered Desjardins' battered body.

Recalls Troops To Be Prepared For Berlin Crisis

Macmillan Says Britain Willing to Negotiate

PARIS (AP) — A stepped-up drive by President de Gaulle for a quick end to the seven-year Algerian war was under way today.

It includes bringing French divisions back from the North African territory to the continent, resuming suspended talks with rebel leaders and a renewed threat to partition Algeria into European and Moslem sectors if negotiations fail again.

De Gaulle's aim, according to informed sources, is to break the Algerian impasse in three months — one way or another — in order to make French forces available by fall for the looming crisis in Berlin.

The bulk of France's armed forces, as estimated 500,000 men, is tied down in Algeria. Their absence has weakened the North Atlantic Treaty Organization defense position in Western Europe.

De Gaulle disclosed his new Algerian drive to the political party at the presidential Elysee Palace Tuesday night. In an informal discussion with reporters, he said he had issued orders for the return of one division from Algeria. Within three weeks, he added he would order the return of a second. French division is about 15,000 men.

PEACEFUL GESTURE

Besides strengthening NATO forces in the event of a conflict, the redeployment might be interpreted as a peaceful gesture to the nationalist rebels.

De Gaulle said the peace talks with the rebels — broken off at Evian - les - Bains two weeks ago — can be resumed and "We will see what happens. We put no date for resumption of talks.

The president made clear that he will continue to insist on future association between an Independent Algeria and France, including French retention of key military bases, and guarantees for the French minority in the North African territory. Otherwise, he said, France will regroup the European and Moslem populations and partition Algeria.

French Farmers Seal off Calais For 2 Hrs, by Tractor Roadblocks

PARIS (Reuters) — aFrmers sealed off the channel port of Calais with hundreds of tractors today as renewed peasant demonstrations broke out in the north of France and the wine districts.

The roadblocks, set up after passengers on the night ferry from Dover had left for Paris, were removed two hours later and the farmers headed for the town hall to lodge protests against government agricultural policy.

The farm revolt continued to cause serious disruption of tourist traffic in southern France, where six policemen and two winegrowers were injured Tuesday night in a battle for control of the railroad line at the wine town of Beziers.

Nearby, at a bridge over the River Orb, police intervened to avert a battle between farmers and hundreds of angry tourists and truck drivers at a road-block which had been in place for 36 hours.

Tractors barred the main Paris-Nimes road near Nimes and virtually isolated the town of Bethune, in the industrial north.

With farmer's organizations in central France taking part, demonstrations in the form of vol were the most widespread since the movement started in Britany over potato prices.

Mr. K Promises No Blockade Of West Berlin

MOSCOW (AP) — Premier Khrushchev offered today to negotiate on Berlin and Germany but warned the West Premier Kyrill a military buildup to strengthen its hand.

"We are ready to negotiate honestly," he told a Soviet-North Vietnamese friendship meeting at the Kremlin.

In a televised speech Khrushchev said "there will be no blockade of Berlin" but he repeated an old Soviet condition—Western recognition of the East German Communist government.

Khrushchev warned that if any Western country mobilizes because of the Berlin issue "we shall take proper measures and, if necessary, measures to increase our combat might."

Japanese Floods Claim 88 Lives

TOKYO (AP) — Torrential rains pounding central Japan for four days ended today but brought devastation and death to hundreds in the downpour.

Eighty-eight persons were reported killed, 86 missing and 138 injured in the downpour which began Saturday and has continued with little interruption. Intermittent rain was forecast for the rest of the week.

Thousands were evacuated from the lower reaches of the flooded Tenryu River, 100 miles west of Tokyo, as gates were opened in two of Japan's largest dams to relieve dangerously high reservoirs.

Communications were disrupted and streets and fields flooded or buried by landslides over a vast area stretching from Sendai in the northeast to Hiroshima in the west. Most of the major cities of Kobe, Osaka, Nagoya and Tokyo were affected.

An estimated 137,000 persons left their homes. Property and crop damage was estimated at $12,500,000. More than 450 farmers and 40 industrial plants collapsed. Railways were cut in 115 places, delaying or forcing cancellation of many trains.

Minor Offenders To Get Break Says Minister

CAMP BORDEN (CP) — Reform Institutions Minister Wardrope said Tuesday that soon minor offenders will no longer be put behind bars in Ontario.

Mr. Wardrope said he started out by abolishing the use of the strap in Ontario reform institutions.

"It will be a great pleasure to remove most of the steel bars from institutions operated by my department."

Mr. Wardrope was inspecting 79 cadets from Bowmanville Training School for Boys at a summer cadet camp here.

He told them removal of bars will be possible in the near future after the federal government assumes custody of all persons serving more than one year in jail.

This will leave us with what might be called minor offenders," Mr. Wardrope said. "My aim is instead to cage them but to cure them."

Criminal Lawyer Disagrees With Professors on Capital Punishment Bill Passed

OTTAWA (CP)—A prominent Toronto criminal lawyer said Tuesday night he disagrees with three university law professors in their belief that the new capital punishment bill will not achieve the government's wish to limit the use of the death penalty.

Arthur Martin, 48, told the Senate banking committee the bill is an improvement over existing legislation because it divides murder into capital and non-capital offences.

He had some reservations but saw the measure as one that reserved the death penalty for "the most heinous, most blameworthy murderers." The bill defines capital murder as one "planned and deliberate."

Earlier Tuesday L. J. Edwards of Dalhousie University, Halifax, told the committee the bill would fall short of the government's wish to limit capital punishment. Its definition of capital murder was not clear and could create additional difficulties for the courts.

Professors H. R. S. Ryan and W. Mewett of Queen's University, Kingston, agreed with Mr. Edwards' views in statements to the committee Tuesday night.

SAYS WILL HELP JURIES

In contrast to the professors, Mr. Martin said the language of the bill is plain and will assist juries in coming to decisions.

He said the bill's definition of capital murder would readily make a distinction to juries against imposing murders punishable by life imprisonment.

However, he disagreed with the bill in three respects.

A man must intend to commit grievous bodily harm to another if he is to be convicted of capital murder, he said. The bill specified only "bodily harm."

He disagreed also with the clause in the capital murder section that says when a person causes bodily harm which he knows or ought to know will cause death, he is guilty of capital murder.

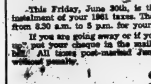
Mr. Martin said an ignorant person might not know his actions could cause death. The phrase "ought to know" should be deleted. A "stupid" man could be punished unfairly.

SHOULD SPECIFY

A man also should not be convicted of capital murder just by reason of having had a weapon in his possession. The murder lawyer said the bill should specify the use of the weapon.

Professor Mewett said capital murder should be only consciously committed. Therefore, cold-blooded or barbarous."

The present definition would reserve the death penalty for more serious murders But it would have the result of punishing less serious crimes by death when the more heinous would be punished by life imprisonment.



Parliament should have the power to decide if a murder was horrible, cold-blooded or barbarous. That would leave more power to juries but Mr. Mewett felt this would result in less injustice the government is trying to reduce.

ADDED RECONSIDER

Professor Ryan called for full reconsideration of the law of criminal homicide. There are were too many confusing steps to manslaughter. The new bill added to the confusion.

Only planned and deliberate murders should be punishable by the death sentence. And there should be a fixed period of time between the planning and the carrying out of the intent to murder to constitute a capital crime.

Retaining the lawful arrest and robbery with a toy pistol where death occurs should not be capital murder as provided in the new bill, he said.

Proctor Silex Co. Ltd. Will Move Que. Plant to Picton

PICTON — This town has been chosen as the site of a new industry, Proctor Silex Co. Ltd., which will move its plant from Farnham, the Quebec border. A new factory will be erected on land at Far Land Farms at the east end of the town, and owned by Mayor H. J. McFarland.

Announcement of the choice of Picton was made at a dinner meeting of one hundred Picton businessmen yesterday with Mayor McFarland as host.

Some details of the industry were revealed by Lewis H. Dunoon, vice-president of the company who stated it had been at Iberville for the past 18 years without a layoff. At the start it will employ around 54 men and 40 women and will engage in assembling of toasters. With expansion, other lines will be added and between two and three hundred employed.

Mayor McFarland, whose firm will construct the plant, stated it is planned to turn the first sod on July 12 and work will be rushed. He spoke of the efforts of many municipalities to secure the industry and Mr. Dunoon gave credit to the Mayor as a prime reason why Picton had been chosen.

At the meeting, the Mayor also announced that a new Brewers' Retail store will be built on his property on Main Street east. Work will be commenced in July. He also stated he is endeavoring to secure passenger interests in Britain to locate a brewery in Prince Edward County.

Pleads Guilty To Speeding

Jacob Geertsma of Corbyville pleaded guilty in city magistrate's court Tuesday to a charge of speeding and one of careless driving.

Police testified they had charged him with speeding at 55 miles an hour in a 30-mile-an-hour zone on Cannifton Road and, 20 minutes later, found his car upside down in a ditch, totally wrecked, on Station St. near the CNR tracks.

Magistrate T. Y. Wills fined him a total of $40 , assessed $7 court costs, and lifted his driver's permit for six months.

The magistrate, in passing sentence, commented that anyone who drove at 55 miles an hour on Cannifton Road "should have his head read."

Second-Hand Items Will Be Taxed

TORONTO (CP) — Second-hand goods will be taxed under Ontario's three-per - cent retail sales tax no matter how many times they change hands, Provincial Treasurer T. Clark, comptroller of revenue said Tuesday in an interview.

The only exemption is when second-hand goods are sold to a licensed vendor for resale to the public.

The tax applies to all tangible personal property," whether it is sold by a vendor or by the ultimate consumer. The vendor, who must remit the tax to the province's treasury, will be remunerated for acting as a collection agency; the buyer, who must remit the tax himself, when involved in a private deal, will not be remunerated.

It is also up to the citizen to pay the tax on his own volition if he purchases tangible personal property outside the province and brings it home.

Mr. Clark said the tax applies to every item costing 1¢ cents or more, whether it be new or second-hand.

For casual sales between neighbors, Mr. Clark said the government feels 99 per cent of the public will pay the tax voluntarily.

The sales tax branch will make spot checks of newspaper advertisements to see if certain items are not being sold to beat the tax. Field inspectors will also get on information from the public.

The tax is effective Sept. 1.

Sale Price of Hospital Cut $400,000 by Doctor-Owner

MONTREAL (CP)—The price of the private hospital that became Jean Talon public hospital was cut overnight to $400,000 from $1,000,000, a commission investigating the hospital's affairs was told Tuesday.

Kimiaki Nakashima, hospital auditor and a member of its board of directors, said the board never asked Dr. George Hori only what was willing to re duce the price.

Vancouver-born Dr. Hori built his own hospital late in 1953. Less than six months later, a public hospital corporation was chartered with Dr. Hori as president. The corporation took over the private hospital. Mr. Nakashima said Dr. Hori asked $1,-000,000 for the hospital and the Jean Talon board accepted the price unquestioningly.

The most I ever got," he said, Dr. Hori reduced his demand to $600,000. The board did not ask why.

"We thought we were unable to evaluate a hospital and we agreed to accept the price of $1,000,000," Mr. Nakashima said.

DIDN'T ASK

"We asked for no details and accepted the price . . . we were surprised, but content (with the lowered price) and did not ask why . . .

Last week, a report submitted to the investigating commission by evaluator Paul Marlineau estimated that the cost of Dr. Hori's hospital was $380,000.

Mr. Nakashima said he could not remember why two journal entries for cash payments of $2,500 and $4,500 in cash were made in 1956, but said he was sure Dr. Hori explained them adequately at the time.

Fish "Hogs" Dynamite Dam To Trap Trout

R. Ramsbottom, conservation officer in the Madoc Chief Ranger Division, Department of Lands and Forests, reports that under cover of darkness a party of fish hogs dynamited a beaver dam in Marlbrough Township early last Sunday morning. They then placed a gill net across the opening and attempted to trap the speckled trout swimming through. The number of trout taken cannot be determined but local conservation officers state it could be considerable.

Gill netting is one of the most flagrant violations of the Game and Fisheries Act and the party responsible for this contemptible undertaking is being sought.

IN MEMORIAM

Gone dear father, gone forever,
How we miss your smiling face,
Sad the day you left us,
The world can take your place.
A happy home we once enjoyed,
Is broken by the call,
But death has left a loneliness,
For all to share and bear.
—Always remembered by son Norman and family.

HERRINGTON. — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather, Samuel Herrington, who passed away June 28th, 1960.
Dad, as we are thinking,
Of you today,
We wished you fade away;
But death, dear father, broken,
You fought so hard to stay,
But when we ask why,
So peacefully free from pain;
We could not wish you back,
To suffer that again.
—Sadly missed by our daughter Clara, son-in-law Bob and grandchildren.

HERRINGTON. — In loving memory of our father, Samuel Herrington, who passed away June 28th, 1960.
In tears we saw you sinking,
A sight we ne'er shall forget;
Our hearts were almost broken,
For you could not part to stay;
But when we saw you sleeping,
So quietly and free from pain,
We could not wish you back,
To suffer that again.
—Sadly missed by daughter Mrs. (Ruby) Pointer, son-in-law Bert, grandchildren Barbara, Nonalie, Hubert and Herbie.

HERRINGTON. — In loving memory of a dear husband, Samuel Herrington, who passed away June 28th, 1960.

—Ever remembered by his wife Florence.

ROWBOTHAM. — In loving memory of a dear husband, Fred Rowbotham, who passed away June 28th, 1959.

ROWBOTHAM. — In memory of a dear husband, Fred, who passed away June 28th, 1959.

We know we'll meet again.
—Lovingly remembered by brother Stanley, sister Pat, brother-in-law John, niece and nephew Jack, C. J. and Ruth.

SMITH. — In loving memory of my dear father, friend and companion, Albert Edward Smith, who departed this life June 28th, 1957.
Four long and lonely years have passed,
Since my great sorrow fell;
The shock that I received that day,
Will always be remembered.
When I am sad and lonely,
And everything goes wrong;
I seem to hear him whisper,
"Cheer up and carry on."
Next time I see your picture,
I'll not shed a tear, I'll smile;
Don't cry dad, I'm with you still,
We'll meet again some day.
—Sadly missed by daughter Dorothy Bedal.

WHALEN. — In loving memory of our dear son, Private Leonard Terry Whalen, whom God called from us June 29th, 1960.
No one knows the silent heartaches,
Only those who have loved can tell.

Is the heaviest cross of all.
—Sadly missed and lovingly remembered by Mom, Dad and family.

'Would Lose Shirts' Says TCA Official

OTTAWA (CP) — It all goes according to Trans Canada Air Line, plans and economic forecasts, the Crown - owned company would start about break even this year, a TCA Commons committee on government - owned railways and airlines approved TCA's 1961 budget Tuesday.

It was based on a net income of $500,000 compared to last years' deficit of $2,507,350, the first deficit in 10 years.

TCA officials said they based their forecasts on the assumption TCA would not run into further stiff competition from Canadian Pacific Airlines. The question now is before cabinet for a decision on airlines competition policy.

Ernest Broome PC — Vancouver South suspected that TCA hid what would otherwise have been a profit last year in a depreciation account.

SUSPECTS FAKERY

"I think you are trying to show a worse picture than you have as an inducement against the government", he said. "The competition is not hurting you".

Douglas Fisher CCF — Fort Arthur said CPA lost $4,700,000 last year.

"What would be the effect on your revenues if CPA were given more trans continental flights?" Mr. Fisher asked.

"We'd lose our shirts", said C. S. Harvey, comptroller of TCA.

Walter Murray Seeks $5,150 From Town

TRENTON — Former town engineer Walter Murray today issued a writ against the town, through his solicitors, McCarthy and McCarthy, of Toronto.

Mr. Murray claims "wrongful dismissal" and seeks $5,000 plus $150 costs as compensation. The sum represents about six months salary of the former engineer's pay schedule. Mr. Murray was hired by the town as its engineer in February 1960. Last April Council rescinded the hiring by-law and terminated Mr. Murray's employment.

The town claims that Mr. Murray verbally agreed to the establishment of a 30-day perior of notice from either side.

On May 8, council appointed Eric Aldersey as town engineer.

Mr. Aldersey was town engineer at Trenton from 1958 to 1959, when he resigned to assume the post of city engineer at Barrie.

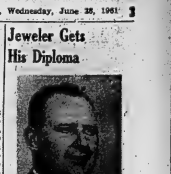
Gets Month In Jail For Assault

TRENTON — In magistrate's court yesterday, William Robert Date, 444 1-2 Front St., Trenton, who pleaded guilty to a charge of common assault in an indecent fondling of a six-year-old girl, was sentenced to one month in jail by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Inspector R. J. Rutherford testified that the child's mother had complained when the accused asked the little girl to sit in a car with him.

Crown Attorney John A. Pringle said that the accused had been placed on a two-year suspended sentence in Belleville in 1953 for indecent assault. Mr. Pringle advocated a jail term as a deterrent to others.

Magistrate Wills told the accused that he should "learn to keep your hands off other people's children, no matter what your motives are".



Warren Rose of Trenton, charged with common assault in an incident police say involved a seven-year-old girl, was remanded until July 19.

Nelson Nokes, charged with indecent assault which police say involved three minors, was remanded until July 6.

John Dalton of Trenton was fined $100 and costs on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident and incurred a further fine for driving with an expired beginner's licence.

The case against a Trenton youth, charged with theft of a typewriter from a local store, was dismissed for lack of evidence.

Carpenter to Ottawa

Change of command is completed as Air Commodore R. J. Lane signs final handing-over certificate while Air Commodore F. S. Carpenter, outgoing air officer commanding Air Transport Command, looks on.

Park were some of the other items considered by the board members. Present at the meeting were the chairman, E. M. Parker, Jr., Miss Baker, Mr. Boers, John Saylor, Norm Armstrong, Bill Ireland and Clyde Mason.

Air Commandor R. J. Lane Assumes Command of ATC At Impressive Ceremony

TRENTON — The command of Air Transport Command was handed over Tuesday by Air Commodore F. S. Carpenter to Air Commodore R. J. Lane.

Before the symbolic signing of the handing over certificate, RCAF officers, airmen and guests attended a ceremonial parade, led by Group Capt. D. J. Williams, commanding officer of RCAF Station Trenton.

In an address to the personnel under his command, Air Commodore Carpenter said that Canada could well be proud of Air Transport Command.

"Our motto, 'Versatile and Ready,' has been well chosen," he said. "It is our responsibility to maintain a state of readiness, to ensure that we would be able to provide the necessary support to the armed forces of Canada, and, when called upon, to the United Nations. We have the important task of maintaining peace in the world."

Air Commodore Carpenter said the state of mind necessary to ensure that the command could stand in perpetual readiness to embark on a defence or rescue mission at short notice existed in Air Transport Command.

"You all must know how proud I am of you," he said. "It is my turn to leave the command today, but I am happy to turn over the best possible command to Air Commodore Lane."

Air Commodore Lane said that it was with a great deal of pride that he assumed the position of air officer commanding Air Transport Command, but that he realized the responsibility which went with the position. He paid tribute to Air Commodore Carpenter as one "dedicated to the RCAF and particularly to Air Transport Command."

His leadership and courage have brought the command to its high state of readiness," said Air Commodore Lane. "Much has been accomplished during his tour of office. The command has reached the height where it is second to none in the RCAF."

Air Commodore Lane also paid tribute to the airmen and airwomen in the command for the fine support they had given the air officer commanding.

Air Commodore Carpenter's pennant was lowered and presented to him by Station Warrant Officer J. Sangster, signifying the end of the Air Commodore's tour of duty as air officer commanding Air Transport Command.

Air Commodore Carpenter will assume the position of chief of training at Air Force Headquarters, Ottawa.

Air Commodore Lane was formerly chief of plans and intelligence at Air Force Headquarters.

Award Contract For Road To McFarland

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of the Board of Parks Management, board members passed a motion to accept the tender of the H. J. McFarland Construction Company of Picton for the construction of a road from the north end of McLellan Ave., to the parking area on Mount Pelion and the grading and paving of the parking area itself.

Construction of the strip of road will cost $2,150 and the parking lot will cost $1,050. It was suggested that the road down the mountain to the north end of Dufferin Ave. be closed off next year when the board would go ahead with re-construction of the strip. But the idea was abandoned and the members will ask the contractor to grade the strip this year and postpone asphalting until next year.

Board secretary Miss Marion Baker reported that she had failed to find anything in the criminal code which would impose a penalty on litter-bugs. Miss Baker will try to ascertain if the town possesses a by-law which would deal with offenders and, failing that, the board may pass a by-law of its own to cover the offence and impose a penalty.

Bart Boers, parks gardener, will enquire about a spraying service to spray pelion ivy on Mount Pelion, as several board members reported that the weed was rampant in the area.

Miss Baker said that she had received a brochure through government sources which suggested that municipal boards should undertake projects which could be completed by 1967, Canada's centennial year. Board members will give some thought to the matter, as the board is interested in waterfront development.

An Old Device

Adolf Eichmann is a devilishly clever man.

Only such a man could have dragged Pontius Pilate almost two thousand years back from the dead as a witness for the defence in the case of the Nazi extermination of the Jews.

Eichmann told the Israeli court which is trying him that he was merely taking orders, that he felt like Pontius Pilate that he was not guilty. He was, he said, merely obeying the orders of the popes of the regime."

It is an old argument, washed too thin in the blood of too many innocents. Yet, paradoxically enough, amongst those who will be most ready to condemn Eichmann for advancing it are the very people who get most angry with those who spurn it and stand upon the only logical ground from which it can be rebutted.

For the alternative to sheltering behind the law of the land and the orders of one's superiors for any misdeed is to accept all responsibility for one's own actions. Here, though, as in all other instances, it is most unfair to impose responsibility without also granting authority. The person who willingly shoulders the responsibility for all his own acts is entitled to be granted the authority for deciding how he should act. In other words, he and not the state or the church or any other organization must decide what is right and what is wrong.

There are some individuals who claim this authority but such claims are always bitterly denounced by those who differ with the individuals concerned as to what is right and what is wrong. Yet, in the final analysis, we must all make such decisions for ourselves if we are not, like Eichmann, to shrug off our own responsibility to others the responsibility for our own deeds.

To say that such an attitude of individual responsibility for our actions makes a mockery of the law is nonsense. Society, of course, cannot afford to permit every individual to decide what is right and what is wrong without any penalty if these decisions differ from society's. But the individual, if he is to be truly free, cannot permit society to take the place of his conscience. Where he differs from the law, and where he regards the difference as important enough, his plain duty is to follow his own conscience and accept the penalties.

Clean hands are the product of a clean conscience and a clean conscience does not come from obeying one's superiors but one's own innermost promptings.

A Fish's Worst Enemy

What is a worse threat to game fish than poachers using nets, spears or even dynamite?

No, no, Algernon, not the atomic bomb.

Fishermen, that's what.

No, not commercial fishermen. The common or garden variety of angler.

If any angler chances to read this while angling we hope he will not: (a) commit suicide by jumping out of the boat after looking at his fishless stringer; or (b) conclude his favorite strand of brew is too potent to stump the rest of it overboard. In either case, there is a danger he might pollute the waters.

He need not accept full responsibility for his deadliness. He has an ally — the lowly minnow.

Minnows a threat to fish? Why, yes indeed. Despite the ease with which a big game fish gobbles a minnow, there are always some survivors and they breed. They breed so fast that Dr. Gustave Prevost, head of the Quebec game and fisheries department biology office, calls them a greater threat to poachers, however armed. Quebec is banning the use of minnows in some parts of the province and limiting their use in the remainder to lakes already infested with coarse fish.

So next time a big pickerel devours your minnow or eats bite and, on cutting him open, you find his little sister already tucked away inside him, do not conclude his fate was deserved as a punishment for greediness. Perhaps he was not really hungry at all, but merely trying to do his duty to protect the next generation—so that he could eat them, of course.

The Eye Of The Beholder

The original use of lip rings worn by the girls and women of some African tribes was to disfigure them so that Arab slave traders would pass them by, according to R. J. Scott's "Scrap Book."

Well the ring certainly works, as far as we are concerned. But amongst the Africans themselves, these lip rings have come to be considered as ornaments and the resulting distortion of the wearer's lip as beautiful.

Familiarity, it seems, does not always breed contempt. On the contrary, what we consider beautiful often depends on what we have been taught to regard with approbation.

Slumps Part Of Life Cycle Says Sydney

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

"Do you ever get in a writing slump?" asked the man across from me at dinner. "Do you ever feel as if you're all dried up and just can't write another column?"

"Sure," I answered. "But it's not a writing slump — it's a thinking slump. And I suspect that most slumps of any kind are really thinking slumps."

"How do you mean that?" he wanted to know.

"Consider a baseball player," I said. "Normally, you couldn't imagine any two men further apart than a batter and a writer. Yet when the baseball player gets into a batting slump, what has really changed about him?

"Not his physical actions," I continued. "His body can still perform as well, his eyes are as sharp as ever and he knows all the tricks of the opposing pitchers — but he hasn't unlearned anything he knew, or hasn't developed any physical impairment of his ability.

"So what does the prove?" he asked, trying to follow me.

"It proves that a slump is as much a matter of thinking as a writing slump. The body refuses to perform well because the mind is not directed to the proper channels.

"There was a lot of derisive laughter, I went on, when some years ago a baseball manager hired a psychologist to straighten out the team. I don't know if he did any good or not — but the idea itself makes sense. Instead of when a player gets into a slump, he becomes depressed and tries harder — and this very effort perpetuates the slump. All players know that."

"And what do you suggest?" inquired the man.

"I suggest accepting slumps as a natural part of our cycle of being. Just as there is a natural rhythm in every person's life — times of high tide and a time of low tide. After a few years of writing I can tell to a time run in such circumstances, I would strike out ignominiously."

"Then you don't think there's anything you can do to bring yourself out of a slump?" he asked.

"Only one thing," I said. "Don't try actively to sell-ling." Don't pretend all is going well, when you know it isn't. Accept the negative, live with it and keep in mind the greatest philosophic axiom of them all: This, too, shall pass.' That's the only way the mind thaws out."

Gordon Shows Know-How

The Ottawa Journal

Up on Parliament Hill they were talking about the New Donald Gordon manner. Back in the erstwhile master of the ailing phrase turned into a purring dove, thanks to a little problem and some complications, the easy mastery of all its relevant facts, his quiet grasp of the know-how. Where in Canada at this time, MP's should be asking themselves — where in Canada at this time can we recruit a man with even a reasonable facsimile of the old Gordon's CN know-how, or a man likely to acquire Donald Gordon's CN know-how without years of perhaps costly trial and error?

Asking themselves that question, MPs might well reflect it as some time that the CN is too valuable a bit of Canadian property to be left in the mercies of trial and error — to be tinkered with by amateurs.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

FAITH HEALING

Do you believe in faith healing?

"Oh yes," said a man in my hearing recently. "There are lots of people who think they are sick. They have aches and pains which can be cured by a little sympathy and kindly suggestion. If that is what you mean by faith healing, I believe in it. If you mean actually curing definitely diagnosed diseases, no, I don't believe that is possible.

Why not? People were healed by faith in our Lord's day. They have been healed by faith in every succeeding century. Many are being healed by faith today. This does not mean that doctors, medicine, and hospitals are superfluous. It only means that in recovering from illness there are certain factors which are beyond the capacity of human beings to treat with any show of success. Every doctor will confess that he has had patients recover when every indication pointed to the contrary of their death. It is the contention of those who believe in healing that faith on the part of the sick person and incidentally those who believe in healing that faith on the part of the sick person and incidentally those who believe in healing that faith on the part of the sick person and incidentally

Adjourn Case Of Assaulting Pro Wrestler

A charge of assault causing bodily harm against Terry Adams, Belleville, laid by Nicholas Kalmikoff, was adjourned in city Magistrate's Court on Tuesday until Friday.

Nicholas Kalmikoff stated in his testimony that he had crawled under the wrestling ring at the arena here to get away from his opponent, Lord Athol Layton, and he got stuck in the braces of the ring. He stated while he was stuck, the accused, Terry Adams, ran up and "kicked me right in the face". Kalmikoff also stated that Adams had tried to assault him on previous occasions. On this particular occasion he was running from his opponent and was attempting to get back to his brothers, when he was allegedly kicked. Defence Counsel, Robert Temple asked the wrestler if he had ever been struck by a lady. Kalmikoff answered, "I was never that lucky." Mr. Temple during his examination asked him if he knew what "box office" meant. Kalmikoff replied, "I am an immigrant, so please speak in English, I don't understand what you are asking me".

"Kalmikoff stated that this man had threatened him lots of times. "He even spit in my face, and I would tell him, "you little skinny face, go away."

"You are a small man yourself, Mr. Temple", said Mr. Kalmikoff. "I remember two or three occasions he came right in close to me and try to assault me. If I saw him only once I would remember him, and I have seen him before. If he hadn't seen me under the ring he wouldn't have known I was there. Some people have different characteristics. For instance, you are a nice fellow and I am a villain." Mr. Temple said, "I am going in the near future to see you but I certainly won't be in the first row."

SAYS WRESTLER KICKED

Constable. Keith Wright said he was standing near the ring and he saw the accused, Terry Adams run forward, kick Kalmikoff and run back to his seat. He said the wrestlers left eye was bloodshot and swollen. The constable stated he had seen Kalmikoff's face prior to this incident and he saw no marks on it.

William McBride, ring announcer, said Kalmikoff went under the ring with Lord Atholl Layton behind him. He saw someone run towards the ring but he couldn't identify who it was but he could recognize it was a male.

Mr. Adams took the stand and testified that he had been to two matches since 1950 and that this particular one was the first one he had gone to this year. He said he got pretty excited and it was his intention when he left his seat to warn the referee as to what was going on, as he thought Kalmikoff was going to try and get in the ring behind his opponents. He said Kalmikoff had supposedly been gouging his fingers in Layton's eyes prior to this. He said he didn't intend to kick the wrestler and in the commotion he panicked and ran back to his seat. Adams said he intended to go back to the arena and apologize to Kalmikoff but he had been barred from he arena.

The case was adjourned until Friday by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

Miscreant Spoils Garden

It has been said, "He who works in a garden, works with God." So an elderly woman, Mrs. A. Gibson of 63a Murney Street, worked in hers; and, in spite of her 83 years planted her garden with tomato plants, and cucumbers, as well as other vegetables. Each day she eagerly watched for the first little green leaves of her cucumbers, and rejoiced when her tomato plants put forth their yellow blossoms, waiting for the day when she would reap the fruits of her toil.

Friday night some miscreant pulled up the tomato plants, scattering 15 of them, and trampled down her hills of cucumbers, forcing the gate to get in. This she found on Saturday morning when she went down to hoe.

"Of all sad words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these," "who could be so mean!"

RHEINGOLD CLUB

ON SATURDAY, July 3
NO MEETING

ON SATURDAY, July 3
VERY IMPORTANT MEETING
8 P.M. in QUINTE HOTEL

This family is the victim of hot weather stalls—one of the infuriating troubles that can strike your car on sizzling days. Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend fights three of them.

HAPPY JULY 1st?

Fight hot weather stalls with Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend. Famous 9-ingredient formula now adjusted for top performance when highways sizzle

Summer heat can make gasoline bubble. This can stall you dead. It can also cause hard starting and rough idling.

Read how Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend fights these heat wave problems. It just might save you a lot of trouble this weekend. You can get it at any Shell station on your route.

ENGINES, like people, can suffer from heat prostration. Especially in the kind of hot and heavy traffic you may face during the weekend ahead.

Here are some infuriating troubles that are caused by excessive heat—and what Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend does to fight them.

1. How Super Shell fights hot weather stalls

If your engine sputters and dies on a hot day, it may have an ailment called vapour lock.

Vapour lock strikes when heat makes a volatile grade of gasoline start to boil right in the fuel line. This produces bubbles that can choke off the fuel supply.

Shell scientists attack vapour lock by revising Super Shell's 9-ingredient formula in summer. This reduces its volatility.

This is a hot weather blend of Super Shell that's not likely to boil in your fuel line—it cuts the chance of hot weather stalling to a minimum.

2. How Super Shell fights hard starting

Here's what can happen when you try to restart your car after a hot drive. With the fan stopped and the cooling system idle, intense heat under the hood can actually make gasoline percolate in your carburetor. Just like coffee in a pot.

The gasoline spills over, floods your engine—and makes starting difficult.

Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend is formulated to stand high temperatures without percolating. You can get quick starts even after a long, hard, hot drive.

3. How Super Shell fights rough idling

The same trouble that causes summer starting difficulties can give your car the shakes every time you stop for traffic lights.

Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend attacks both problems the same way. Its formula is adjusted so that it's in no hurry to boil and bubble. Result: smooth idling in hot weather.

4. Some engine problems Super Shell can't solve

Super Shell fights hot weather stalling but it cannot correct mechanical defects in your engine. Your Shell dealer can. Here are a few things that cause overheating in your engine, and how your Shell man can help:

1. A plugged radiator stops the free flow of cooling air. Have your Shell dealer clean out bugs and dirt, install a bug screen.
2. A slipping fan belt doesn't move the fan fast enough. Have your Shell dealer check your fan belt, install a new one if yours is cracked, slack.
3. A faulty fuel pump can aggravate vapour lock. Your Shell dealer can check fuel line pressure in a few moments.

Keep Super Shell's Hot Weather Blend in your tank. You'll really be set for top performance.

Super Shell's 9 Ingredients for top performance

#1 is TCP* for power, mileage, and longer plug life.
#2 is "cat-cracked" gasoline—for extra power.
#3 is anti-knock mix to outlet all kinds of knocks.
#4 is heavy alkanes to control "high-speed knock."
#5 is Butane for quick starts.
#6 is mixed pentanes for fast warm-ups.
#7 is an "anti-lacer." (Added in hold weather.)
#8 is gum preventive to keep carburetors clean inside.
#9 is Platformate for extra mileage.

2nd Scouts M.A. Presents Gifts at Picnic

Last Thursday evening brought together 12 members of 2nd Belleville Mothers' Auxiliary before the summer vacation. The usual business session was presided over by president Mrs. H. Rainbird, with reports given by secretary, Mrs. J. Johnston and treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Parsons. Mrs. A. Wagner was the social convenor and program co-captain.

Mrs. L. Blaker, on behalf of her husband, Scouter Blaker, and herself, graciously thanked the Auxiliary for the gifts presented to them at the picnic held in the Scout camp at Wooler. Also for the portable ones on view for the members unable to be present at the family outing.

The Scouts, Cubs and Auxiliary of 2nd Belleville will keenly feel the loss of these two staunch supporters of Scouting. However, the Auxiliary's loss is Peterborough's gain and sent with them are best wishes for continued happiness and success in any future endeavors.

Akela Kemp is always a welcome guest and usually foretells some new project planned. This visit was no exception. She announced the final plans for the proposed bus trip for the Cubs to the Jamboree in Ottawa on July 12th.

Dispensing with any further business the meeting closed with the Scout Mizpah. The remainder of the evening was spent completing the samples for the "Make-Believe Tea," being mailed to friends of Scouting.

A social hour followed.

Mr. and Mrs. John-Hamelink are shown following their recent marriage in Holloway Street United Church, Belleville. The bride is the former Jean Barbara Draycott, Belleville, daughter of Mr. Gerald A. Draycott and the late Mrs. Draycott. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Kryn Hamelink, Ridgetown, Ontario. (Photo by Lumbers Studio, Belleville).

HAMELINK — DRAYCOTT

Baskets of yellow and white chrysanthemums and gladioli adorned the altar of Holloway Street United Church on Saturday, June 10th, at high noon, and white satin bows designated the guest pews, when the Rev. C. W. Coleman united in marriage Jean Barbara Draycott of Belleville, youngest daughter of Mr. Gerald Draycott of Belleville and the late Mrs. Draycott, to John Hamelink, of Belleville, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Kryn Hamelink, of Ridgetown, Ontario.

Mr. C. E. Templer, church organist, played the "Wedding March" and accompanied the guest soloist, Mr. E. A. Hughes, in a lovely rendition of "The Lord's Prayer" and "Because."

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was radiant in an original "Bridal Creation" of silk organza over taffeta, having waltz-length skirt in redingote effect and edged in fine Alencon lace. The fitted bodice over a heart - shaped taffeta slip featured full-length sleeves. She wore a silk illusion veil topped by a rose-shaped headdress of seed pearls and organza petals and carried a cascade of a single yellow-chrysanthemum, surrounded by baby roses, yellow rosebuds, and white stephanotis and trailing ivy, tied with white satin ribbon.

She was attended by her sister, Mrs. William O'Brien, of Belleville, as matron of honor, and by Miss Heather Cavanaugh of Stittsville, a cousin, as bridesmaid. Both wore gowns alike in a soft shade of yellow mist silk organza in bouffant style and coquillon length, featuring fitted bodices, accented by embroidered motifs of the same material. Their headdresses were in coronet style in a matching shade of yellow with veils. They wore matching shoes and carried nosegays of white and yellow 'mums centred with a yellow rose and tied with yellow streamers.

The groomsman was Mr. Martin Hamelink of Amelisburg, brother of the bridegroom; Mr. Ronald Kellar and Mr. S. E. Turner, both of Belleville, were ushers.

The reception was held in the Whirls was appropriately decorated Club Room of Hotel Quinte, sisted for the occasion. The guests were received by a cousin of the bride, Mrs. Neil Cavanaugh, of Stittsville, wearing a two-piece sheath linen ensemble in shocking pink with short sleeves and accented with scarf pearls and rhinestone motifs with matching duster, white accessories and corsage of pink roses and white 'mums.

Due to illness the parents of the bridegroom were unable to attend.

The bridal table was lovely, appointed with its white linen damask cloth, centred by the three-tiered wedding cake in white icing, trimmed with yellow iced rosebuds, topped with a fresh yellow rose, and flanked by tall tapering candles.

For the wedding trip to Niagara Falls and other points, the bride chose a pastel green Arnel sleeveless sheath, in coolilon length, with matching long-sleeved brocade jacket, with white accessories. Her corsage consisted of the orchid from the bridal bouquet.

Guests were present from Kingston, Ottawa, Bancroft, South Bay, Amelisburg, Stittsville and Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Hamelink will reside at 85 Lewis Street, Belleville.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

MAIL CALL

Question — Is it correct to help clear the table and do the dishes after dinner at someone else's home? I always thought it was courteous to lend a hand, but my husband disagrees. What does the rule book say? — Mrs. C. C., Newark, N. J.

Answer — It all depends on the attitude of the hostess and how many people she invited to dinner. A general run on the kitchen can lead to chaos. If it's a small group, the hostess might welcome a few willing helpers to make short work of the debris. If she's the highly-organized type, however, she might prefer to sort out the mess in calm and solitude. Play it by ear. If her, "No, thank you," has a firm and final ring to it, play safe and join the men in the living room.

Question — My daughter is going with a boy who soon will give her an engagement ring. We have never met his parents. I always understood it was the girl's parents who invited the boy's parents to their home for luncheon or tea, they could meet. Now I am not so sure. What is the correct procedure? — Mrs. H. R., Largo, Fla.

Answer — It's just the opposite. The young man's parents should make the first move, either through a telephone call or a personal visit, at which time you could serve a light luncheon or tea. If families live near enough, the initial call should be followed by an invitation to tea or an informal dinner at their home.

If the boy's parents live a distance away, they should acknowledge the engagement by sending a note to your daughter, then one to you. It should suggest plans to visit either at your home or theirs, whichever is more convenient, before the wedding.

Question — Should one send a thank-you note after a dinner party? Isn't it sufficient to express appreciation for a pleasant evening as you leave? — Miss R. B., Bayside, N. Y.

Answer — A note is not necessary. If the dinner was a particularly gala one, though, the hostess would enjoy an extra pat on the back for making the evening memorable. A note or a phone call the next day is always appreciated and in good taste.

Homemade Ice Cream

By Mary Moore

Early in 1906 Janis, who is a confirmed reader of this column, sent to me her basic recipe with variations for ice cream made Ice Cream. These were economical and practical and turned out to be popular with many of you.

It is high time I gave you some more ice cream recipes with summer upon us and I am going to.

First then

VANILLA ICE CREAM WITH VARIATIONS

Scald 1 cup rich milk. Gradually stir it into a mixture of 1-3 cup sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon flour. Cook over low heat, stirring, until it boils. Boil 1 minute. Cool. Pour into freezing trays. Freeze 1-2 hour. While until barely stiff 1 cup whipping cream. Beat in 1 or 2 teaspoons vanilla. Turn the partially frozen mixture into a chilled bowl. Beat with rotary beater until smooth. Fold in whipped cream, return to cold tray, and freeze until firm, stirring well during first hour or freezing period.

Variations: Follow recipe above and before freezing the first time blend in (1) Peach or Strawberry: One and one-half cups mashed fresh peaches or sliced berries sweetened with 1-3 to 3-4 cup sugar. (2) Chocolate: Before cooking, stir into milk 3 squares unsweetened chocolate melted with 1-4 cup water, stirring until blended. (3) Peppermint: One-half cup crushed peppermint stick candy instead of sugar.

Now for a different and elegant one namely,

PINEAPPLE NUT ICE CREAM

One cup crushed canned pineapple with juice, 1 tablespoon gelatine, 1-3 cup sugar, 1-2 pint thick sour cream, 1-4 teaspoon vanilla, 1-3 cup chopped pecans, if desired, 1-3 pint heavy cream. Drain pineapple. Soften gelatine in 1 tablespoon of the juice; add sugar to rest of juice and bring to boiling. Cool slightly and stir in gelatine. Add pineapple, sour cream, vanilla, and nuts. Chill; then fold into stiffly-whipped cream. Freeze in refrigerator freezing tray until firm. Serves 8. Note: Three - quarters cup diced ripe bananas may be substituted for the pecans if so added to them. See next week for more exotic homemade frozen desserts.

Successful Living

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Finds Life Dull

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My father and mother died, three years ago. I nursed both of them for a long time. I am left without anybody, or anything to care about, except a big empty house, at 51.

I am not appreciated at work, where I am doing a typist's job for the same salary I have had for years. A while ago I was so upset by the office making a switch to dictaphones—just when my mother was sick—that I had to have a series of shock treatments in a mental hospital.

I got over that, but I find it hard to believe that life is anything more than a lot of thankless drudgery. Have you any help for me?—MISS E. B.

Death sometimes leaves us with a feeling of emptiness, even when it marks the end of a long period of exhausting work. It is a tremendous shock to us to feel no longer needed.

Your home is empty; devotion to family has left you no time to make friends. Now your mind is empty of new thoughts and you seem to have lost the ability to reach out. But it can be done.

Without knowing more about you I can only suggest a right-about-face. Your letter shows some readiness for help. If you have a church connection start attending regularly and get into a group which is doing something useful. Start reading some spiritual books. (Write to me for names of some which have helped others.)

Do some interesting baking and invite someone in to share dinner or to chat over a cup of tea and a cookie—even if this is just a neighbor. Take a trip by bus or train, preferably with a touring group. Get out of your memories and into life as it is lived today.

This is a major upheaval for you but nothing less will do. Make one or two excursions into the unknown and it will start coming easier. Otherwise you are a goner.

DEAR DORIS:—A girl friend of mine is about to be married next month. This week I asked her what sort of thing she needed so that I might know what to give her. Her answer was "Don't give me a gift. Give me money."

She told me she owes money on a fur coat, a suit, some jewellery and insurance. And from the way she spoke that's not all. The man she is going to marry has no idea about this. He is also of the old-fashioned type who does not want his wife to work after marriage. I think they might have a family right away.

He is going to get an awful shock when he learns about the money she owes. She is worried about this now and has asked me what to do. She is afraid to tell him and so am I. —GIRL FRIEND.

DEAR GIRL FRIEND:—So he not only marries her; he takes on her debts. More than he bargained for!

For the sake of getting her marriage off on the right track, your friend must make a clean breast of this to her fiance right away. She must list her debts. Add up the staggering total. She could either undertake to work after the knot is tied, to pay them off, or offer to postpone the wedding. It's just that serious.

The expense of setting up housekeeping is bad enough, without starting off behind the eight-ball!

IOOF Enjoys Strawberry, Ice Cream Social

STIRLING — On Saturday evening, June 24th, Stirling Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 229 sponsored its annual strawberry and ice cream social in the Lodge banquet hall, with approximately 300 men, women and children in attendance.

The convener was Roy Tucker and a committee of nine members assisted with a few of the ladies who did kitchen duties.

The guests were served a generous plate of ice cream and strawberries and the menu included white cake, chocolate cake and coffee.

Following the repast, a film entitled "This Wonderful World" was shown in the Lodge hall.

Noble Grand Bert Jones expressed thanks to the members for their co-operation on the various committees.

Guy Bradshaw was treasurer for the evening.

Guests were present from Belleville, Eldorado and nearby points in this area.

Should Spend More Time Spoiling Husbands Than Nagging Them Says Actress

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Ireland's leading actress suggests U.S. wives would enjoy life more if they spent more time spoiling their husbands instead of nagging them—or competing with them.

"The Irish woman takes it for granted that it's a man's world," said Siobhan McKenna, who has red hair, green eyes—and a serene temper.

"When I married, my grandmother told me, 'marriage is a partnership. As in all partnerships, sometimes one must give in—and it might as well be the woman.'

"Irish women do—and I think they're the happier for it."

Ireland has one of the world's lowest divorce rates, and Miss McKenna believes one reason is the people there have a more realistic idea about the role of the sexes.

"They set out with the idea that men and women are incompatible," she said in an interview, "but through love and affection they accept this incompatibility and make the best of it.

"So the first time they disagree, they don't rush off to a divorce court. They accept the fact they are different. They expect to disagree.

What is the biggest mistake U.S. wives make?

"It's their not accepting a man as he is," said Siobhan firmly. "That is a mistake.

"You can't really change people, and you shouldn't really want to. Advice is one thing. But nagging merely drives a man to be more what he is.

"Sometimes, too, women here are too ambitious for their husbands. They drive them to work too hard. Then, when they've made all this money, it's too late for love.

"Mind you, I think Irish husbands might work a little harder. But they work to live, not live to work.

Miss McKenna is married to actor Dennis O'Dea and has a 13-year-old son. Although she has an outside career herself, she feels 'the best life for a woman really" is one in which she concentrates on her marriage and home.

"Irish girls generally don't have a career after marriage," she commented. "Here girls often do continue to work.

"Of course, Irish women spoil their men. That tends to make the Irish mother a bit of a slave —which the American woman won't be. But it makes for a happier home life."

Women's Study Guild History Detailed at Recent Meeting

The Women's Study Guild, as it is known in 1961, evolved from a sewing circle at St. John St. Church in 1931, to an organization of young women devoted to studying the most urgent social problems of the day; then to an undenominational group ranging in age from young mothers to grandmothers, who are still endeavoring to carry on in the tradition of the founders.

"Reminiscing with the Guild" on its 30th anniversary provided a delightful program at the garden get-back supper held on Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Varcoe, Homewood Drive.

During the business meeting chaired by Mrs. E. A. Fleming, annual reports were made by the treasurer, Mrs. MacBrien; the secretary, Mrs. Trill; for the programs by Mrs. Beresford, and the press by Miss J. Tickell.

After an election by ballot, to assure new officers each year, the following were successful: president — Mrs. Beresford; vice-president — Mrs. Meldrum; secretary — Mrs. Ellis; treasurer — Mrs. Murdock.

The worship service on the theme "What Men Live By" was taken by Mrs. Gordon Williamson.

Mrs. H. C. Seldon and Mrs. George Wishart led the reminiscing by explaining that in 1931 Mr. Robert Hall, minister of John St. Church, first "suggested that the group study current events in the light of the teachings of Christianity. Under the direction of Miss Robina Templeton, and Mrs. Douglas Bewes, the "Young Women's Guild of John St. Church" was founded. Miss Frances Sullivan was the first president and Miss Olive Elson the first secretary.

According to the constitution the Guild was founded to study and discuss current topics in the light of the teachings of Jesus; to develop a spirit of friendliness; to apply the teachings of Jesus in as practical a manner as possible.

John St. Church was originally a Presbyterian church situated on the north-east corner of John St. and Victoria Ave.

At the time of church union in 1925 the members voted in favor of union and so it was after the church had become one of the United Churches of Canada that the Guild was formed.

There is a complete list of the programs and of the 200 persons who have been members during the 30 years.

Two charter members were present at this meeting, Mrs. C. G. Williams and Mrs. A. D. Archibald.

On Saturday, October 31, 1936, disaster befell the church and congregation when fire destroyed the building and contents. Soon afterwards the church was disbanded.

In April, 1937, the Guild accepted an invitation to affiliate with Tabernacle United Church but meetings were usually held in the homes of members.

In 1954 a revised constitution was adopted and the name changed to Women's Study Guild, as the group had become non-denominational.

Mrs. Wishart told of the two outstanding personalities of the Guild, Miss Robina Templeton, who "had the biggest heart" and Mrs. Douglas Bewes, who "had the keenest mind." The Guild suffered its greatest loss in the deaths of both from cancer in 1943.

It had been during the depression years of the 30's that many people did first serious thinking and "The School for Leisure" conducted by the Guild during these lean years provided classes in many fields and brought something to do and stimulation.

Almost all the topics studied over the years are unfinished problems and appeared again in various forms in the suggested topics for 1961-62 programs.

Over the years many have been the gifts from the Guild to worthy causes. For the past seven years under the Save the Children Fund an Indian boy has been sponsored. He is now self-supporting and a little Tunisian girl is being sponsored.

The Guild members feel they have an unique organization. Membership is open to anyone interested.

At the close of the meeting, farewells were said to two members who are leaving the city, Mrs. G. F. MacEwen and Mrs. C. W. B. Sloan.

Women's Institute

FOXBORO W.I.

The June meeting of the Foxboro Women's Institute was held at the home of Mr. F. Kilpatrick. Mrs. Bamber opened the meeting in the usual way and called on Mrs. Ellis to give the motto. "Thought seeds should be carefully selected as garden seeds." Mrs. Dafoe dealt most capably with the motto, saying in part: "We should select our thoughts as carefully as we select our garden seeds. Let us train our mind to think logically and kindly."

The roll call, "Tips on growing house plants," gave a good variety of helpful hints and ideas. Following the roll call, Mrs. C. Hubble, as agriculture convener, called on Mrs. L. Lewis who, as leader of the 4-H Club for the past season, introduced Linda Allison. Linda had given the comment for the club at the achievement day in Belleville and gave same at the meeting in a most interesting way.

Mrs. M. Jamieson and Mrs. A. Calvert, as program convenors, gave the following readings: "All This Grandeur" by Alma Mason, read by Mrs. Calvert, and "Time Saved" by Mrs. Jamieson.

Mrs. Hubble and Mrs. Lewis gave a most interesting report of the District annual.

During the business it was decided to cater the first day of the fair; also to take part in the Women's Institute display. Mrs. La Rue, Mrs. L. Carter and Mrs. W. Thompson are the group in charge of making up the cook books.

Mrs. Hubble gave some excellent tips on "Home Beautification," and passed some pamphlets around for the group to see for more ideas.

Two good readings — "Raising Delinquents," read by Mrs. Calvert, and "Principles," read by Mrs. Jamieson closed the interesting program.

Mrs. Hubble gave a flower contest.

A delicious lunch was enjoyed during a social hour.

Sun and Surf

By TRACY ADRIAN

Stripes are setting the pace around the cabana and beach circuit this season.

This striking version is a swim suit designed in a wide awning stripe. It has a sweetheart neckline and a half skirt in front.

Made of acetate and elasticized cotton, the fabric resists fading in sun, sea or chlorinated water and is quick-drying and comfortable to wear.

Decoration Service Held By IOOF

STIRLING — On Sunday afternoon, June 25th, the members of Stirling I.O.O.F. Lodge No. 239 convened at the Lodge Hall, Charlotte Street, and proceeded in a body to the cenotaph and thence to Stirling Cemetery. Here, members of Laurel Rebekah Lodge No. 211 were gathered and the memorial service followed. The two lodges were marshalled by Guy Bradshaw and Miss Mary Hulin.

Mrs. Nora Wannamaker, the Noble Grand, and Mrs. Ella Davidson, Mrs. Hilda Rose and Mrs. Alice Macklin, were in charge, with the latter reading the names of deceased Rebekah members. A large cross covered in mauve was set up and colorful bouquets of Sweet William were placed in the folds to form a cross of flowers. Each member placed a bouquet as the names were read.

The I.O.O.F. Lodge service followed and was in charge of Earl Fay, Ross Jeffs, Roy Thicker and Bert Jones, Noble Grand, read the names of deceased members buried in Stirling Cemetery, followed by names of those members who are buried elsewhere.

At the conclusion, George Carlisle and Guy Bradshaw placed each member's flowers in the shape of a cross and later they were distributed on the various graves in the cemetery.

The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ken Sine of Peterborough.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mr. R. A. — We can't postpone telling Vivienne she'd adopted.

Mrs. R. A. — Now that we've waited this long, we'd better wait until she's 18.

Mr. R. A. — We adopted Vivienne when she was a baby and she's now 14. Several years ago the agency advised us to tell the child that we are not her natural parents. But, even though we agreed at the time, just haven't been able to bring the matter up at all.

Now that she's a teen-ager, it's really time she knew the truth. She's a big girl and can take it. Besides, she gets around and may somehow hear what happened from some outsider who knew us long ago, before we got Vivienne. Hard as it is, we should tell her now in our own way, to avoid worse heartache.

My wife disagrees. She thinks it would upset Vivienne and we should wait until her adolescent years are past.

Mrs. R. A. — It's my fault, I know, for waiting so long to have that difficult talk with our precious child. But this is no time to upset her with such a startling piece of news. She has just reached puberty and has troubles enough.

I heard of a teenager who went to pieces when told she was adopted. She insisted on looking for her real parents. Somehow she was able to track them down and she wound up leaving her foster parents and moving in with her natural mother. While that couldn't happen with Vivienne, thank God, because there's no record of her parents, I'm afraid of what the shock might do to her, anyway.

The best thing to do now is wait until she's 18, a full-grown adult.

The Council — In this setup, we side with Mrs. R. Having stalled as long on that important heart-to-heart, nothing is to be gained by having it immediately. But at the same time we would urge Mrs. R. to "get it over with" before Vivienne is 18. Four years is a long time to live with a misleading situation where anything may set off some crackling.

If Mrs. R. can be guided as to the "when" by the opinion of an expert who knows Vivienne well — a doctor, teacher, clergyman, psychologist, or social worker who can determine how well-adjusted she is. Despite the added rigors and uncertainties of adolescence, Vivienne may have the inner resources to take the awful shaking (to her) newsreel in stride.

Maybe in view of the great love of which she has been the object, she may be in better shape to bounce back from a "bombshell" than teenagers who feel (or imagine) themselves unwanted and rejected. Once the A.'s have been given the go-ahead signal by one of above, mentioned authorities who has checked Vivienne's emotional stability, they can safely tell her that they are not her biological parents. This green light may come well before age 18.

Incidentally, the difficulty of the "telling" may be eased by having the same pat when asked the "when," be present to help with the "how." The revelation usually follows along these lines: "Other parents must accept whatever baby is born to them. We, however, had lots of babies to choose from. So we looked and looked until we found exactly the one we wanted — you! We picked you out from among all the others."

Even a wobbly adolescent couldn't really be hurt by such an affirmation. And Vivienne may be less wobbly than many teen-agers. We believe the A.'s can get rid of the underbox in their relationship, and fully enjoy its tenderness.

Women's Activities

U.C. EVENING AUXILIARY

FRANKFORD — Frankford United Church Evening Auxiliary met on the evening of June 21st in Rose Lowery Hall.

The vice-president, Mrs. Dick Reid, opened the meeting by reading a poem, "Mother." The secretarial report was given and roll call showed that 19 members were present. A "thank-you" note was read from Mrs. H. Farr. Mrs. Hugh Caldwell gave the treasurer's report.

Mrs. Don Rose opened the worship service and Mrs. Sharpe offered the prayer. Mrs. Nicholson read the Scripture reading from St. Luke 15, Mrs. Sharpe offered the worship service with prayer. A film entitled "Christian Stewardship in North Africa" was shown with a commentary given by Mrs. Frank Moran.

Mrs. S. Sharpe conducted the following program: a reading, Mrs. Max Dafoe; duet, Linda and Sharon Dafoe; vocal duet, Elaine and Janet Sharpe; reading, Mrs. Lawrence Way; a vocal solo, Paul Mallett, accompanied by Mrs. Bob Tomecek.

The meeting closed and a delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses Mrs. Frank Moran, Mrs. Nicholson, Mrs. Don Rose and Mrs. S. Sharpe.

W.I. Enjoys Talk, Slides on 'Horticulture'

WELLINGTON — The June meeting of the Wellington Women's Institute was held last Tuesday evening in the town hall. There were nearly 40 members and visitors in attendance. The president, Mrs. Tripp, opened the meeting.

Roll call was answered by "What One Could Do to Beautify Her Community."

Thank you notes were read from Cousin Wanamaker, Mr. and Mrs. Mastin, Miss Valleau, Jack Thomas, Carol Allison, Mrs. Bishop and Mrs. Foster.

It was decided to hold a bazaar and tea in the near future. A pie and ice cream social will be held early in August. All outstanding bills were moved to be paid. Mrs. Jackson was the only member to have a birthday in June.

The meeting was turned over to Mrs. Ken Wood and Mrs. Foster, No. 2 group leaders, who presented the following program. All sang "O Canada," a splendid current event paper was given by Mrs. F. Harris; poem of the month, "What is So Rare as a Day in June" by Mrs. Foster.

Mrs. Wood introduced the guest-speaker, Mr. Phil Dodds of Picton, president of the Horticultural Society of Prince Edward County, also Mr. Vic Lord of Picton. Mr. Dodds gave an interesting talk on the good work done by the Horticultural Society in the county. He also said that before he and Mr. Lord came into the meeting they had taken a short walk around the village and they admired the way the fronts of the churches, town hall and school were kept; they all looked very nice. Mr. Lord then showed some beautiful colored slides of flowers and plants taken at Lockyer's greenhouses; different scenes in the county and also pictures taken at the Toronto Exhibition. He said he was sorry that the slides of the rose garden at Newark were not available for that evening, but maybe he would be able to come again and show them.

A vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. Tripp to the gentlemen for their most interesting part of the meeting.

Mrs. Wood and her group served refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

Lakeside Chapter O.E.S. Holds 'Past Officers' Night

WELLINGTON—Last Wednesday evening, Lakeside Chapter O.E.S. held its annual Past Officers' night. The Worthy Matron, Mrs. Allie Watt, and Worthy Patron, Mr. Allan Anderson, welcomed the many visitors from Belleville, Picton, Colborne, Port Hope, Trenton and St. Thomas.

Distinguished guests received a hearty welcome were: P.M. D.D.G. M's Ruby Fleming, Colborne; Helen Crom, Quinte; Dorothy McGlashon, Belleville; Gladys McFall, Lakeside; Mrs. Ruth Peck, W.M.; Mr. Benford Peck; W.P. Quinte; Mrs. Helen Graydon, W.M. Picton; Mrs. Dorothy Seaborne, W.M. Mr. Seaborne, W.P. Colborne.

These three worthy "Sterling" matrons were all becomingly attired in their beautiful full-length red gowns. The many past worthy matrons and worthy patrons of the visiting Chapters, as well as from Lakeside, were also given a hearty clap among them was Mrs. Margaret McKever, D.D. G.M. Elect from Port Hope.

A basket of colorful lilacs, peonies and lilies made a bright floral color in the East.

INITIATION CEREMONY

The Worthy Matron invited Miss Norma Foster P.M. to occupy her chair for the initiation ceremonies was assisted by the following: W.P. Gus Turpin; P.P.A.M. Jean Hansell; P.M.: A.P. Gerald Gibson, P.P.; Cond. Florence Dick, P.M.; Asso't Cond. Doris McFaul P. M.; Secretary, Ida McFaul, P. M.; Treasurer, Helen Harris, P. M.; Chaplain, Isabel Davern, P. M.; Organist, Anna Bowerman. Present organist, Marshall, Olive Channell; P.M.; Adah, Susie Down, P.M.; Ruth, Lena Hicks, P.M. Esther, Gladys McFaul, P.D.D.G.M.; - Martha, Henrietta Archard, P.M.; Electa, Ruby Vick, P.M.; Werder, Violet Martin, P.M.; Sentinel, Amos Hicks, P.P.; Mr. Walter Mind, P.P. assisted in the East.

The Past Officers, following the high tradition of Lakeside, capably performed their duties with credit to themselves and honor to the Chapter. This was an especially happy occasion for Miss Foster as she was in the chair when her father, Mr. Theodore Yolker received the degree of the order. Miss Foster also welcomed the many guests, including her new mother, Mrs. Anne Foster. One soon forgets, but as she gave a short review of her year (1952) it was certainly a busy and prosperous year for Lakeside. She was pleased that several of her officers for that year occupied chairs for the occasion. Mr. Turpin recalled how busy Norma kept him that since that year he has steadily put on weight.

Mrs. Seaborne spoke briefly; Mrs. Graydon thanked all who braved the rain to attend Picton Chapter's Tea; also gave an invitation to attend their Chapter on Thursday evening and Mrs. Peck invited everyone to their tea at Quinte on July 26th.

PRESENTATION MADE

Mrs. Doris McFaul, on behalf of the Past Matrons Club, presented the Chapter with eight aluminium trays.

Miss Doris Cooke, Colborne, favored with a humorous reading.

The June refreshment committee served lunch which included ice-cream and strawberries, a treat from the Worthy Matron, Mrs. Watt and Worthy Patron, Mr. Anderson which was enjoyed by all.

Women's Activities

FOXBORO W.M.S.

The June meeting of the Foxboro Women's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday school room with Mrs. C. LaRue bringing the meeting to order.

Mrs. H. Beatty gave the call to worship by reading "I Am the Church." Mrs. LaRue read the Scripture, 91st Psalm, and the comment was given by Mrs. Beatty. Mrs. LaRue dedicated the offering.

A most appropriate reading, "All Things Work Together for Good to Those That Love God" was given by, Mrs. Bamber. Mrs. Meyers interestingly and capably gave the 5th chapter of the study book. This was followed by a delightful solo, "In the Garden," sung by Mrs. Earl Dafoe, accompanied on the piano by Mrs. F. Dudley.

A poem by Edgar Guest, "It Isn't So Easy," was read by Mrs. W. Rombough and "A Prayer on Growing Older" read by Mrs. H. Beatty, were followed by the business in charge of Mrs. C. LaRue.

Mrs. Pickering brought some information on Missionary work from the Woman's Association convention in Marmora, stating "The United Church is now to send missionaries to South America."

Mrs. LaRue closed the meeting.

PERSONAL DISASTER

VANCOUVER (CP)—For five years Kiyoko Habu sacrificed to save enough to return to Japan to see her son. After withdrawing $600 from the bank and putting the money to pay for her fare to Japan in her purse, she was returning home when a thief snatched it all.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

Does everyone feel the same each year when first leaving the city to go to camp, whether on lake or stream, or to the country? Does everyone forget over the winter the particular sensory pleasures which delight one in the out-of-doors? We all probably do remember, but we hold that it is the sharpening or the re-awakening of our memories which give us that "Oh, life's it wonderful" feeling.

How could we keep with us during the cold snowy winter that very special smell of the woods, especially the dripping wetness of the woods after a rain? It is exciting to see the couple of inches of growth showing on the tips of branches of the balsam fir by the much paler color of green.

At any time of year, it is interesting to watch the whole aspect of a lake change in different kinds of weather— there is not one lake but many variations of the one. Have you remembered over winter how the rain often flattens the uneven surface of the water until it looks as if it were painted to look opaque.

The first sight of a loon each year is an event; that odd bird has a character all its own and holds a peculiar place in the affections of northern lake dwellers. Its eerie call is strangely lonely and yet reassuring.

The sound of all the bird calls, especially in early morning — if you waken early enough — can become a study in itself. We do not know what call goes with what bird and had to turn to one of the field naturalists in the city for help. One call the other morning stood out; it was rather penetrating and very clear. It starts with one long note, then changing to exactly one whole tone above, it repeats this second triple four times for the most part but may change to three repetitions and sometimes five. We were told it might be a cardinal, a very beautiful brilliant red bird with some black on its face. Next time we may see one.

The pleasant things we have the joy of rediscovering year after year! Why is it that we can keep much clearer the memory of the black flies and the mosquitoes? They are the ones who rediscover us!

Turning from Nature to man's ingenuity, soft drinks are being packaged in bags this summer; you can now get one for a bag of pop as well as a bag of pop corn.

We are told that this bag is a sturdy polythene pouch with a sharp drinking straw. This is used to pierce the plastic bag and sip the beverage. The bag can be comfortably held in the palm of the hand for drinking and it will sit up nicely on a table without spilling.

It will put an end to the problem of returning empty bottles or disposing of cans. The bags can be tossed away like waste paper. There is no danger from broken bottles and a carton of pop bags weighs just a fraction of the equivalent in bottled drinks.

The bags take up little space in the refrigerator; they can be frozen as popsicles or packed frozen with a picnic lunch to cool the food and provide cold beverage when thawed.

What about the bag breaking? The bag is claimed to be able to withstand 240 pounds of pressure without bursting.

This is the last column for June and what a queer June it has been. Summer is very reluctant this year, but the weather has likely been good for the students with their exams. It has hardly been the type to tempt them out-of-doors too much. Happy holidays to them.

Disarming Simplicity

By VERA WINSTON

Although it's quite simple, there's something of a sophisticated air about this little dress that makes it right both for afternoon wear and as a dinner dress.

The fabric is black crepe and there is self-banding at neck and hem of the sleeveless design.

The wide slot seaming contains a pocket at one side and there is a simulated pocket at the wrap-around side.

4 Canadian Cigarettes "Safer" Than Before (but 12 have more tar)

Doctors say tar and nicotine in cigarette smoke are harmful — and Canadian cigarettes have changed in the past two years. Some offer more protection than others! In July Reader's Digest the latest laboratory report on 18 different brands tells you how much they have changed. 12 cigarettes (including many filter-tips) now have more tar . . . and one has a new low-low tar content. Iron Ore Co. Operation ... Big Gamble ... ay of Expected

By JOE DUPUIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CAROL LAKE, Labrador (CP)—Picture a hole in the ground big enough to swallow a 30-storey building.

Then imagine a mill massive enough to store 60,000 tons of ore almost without noticing it, and a train of ore cars rolling continuously over a circular 12-mile track without being to hard for human hands.

Finally, visualize a system of automation that will enable one man to operate the whole works —rock crusher, railway and mill storage.

This gives some idea of the scope of a $200,000,000 mining gamble by the Iron Ore Company of Canada in this remote part of western Labrador where 2½ years ago only virgin bush stood.

"It's a gamble but a pretty good gamble," says Don Sharsbura, 28, of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., general foreman of operations. "This place will be going strong long after I'm dead and gone."

Engineers are banking on the relative ease with which Labrador's high-quality ore can be separated from its iron content.

STARTED IN 1958

"We're a high-morale crew living in a happy town doing an exciting job," says Malcolm (Mac) Jenkins of Timmins, Ont., a practical engineer who is second-in-command to project manager Dr. A. E. Moss of Strasbourg, Sask.

When the first camp was constructed here in November, 1958, Mac's family was the first to move in.

"It's hard to believe how quickly things have changed around here. Why, this isn't the bush anymore at all."

The huge concentration plant, of now about 60 per cent complete, dominates the skyline of the 1124-hope townsite on the upper brow of Wabush Lake.

When production begins late next year, the mill will produce annually about 7,000,000 tons of 66-per-cent ore. It has a designed capacity of 14,600,000 tons annually.

Built to run continuously, the mill requires 55,000 tons of ore daily and has a 24-hour storage capacity of 60,000 tons.

The giant crusher, housed in a nine-storey building of which only two storeys are above ground, is the largest ever built in Canada. It can smash four-ton rocks into powder in minutes. The ore deposits to feed the mill are located about five miles inland in camel-backed hills.

ORE FOR 100 YEARS

The Smallwood mine, named after Newfoundland's premier, has a life expectancy of 12 years. It will be worked first.

Just a stone's throw away is the Carol deposit, biggest of all, with enough ore to supply the plant for nearly 50 years.

Then there are four smaller but good-sized deposits dot the five-mile area around Carol Lake. The company gave up exploring after finding enough ore to keep going for 100 years.

Men call the blue-black ore "blue gold." It is so accessible that a kick of the earth with a heavy boot can bare it to the sunlight.

IRON DEVELOPMENT—The Iron Ore Company of Canada is investing $200,000,000 in a mining development at Carol Lake in western Labrador. Production is expected to start late next year. Map locates the mining site near the Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway.

The company will mine the deposits by laying bare the land, then removing the ore in strips or flat blocks. A jet-type drill will break up the ore. It then will be dumped aboard electronically operated train cars moving continuously in a circle and automatically tipped into the crusher. A series of conveyor belts deposits the crushed ore in the concentrating plant for processing.

48-HOUR WEEK

Officials are considering building another mill to convert the ore to pellets which are in demand by steel mills.

Don Marrion, 27, of Port William, Ont., is in charge of the 200-man maintenance crew which keeps the project's 196 pieces of equipment, from saws of powerful scrapers and bulldozers, in working condition. During the early stages, with no shelter, they repaired equipment outdoors in 50 below zero weather.

IOC's staff of 640 works a 48-hour week with anything over 40 hours on overtime. The lowest paid, a janitor, gets $1.90 an hour, the highest, $3.03. Three walkouts last year by dissatisfied workers of a Montreal construction company, Construction Co., have so far been the only labor troubles. Pension and life insurance plans are in the contract expired.

By next year the project will be linked by a 110-mile transmission line to a still-to-be-completed 120,000-horsepower generating plant at Twin Falls, 100 miles north.

The Quebec North Shore and Labrador Railway operates into Carol. Across the water at Little Wabush Lake the Wabush Iron Co. is in the initial stages of a development which together with Carol Lake will create two new towns with a total population of more than 10,000.

Eleven-Man Detachment Of Canadian Provost Corps Serving UN in the Congo

By PETER BUCKLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—When an 11-man detachment from the 60-man crew of a char-Canadian Provost Corps serving under the United Nations for here, transporting arms to Katanga, Canadian military police stood guard outside the Germans' ho- tel room in Leopoldville until the men were allowed to leave the Congo.

"That was an exceptional job, though," says Sgt.-Maj. Don Watts of Halifax, commander of military personnel are involved.

They form part of a 60-man detachment of military police. Fifteen young Danes do security and mobile patrol work, usually working with the Canadians, while 34 Italians are on traffic control guard duty for high-ranking UN officials, and convoy escorts.

PARATANI IS CHIEF

The military police come under Col. Hamid Hajeebhoy of Pakistan, who is provost marshal and chief of military personnel. But their active superior is Capt. William Fiddes of Montreal, who worked briefly as a detachment liaison officer for the 57 Canadian Signal unit last fall before becoming assistant provost marshal.

The UN military police are a familiar sight in Leopoldville. The business-like Canadians and Danes with their white-painted steel helmets contrast oddly with the Indians, in khaki turbans with a fan-shaped crest on top.

Technically, the Canadians are on eight-hour shifts then off for 24 hours.

"But most of them work longer," Watts said, "since they must often use their free time to get statements and follow up investigations."

BUSIER IN CONGO

Cpt. Leo Bernard of Winnipeg, who served previously with the Canadian forces in Germany added: "There are more serious matters to be investigated in Congo than here, but we're much busier here because of traffic accidents."

Of the some 375 cases investigated by the Canadians since last Sept. 1, more than 225 have been major or minor traffic accidents.

"Everything seems to take longer here," Staff Sgt. Rene Boisvert of Montreal said. "A minor traffic accident which in Canada would take 5 minutes to investigate, here involves an hour and a half or longer because of the difficulty of rounding up witnesses and getting information."

Canadians Are Liked

The Canadians are the only MPs there in both French and English, they find themselves dealing continually with the French-speaking Congolese police and members of a 400-man municipal police force from English-speaking Nigeria, brought here to help train the Congolese.

Six of the Canadians are lance corporals: Robert Barbeet, Timmins, Ont.; Narcisse Rail, Trois-Rivieres, Que., and Vancouver; Jacques Chartrand, Montreal; Jean Blanchet, Quebec; Claude Lemieux, Quebec, Que., and Michel Lafrance, Montreal.

Besides Cpl. Bernard, Sgt.-Maj. Watts and Staff Sgt. Boisvert, the others are Sgt. Bill McDougall, Oakville, Ont., and Sgt. Andy Pepin, Quebec.

Some of the investigations take-turns possible only in The Congo.

Pepin recalls that a Brazilian smuggled by the UN collided in his small German car. It made him with a car driven by a Congolese. By the time the Brazilian returned on foot to the scene with local police his bus was stolen and a crowd had gathered.

"When we got there to investigate," Pepin said, "we just had time to get the licence number of the other car before the crowd began to get mad and came after us."

Eight Politicians Crashed Colonial Party in 1864 And Set Stage for Union

By CARL MOLLINS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Eight politicians from the united colonies of Canada West and Canada East—better known as Upper and Lower Canada—turned up in the capital of Prince Edward Island 97 years ago and virtually gate-crashed a conference of Maritime colonial leaders.

The Canadians arrived almost unnoticed in Charlottetown Sept. 1, 1864 aboard the steamer Queen Victoria from Quebec. Only one official turned out to meet them. Most of the visitors had to stay aboard the steamer because there was no accommodation ready for them in the town.

The leaders of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, however, broke off the opening session of their conference on Maritime union to hear what the self-invited Canadians had to say.

Eight days, four meetings and countless convivial toasts later, the eight Canadians and 17 Maritimers had woven the first ties that were to unite Upper and Lower Canada—as the provinces of Ontario and Quebec—with New Brunswick and Nova Scotia in the Dominion of Canada, July 1, 1867.

PLAN MEMORIAL

The history books now show there men as the Fathers of Confederation, among them John A. Macdonald, George Brown, Georges Cartier, Alexander Galt, D'Arcy McGee, Hector Louis Langevin, Samuel Tilley and Charles Tupper.

Ironically, the island colony that waved host to the historic conference was to delay six years before joining what McGee then foresaw as "one great nationality, bound, like the shield of Achilles, by the blue rim of ocean."

But Prince Edward Island now is setting the pace in a Canada-wide project to erect the first permanent memorial building commemorating the Charlottetown conference and honoring the Fathers of Confederation.

Like the conference itself, the memorial project developed into a national enterprise from simple beginnings.

Dr. Frank MacKinnon, principal of Charlottetown's Prince of Wales College, was entrusted by local citizens with the job of finding a way to replace the city's art gallery and its only theatres, destroyed in two disastrous fires in 1958.

CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS

The idea of making the project more than a local enterprise developed from a conversation in Vancouver between Dr. MacKinnon and Calgary lawyer Eric L. Harvie.

The Calgarian, Dr. MacKinnon recalls, declared that building a cultural centre as a memorial to Confederation was too important for P.E.I. alone. "All Canadians should have a hand in it," Mr. Harvie said.

The result was the creation of the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Foundation of professional and business men across Canada, a campaign to raise between $4,000,000 and $6,000,000 for the memorial and a Canada-wide architectural competition launched early in June for the design of the memorial building.

NEW BRITISH LIGHT EXECUTIVE AIRCRAFT: THE AIREDALE — The first of the new light aircraft from the British Executive and General Aviation Ltd. group (EAGLE), this Beagle-Auster A100 "Airedale" is a well-equipped and highly efficient light executive and touring aircraft.

With four seats in a comfortably appointed cabin, and with a steerable nose-wheel tricycle undercarriage, the "Airedale" provides fatigue-free comfort at a continuous cruising speed of 141 mph, and has a maximum still air range of 1,050 miles. It is powered by a 180 b.h.p. Lycoming O-360 engine, driving a McCauley constant-speed propeller.

The Airedale has a car-type interior, with front and rear doors and separate baggage doors. Provision is made for the installation of complete airline-standard instrumentation for all-weather day and night flying, together with panel space for comprehensive radio equipment, including full airways navigational aids. A rotation anti-collision beacon is fitted as standard equipment.

Glass plastic has been used extensively for such items as undercarriage spats, window mouldings, wing tips, tail fairings and the dorsal fin, and the total effect is an attractive all-Canada."

The dimensions of the Airedale are as follows: length, 25 feet 10 inches; span, 36 feet; height, 9 feet 3 inches; wing area, 184.5 square feet.

The three-storey building, set on a landscaped site next to the legislature where the 1864 conference was held, will house a theatre, museum, library and art gallery.

LIVING MEMORIAL'

The aim is to build a "living memorial" that will serve both as a monument to the men who made Canada and a showcase for the performing and visual arts of the nation.

The architectural competition, financed by a $30,000 Canada Council grant, is expected to produce the winning design by the fall. It is hoped to open the memorial in 1964 amid Charlottetown celebrations previewing the 100th anniversary of Confederation three years later.

Canadian artists will be commissioned to carry out the interior decoration of the building. Federal and provincial governments, industries and private citizens are being asked for funds, ideas and typical regional materials for the memorial.

As Dr. MacKinnon says, "It is almost incredible that Canada has no permanent memorial of distinction to its founding fathers."

Charlottetown, with a boost from the rest of Canada, now hopes to fill the gap with "a beautiful building, worthy of its purpose, and embodying in its art and architecture themes and illustrations representative of

LEAVES UNANSWERED

LONDON (Reuters) — British made public Monday its long - awaited constitutional plan for Northern Rhodesia but left unanswered the key question of whether whites or Negroes would control government of the Central African protectorate. Under the plan, Negro representation in the legislative council would be increased substantially but no guarantees are given of a majority for either the Negro or white - led political parties.

MOST EFFICIENT DIVISION . . . The local St. John Ambulance Nursing Cadet Division was presented with the Efficiency Shield as the best division in Ontario for 1960 at its annual inspection yesterday evening. Shown are (left to right): Mrs. R. Baverstock, Divisional Officer; Mrs. M. Reid, Division Superintendent; Mrs. C. D. Ashley, Provincial Cadet Nursing Officer, and Miss Janet Langabeer, Divisional Officer.

WHAT'S FOR SUPPER? . . . During the demonstrations at the St. John Ambulance Nursing Cadets' inspection yesterday evening a few of the younger cadets were left up to their own devices for a while. Above may be seen a threesome getting a good peek at a tray of food to be used in a later demonstration. The food appeared on schedule and, apparently, with nary a morsel missing.

Nasser Backs Kuwait Against Iraq's Claim

CAIRO (Reuters) — Most of the Arab bloc today appeared lined up in opposition to Iraq's claim to Kuwait.

The United Arab Republic Tuesday night announced its opposition in a statement saying it could support Iraq's move only if it was "a complete expression of the will of the Arab people and their freedom of choice."

The oil - rich Persian Gulf sheikhdom also has received backing from Saudi Arabia, Jordan, Iran and Lebanese newspapers.

In Kuwait, ruling Sheik Sir Abdullah as-Salim As-Sabah repeated Tuesday his determination to resist Iraq's claim as flag - waving demonstrators gathered in front of his palace.

"If things develop for the worst, Allah forbid, then you are the protectors and ammunition of your homeland," he told the crowd.

3 DIE IN PLANE

LA USH, Wash. (AP) — A civilian plane carrying five men crashed in the Pacific Ocean off this Olympic Peninsula town Tuesday. The coast guard recovered three bodies.

Labor Leaders Say Situation Is Serious

UNITY HOUSE, Pa. (AP)—AFL-CIO leaders say the world situation is so serious Congress should arm President Kennedy with powers to mobilize the economy "to meet any eventuality."

The federation's executive council said in a statement that Moscow has spurned all friendly gestures by the United States and has accelerated a drive for world domination.

The government should act immediately, the union leaders said, to arouse the American people to the gravity of the international crisis and "strengthen our country's capacity for national defense in all possible emergencies."

George Meany, AFL - CIO president, said he personally wants the United States to go further and resume full nuclear testing.

He said the present test ban is a gentlemen's agreement and that the U.S. has no way of knowing whether the Russians are violating it.

DIDN'T ELABORATE

The AFL-CIO foreign policy resolution adopted Tuesday did not elaborate on the standby powers recommended for Kennedy. Presumably they would include wage-price controls as well as economic mobilization powers.

One development Tuesday came with the arrival here of President Paul Hall of the Seafarers Union, who promised "a hell of a fight" in court to try to block an 80-day Taft-Hartley law injunction to end the U.S. maritime strike.

Hall came here to confer with members of the executive council, in talking with reporters afterward Hall said his union plans to oppose an injunction on the ground that it is unnecessary.

Cattle Raisers on Prairies Will Be Aided in Event of Continued Drought Says PM

OTTAWA (CP) — Steps to aid Prairie cattle raisers in event of continued drought were disclosed Tuesday by Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Special Canadian Wheat Board action is being lined up to enable communities to reserve seed and fodder, the Commons agriculture committee was also told.

Marketing sources said there is not sign yet of a sharp flood of supplies although heavier culling may be going on on Prairie ranges, generally regarded as overstocked to meet a drought.

They discounted any price bonanzas for beef consumers on grounds more than 50 per cent of Canadian beef now is top-quality, finished on feed lots rather than coming direct from grass.

Mr. Diefenbaker outlined the same special plans implemented in 1959 and again in 1959 to get cattle to fodder-rich areas in order to cattle-heavy districts. Manitoba and Saskatchewan both are involved and Alberta is expected to join, he said.

PEARSON WILLING

He replied in the Commons to Liberal Leader Pearson who unsuccessfully tried to start a special debate on the issue.

Mr. Pearson was ruled out of order on grounds the subject could be discussed later in the day during the budget debate. Mr. Diefenbaker said that in any event action has already been taken.

Canada had been in touch with the United States about hay or grazing from soil-bank land — land taken from production and the owner recompensed, Bult. Mr. Diefenbaker said he didn't look "hopefully in that direction."

Mr. Pearson asked what action has been taken to prevent the collapse of prices and in freight assistance.

PRODUCERS ORDER

With obvious relish, Mr. Diefenbaker said he just happened to have an order - in - council which spelled out measures whereby the provinces bear half freight costs for cattle or feed, the federal government bears half and the railways reduce rates.

The aid program covers transport of fodder, cattle and hauling equipment from June 26 to next March 31.

Agriculture Minister Alvin Hamilton said outside the Commons that the worst - hit areas are southern Alberta and southern Saskatchewan and especially — eastern Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

Truck transport also is covered under the aid agreement, he said.

Quick-Thinking Engineer Scoops Child From Tracks

WINNIPEG (CP) — A quick-thinking Winnipeg engineer Tuesday snatched a two - year-old boy from in front of his moving locomotive and threw him clear. But he couldn't reach a second boy, who was run over by the train and lost his right leg.

It was the second time in 15 years Canadian Pacific Railway engineer James W. McLellan had rushed in front of a moving engine to clear a toddler from the tracks.

Douglas Berry Paulson has his right leg amputated four inches below the knee. He is also suffering from cuts. Lawrence Vincent Murray, 2, is in good condition suffering from bruises to the head and knees.

They were both found by hand and knees between the tracks when we saw them," Mr. McLellan said. "I slammed the brake on. At first we didn't know what had happened but when I saw they were kids I rushed to the boy and stood on the foot board.

"I caught the one on the left side . . . picked him up by the arm and flung him clear . . . I couldn't reach the other one."

Mr. McLellan said there was room for only one man on the foot-board on his side and that the two other men in the cab didn't have time to get over to the other side.

The train was travelling 12 to 15 miles an hour.

The other child was trapped in the middle of the tracks and the engine and one car of the 51-car freight had passed over him before the train stopped.

"He was about a car length behind the engine . . . it was terrible . . . he was about two years old and he was crying."

Mr. McLellan and men from the nearby CPR Weston shops gave the children first aid and they were taken to hospital by CPR ambulance.

Fourteen years ago, while he was a fireman on another run, Mr. McLellan saved the life of a boy under the same circumstances.

"It was the same kind of deal about 14 years ago. There was little fellow playing on the tracks. When I saw him I thought he'd be able to stop I went out on the cowcatcher and scooped him up."

Eichmann Calls Self Mere Clerk

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — A hushed courtroom burst into laughter today as Adolf Eichmann described himself as a mere clerk unable to do anything about the transfer of an Italian Jewish woman to a concentration camp despite protests by fascist foreign regime.

The court was silent as the former SS lieutenant-colonel told in his own words the tragic story of the Italian woman identified only as Koni.

But laughter erupted among the spectators — including former concentration camp prisoners — when he said:

"I myself did not order the transfer of the Jewess Koizi to a concentration camp . . . I only transmitted orders."

This was in keeping with Eichmann's steadfast defence in his testimony, now in its second week, that he was a mere cog in the machinery of Nazi bureaucracy.

The former head of the Gestapo's Jewish department, who is charged with complicity in the killing of 6,000,000 Jews, described how the woman was transferred to a concentration camp from the ghetto in Riga, Latvia, and refused release despite persistent appeals by the Italian government, the Italian fascist party and even the Nazi foreign ministry.

Severe Drought Continues To Burn Prairie Crops, Blackens Farmers' Outlook

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Severe drought in all three western provinces continues to burn crops and blacken the outlook of farmers.

While rains of from one-fifth to one inch dampened northern and central areas Monday, southern Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba crops continued under the weight of a prolonged scorcher.

Manitoba provincial authorities said the 48-day dry spell represents the driest year for the province since precipitation records were started in 1874.

The Farmers' Union of Alberta asked the federal government to declare the southern section of the province a "disaster area."

Saskatchewan Agriculture Minister Nollet said Saskatchewan can properly be called a drought disaster area. He described the outlook for both grain and livestock production as "pretty grim."

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced in the Commons at Ottawa that the federal government will pay half the extra cost of moving fodder and cattle to meet the drought problem in the Prairie provinces.

An announcement was made after Liberal Leader Pearson attempted unsuccessfully to open a debate on drought conditions in Western Canada.

In the face of the drought which extends to the southern United States, grain futures on the Chicago Board of Trade firmed Tuesday with wheat and oats advancing a cent or more at times and rye futures up nearly four cents. Gowth was offered in the Prairie provinces were reported to have inquired about the availability of feed grain from the United States.

Alberta Wheat Pool said the area about 40 miles west of Medicine Hat is "likely the most critical in the province" and "hopes of harvesting any crops at all are quite slim."

Hardest hit are the mustard and flax crops, some of which were being plowed under.

A wheat pool spokesman said rain is needed in the south-eastern area immediately if farmers are to harvest as much as five bushels of wheat an acre. Average wheat yield in the area between Brooks and Grassland, Alta., and Medicine Hat south to Foremost is about 15 bushels an acre.

President Ed Nelson of the farmers union said the federal government will have to provide at least $33,000,000 in aid to Alberta farmers to ease the pinch caused this year by drought and grasshopper damage.

Soccer Stars and Writer Talk 'Shop' With Kiwanians

Stanley Matthews, the gentlemen known as "Mr. Soccer" throughout the world was the guest of honor at the weekly Kiwanis Club meeting yesterday afternoon at the Kiwanis Centre. Accompanied by Tommy Younger, goalie-coach for Toronto City soccer team and Ed Waring soccer and sportsmen's columnist for The Globe and Mail newspaper, the quiet, 47-year old sportsman, who was acknowledged as the world champion of soccer, or "football", players, gave a brief, modest address to Kiwanians before participating in an open forum on soccer.

During his remarks he advised that the rigorous demands of playing a 90-minute game of soccer, split into two 45-minute halfs with no substitutions allowed, could be met easily through stretching exercises and the avoidance of smoking and drinking. He allowed, however, that there was one vice which was driven out or rendered total abstinence.

The English star is currently in Canada playing for the summer season in Toronto where soccer is becoming a most popular sport at the participating level in both public and secondary schools and at the spectating level for all age groups. Soccer games are currently outdrawing any other type of regularly scheduled sporting event in the Toronto area ever since its introduction on a professional league basis in Toronto, Hamilton and Montreal, it was stated during the discussion following Mr. Matthews remarks.

As to being active in a sport which sees most of its players retiring at about the 35-year old figure, the guest speaker remarked that "age is only a matter of figure" and indicated that he intends to carry on actively in the sport as long as he can enjoy it.

Tommy Younger, the playing coach of the Toronto City team, told Kiwanians that it was the hope of the many soccer players visiting Canada this summer to play on Canadian teams to promote the development of youth of the country. He said that he was pleased to note the popularity which soccer was enjoying in the Quinte area.

BACKGROUND GIVEN

Ed Waring, in introducing Matthews, observation that Canada and the United States were the only two countries in the world which either have not taken to soccer as a major sport or have not claimed it as a national sport.

Ed Waring gave a few remarks concerning the background of the other two guests with an interesting comments on soccer in general both in Canada and abroad.

The informal question and discussion period following the formal address proved to be quite entertaining for those present and stimulated much interest in the activities of the Kiwanians in the sport.

Jack Davies was thanked on behalf of the club for making made the visit of Messrs. Matthews, Younger and Waring possible.

Next meeting was handled by John Trafford, a member of the club's executive, with president Bob Brazier stepping down from the chairman's position except for the official opening and closing of the meeting. Kiwanian Frank Follwell presided over the guest speakers for their presences and participation in the program.

St. John Ambulance Nurses Undergo Annual Inspection; Receive Efficiency Shield

Yesterday evening's annual inspection of the St. John Ambulance Cadet Nursing Division No. 1502 by Mrs. C. D. Ashley, Provincial Cadet Nursing Officer from the Toronto headquarters, was held at the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment's Armouries.

The unit, which consists of girls between the ages of eight and 11 years in the junior ranks and 11 to 16 years in the cadet ranks and 16 and over in the crusader section, had its inspection highlighted by the presentation of the provincial efficiency shield for 1960.

This shield, which is up for competition amongst the 13 cadet nursing divisions in Ontario on the basis of their annual work as assessed each year at the annual inspections, has been won by the local division for three years in succession to date.

Following the formal ... portion of the inspection under the direction of Sgt. Sid Scott, a number of interesting displays were put on by the 47 members of the division. A first aid team performed the necessary treatment on a patient who had suffered hypothetical injuries due to an accident and whose condition was constantly changing.

Two other teams gave demonstrations of both the Holger Nelson and the Schaffer methods of artificial respiration and performed change-overs during each demonstration.

This was followed by a home nursing demonstration which involved making up a bed and putting a patient in it; changing the bottom sheets while making the patient comfortable; all with an improvided back rest; and taking pulse and temperature of the patient prior to providing a meal tray with a soft-diet lunch on it.

During the above demonstrations which were quite interesting, the good discipline of the caddis was certainly in evidence, especially amongst the younger ones who displayed a remarkable decorum and attention as they awaited their turn to display their proficiency at tying bandages and slings.

The Corps' training specialty which was life-saving and water safety practices during the past year, was put on display by a number of the senior members. The various holds, breaks and carries used in life saving were demonstrated.

Following this display, the entire company of the division put on a mass display of bandage tying, which caught the interest of many of the close to 40 spectators and visitors.

Following the demonstrations the division was again drawn up by Sgt. Scott and addressed by the inspecting officer, Mrs. Ashley. The girls were complimented on their line work in the displays and their very neat appearance. Mrs. Ashley mentioned that to date one out of every three girls who have been members of the local division has gone on to nursing as a vocation.

Two of the cadets, Diana Blair and Beth Ann Whibbs were presented with their Preliminary Child Care Certificates for the successful completion of the 15-week course in this subject. Two of the division's members were promoted in the ranks. Janet Langabeer was presented with her pips upon promotion to the rank of Divisional Officer and Mary Ann McGuire was promoted in the rank of Junior Officer.

The Efficiency Shield was presented by Mrs. Ashley to Divisional Officers Janet Langabeer and Mrs. R. B. Baverstock and Division Superintendent Mrs. M. Reid, for the Belleville Division being rated the top Ontario division in 1960.

Tokens of appreciation were presented to Sgt. Scott on behalf of the division and, to Superintendent Mrs. Reid on behalf of the cadets. Following the conclusion of the inspection, refreshments were served the visitors and cadets.

Bert smiled, glancing at his watch. "Twenty minutes ago it was seven lines a page; many minutes after noon as it is now before three," he replied. So what time was it?

Income Tax Explained

Written and designed for the taxpayer who is not a position to employ the services of a professional accountar visit an Income Tax Office.

By C. A. MILLER
Former Supervising Assessor, Income Tax Department.

In a previous article we discussed the tax position of a person who takes up residence in Canada during the taxation year. In this article we will deal with the tax problems of the persons who leave Canada to reside in another country.

The first point to be considered, is that the departure from Canada must be of a more or less permanent nature before the personal exemption is reduced. If the taxpayer leaves Canada for the purpose of an extended visit to another country and has no intention taking employment in the other country, he will be considered a resident of Canada entitled to the full exemption.

M a married taxpayer leaves Canada with his wife and family for the purpose of employment in another country, his exemption for tax purposes in Canada will cease on the day of the departure. The exemption allowable is his ordinary allowance of $1,000 for himself $1,000 for his wife, and $250 for each child qualified for family allowance. The total of which divided by 365 days and then multiplied by the number of days he resided in Canada will be the exemption he is allowed to deduct from his income earned while in Canada.

A number of emigrating persons have argued that $500 should be allowed for each child as the family allowance stops after they leave. The point to remember is, that it is the exemptions that apply while they reside in Canada, and not what occurs after departure. A child could reach the age of 18 years in the same year of departure, but if such a child's birthday is after the date of departure only $250 exemption can be allowed as the child was only 18 when they left.

Question?—I am about to leave Canada on a 6 months tour of Europe. Can I claim full exemption of $1,000 or is it limited to that period I resided here?

Answer—You may claim the full $1,000 as a visit to another country is not considered to be emigrating from Canada.

Question?—We are leaving Canada to take up residence in England in July. We have twin boys who become 18 years of age in August. If we remained here I could have claimed $500 exemption for each of them on my tax return. Am I allowed this additional exemption when I leave?

Answer—No. It is their exact age at the time of your departure that is the governing factor.

Failure of a Diplomatic Mission Resulted in U.S. Overlooking Latin America

Signs authorizing say the United States reverted to the Monroe doctrine in its sponsorship of the abortive April 17 invasion of Cuba. This story tells of the failure of a diplomatic mission that set the stage for the attack.

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Why did the United States break its promise to consult with Latin American nations before it lent its support to the Cuban invasion that failed?—

Well - informed sources here say there is a reason never before mentioned in public. It was the failure of a diplomatic mission.

In 1954, when the Communist menace seemed to be becoming a threat to some Latin countries, the United States got them to approve at Caracas a declaration of solidarity against the Reds.

They agreed to intervene if necessary to combat the inroads of communism in the western hemisphere.

On paper the declaration looked good. But the U.S. soon found that the Latin lion was more of a paper tiger.

Even in their own countries, an international jurist well acquainted with events says, the Latin leaders have carefully avoided clashes with their armed forces if it might mean siding with the United States.

When Fidel Castro overthrew Fulgencio Batista in Cuba, U.S. diplomats wondered about Castro's political leanings. Whether by intent or because he found the American government unfriendly, Fidel turned more and more to Moscow for help.

SENT ON MISSION

The U.S. feared Cuba might become the springboard for a Communist propaganda attack on Latin America. Early in 1960 the Eisenhower administration decided drastic measures might be necessary.

What President Eisenhower secretly approved the idea of encouraging the training and equipping of a Cuban rebel force, State Secretary Christian Herter was given the job of rousing Latin opposition to the Cuban leader.

A $500,000,000 American economic aid program for Latin America was unveiled. Then Herter went to Costa Rica to find out how far the Latins would be willing to go to isolate Castro and perhaps put an end to his regime.

Those who accompanied Herter say he didn't talk tough enough. The foreign ministers of the Organization of American States condemned communism but didn't say what they would do to meet the threat it posed to nations in this hemisphere.

Herter came home with a piece of paper but nothing more. Despite the big American proposal for economic aid, there was no rallying of Latin strength against Castro.

Even as Herter was attending the meeting, the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency was guiding Cuban rebels for training in secret Central American camps for the ill-fated invasion that collapsed on April 17.

KENNEDY GAMBLED

It was left to the new president, John Kennedy, to decide whether to go ahead with the invasion. It was a gamble and he took it.

Although there was support among Americans for the action, it was widely condemned abroad and the conscience of many thinking men at home was troubled.

A group of 132 American lawyers, judges and professors secured the administration of breaking its pledges to Latin nations.

"We submit," they said, "that for our nation unilaterally to repudiate its obligations and the restraints imposed by international law would mean the abandonment of the rule of law."

The Cuban intervention was interpreted by some as a revival of the Monroe doctrine, laid down in 1823 and since altered considerably, whereby the U.S. declared it would act by itself if necessary to combat foreign threats in the western hemisphere.

Senator Robert Byrd, right-wing West Virginia Democrat, said he would support the president "in whatever is necessary to make the Monroe doctrine a reality."

Some other southern Democrats and a group of northern Republicans voiced similar sentiments. Richard Nixon said he would back the president if he decided to use force.

NEW DOCTRINE URGED

The New York Daily Mirror said editorially: "The United States is sick and tired of being fooled and tricked, deceived and bargained over. If we have to go it alone, we shall go it alone."

Dr. Salvador de Madariaga, distinguished historian - author, went farther. He suggested the Monroe doctrine was obsolete and urged Kennedy to proclaim a new anti-Communist doctrine that would allow the U.S. to go into Cuba with force and with clean hands.

But a group of highly-respected newspaper columnists, who had supported Kennedy, condemned him for encouraging the invasion.

And an unnamed U.S. government administrator, writing in the Washington Post, said direct American intervention in Cuba would be interpreted in most parts of the globe as correspondingly to the policies of the "holy alliance" of the early 19th century, the power of European monarchies whose activities prompted President James Monroe to proclaim the doctrine that bears his name.

The Monroe doctrine took a beating in Cuba. In the face of criticism at home and world opinion, it seems unlikely the U.S. will again act alone against Castro. What's more, hopes of getting Latin countries to join in collective action have dimmed.

Tomorrow: The Monroe doctrine's influence on Canada.

ATOMIC SHIP

The first West German atom-powered ship is expected to be a 18,000-ton bulk goods freighter to be completed in 1964.

DIPLOMACY FAILED . . . Christian Herter, state secretary in the Eisenhower administration, was sent to Costa Rica in 1960 to try to get a commitment for Latin American action against Cuba's Fidel Castro. He was unsuccessful. Shortly after John Kennedy became president he was faced with a decision whether to go ahead with plans for a U.S. directed military attack. He gambled and lost. The April 17 invasion was a failure. (CP from AP).

HALLOWAY

Congregation Presents Gifts To Pastor, Son

HALLOWAY — On Sunday evening the congregation of Halloway United Church met in the church dining hall for a farewell supper and time of fellowship with the Rev. F. E. Darke and son Frederick, prior to their leaving for his new charge at Castleton in the Cobourg Presbytery.

After a most enjoyable repast, the gathering was brought to order by the chairman for the evening, Mr. E. Snider. A favorite hymn of Mr. Darke's "Sun of My Soul" was sung. On behalf of the young people an address and a gift of a desk clock and pen set was presented by Raymond Emerson.

The chairman next called on Mrs. Freddie Wellman, Mr. Coleman Townsend, Mrs. E. Emerson, who voiced the appreciation of the Halloway congregation for his seven years of fine spiritual guidance, especially for his sincere interest in the young people.

Following the hymn, "This is My Father's World," Mr. Roscoe Robson gave a fitting impromptu address, touching on many incidences that occurred during Mr. Darke's tenure here.

The presentation was then made of a gold ring with initial and diamond set in a hampshire base, also an illuminated travelling alarm clock in brown Morocco leather case, and Frederick was presented with a brown Morocco leather wallet, containing a 1961 silver dollar.

The evening was brought to a close fittingly with the hymn "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," followed with prayer by Mr. C. R. Roth. Personal farewells were extended to Mr. Darke and Frederick by all present.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Canada's demand for greater penetration of United States air routes has strong American opposition and Canadian informants have expressed fear bilateral negotiations may collapse. At Canada's request, the two countries began bargaining Monday on a new exchange of trans - border air traffic rights and American authorities immediately made clear they didn't think Canada had much to offer in the way of attractive new concessions in return for Canadian demands.

Moments in History

1816 is Belleville's real birthdate, for it was in this year that the name of the Meyers Creek settlement was changed to Belleville. It was so named after Arabella Gore, wife of His Excellency Francis Gore Lieutenant Governor of Upper Canada. Some eighty years later the predecessors of the Schuster company first began. It has grown up with Belleville, supplying heating fuels to home and industry. Why not let Moira-Schuster supply your heating needs . . . fuel oil, coal, new furnaces, 24 hour service. Some Bonus Babies Good

By BEN OLAN

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball bonus payments are worthwhile when players such as Harmon Killebrew, Sandy, Koufax, Al Kaline and Dick Groat are on the receiving end.

These four, coupled with Mike McCormick, Robin Roberts, Lindy McDaniel and Harvey Kuenn are excellent reasons why major league ball clubs are dishing out big bonuses to untested youngsters.

Many smiling the scores of bonus babies signed this season will end up in the scrap heap but it's the success of the Killebrews and the Koufaxes that make it mandatory for the clubs to keep their checkbooks handy.

Killebrew, who got $50,000 to sign with Washington in 1954, found the rough with the Senators in 1959, hitting 42 homers to tie for the American League lead. He walloped 31 last year and this season he's had 22 homers to go with a sparkling .332 batting average for Minnesota Twins.

MATURED SLOWLY

It has taken six years for Koufax to pay dividends on the $25,000 bonus given him by the Dodgers in 1955. He has a 10-3 record and leads the National League in strikeouts with 117.

Groat who got a reported $40,-000 bonus from Pittsburgh in 1952 and Kaline, who received $35,000 from Detroit in 1953, are below par this season. Kaline, who has a lifetime average of .306, is hitting .286. Groat, the National's batting champ last season, has a .272 mark.

McCormick got $60,000 from the Giants and McDaniel $50,000 from the Cardinals. McCormick won 15 games in 1960 and has seven victories this season. McDaniel, one of the game's top relievers, posted a 12-4 record last year, and is 3-3 in 1961.

The Phils shelled out $25,000 in 1948 for Roberts, who is only 1-9 this season but has picked up 234 triumphs for Philadelphia.

Konsos, given a $33,000 bonus by Detroit, batted over .300 in six of his seven season with the Tigers. He's now with San Francisco.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Wud Bill Cantrell, the man with the leader foot and high over the wind-whipped waters of the Detroit River to win the Detroit Memorial last Saturday.

Aiding Cantrell in his daring feat was an error in timing by Bobby Hayward, crack Canadian driver at the throttle of "Miss Supertest II", and the fact the vicious chop of foam-crested waves on the cluttered course took physical toll of "Supertest" and the potential American Harms worth challenger "Miss Detroit."

Chuck Thompson, driving "Miss Detroit," hit a high wave. Her supercharger blew up and she headed for the pits, out of the race.

BOBBY HAYWARD

"Supertest" who finished with a first and two seconds in the race, was pitted against "Gale V", "Miss U.S. I", "Such Crust" and "Miss Madiana," the former "Nitrogen", in the third race.

Before the end of the first lap it was a two-way battle between "Supertest" and "Gale V." The lead had changed twice as they sped down the back stretch and both bounced high astern between the reach spot in front of the Detroit Yacht Club.

As the Canadian boat hit the water the plywood panelling on the port bow "blew" loose with fragments denting the carburetor and glancing off Hayward, with a grazing 18 in 30 hole that allowed and Supertest was left wallowing in the wake of Gale the rest of the way. In taking the lead on the second lap Hayward loomed in the fastest time three-mile run of the day, 304.721.

In the rush to get back into action and anxious to give a quick test to the repaired boat, Hayward missed out on his timing for the final heat and was forced to settle again for second place in the annual Detroit classic.

Hayward will never make a worse start than he did in the final heat. It was because he lost a minute reading the clocks, perhaps because in a hurried takeoff caused by frantic repairs made to the damaged hull.

"I was in the upper turn when I realized something was wrong," said Hayward. "The other boats were bunched down around the gate getting ready to move. I was a minute behind at that point but by stepping on it and cutting the buoys sharp I was able to make it 20 seconds late. It was all my own fault. I never did anything like that before.'

Hayward said he was not going to shrug it off and forget about it. "No, I'm going to check into the timing to find out how I made that mistake. I wouldn't want to do that again."

Both Hayward and owner Jim Thompson were pleased about the performance of Miss Supertest II, which is important because their task is now to transfer the Rolls-Royce Griffon engine, and some other parts, to "Miss Supertest III" (sliting in a barn on a farm somewhere near London), conduct tests at Sarnia and then on to Pictou to ready for the Harmsworth defence in August.

It is definite you won't see the 34-year-old Bill Cantrell and his Gale V at Pictou. Lee Schoenith, the "$40,000" petrie money owner, said he isn't changing his mind about passing up the Harmsworth in favor of the money-garnished Seattle Regatta.

Incidentally the Thompsons are not down to their last Griffon engine as some people would have you believe. "We have three or four others ready to go," said Jim.

Cantrell and Chuck Thompson in Miss Detroit, fought side by side for three laps at one time, throwing caution to the winds as they raced across white-capped waves. Thompson held a 100-foot lead at the end of the first lap but Cantrell closed the gap and the two battled for the next six miles up to 160 miles an hour.

Cantrell passed Thompson in the upper turn of the fourth lap and held the lead as the boats hurtled down the American shoreline. The battle ended at the end of the straightaway when Miss Detroit's nose dug deeply into a wave. Her nose shot in the air and she came down with a bang. The jolt blew her supercharger and she was through for the day.

But she'll be back, if selected, ready and rarin' to go against Canada's Queen of the Unlimiteds on Prince Edward's Long Reach over the Civic Holiday weekend.

Kidd Seeks Two-Mile Record

TORONTO (CP)—The Canadian two-mile track record is expected to be broken Saturday when Bruce Kidd, Toronto's 17-year-old athletic star, competes against two top runners from the United States at an athletic meet at suburban East York.

In the field will be Hungarian expatriate Laszlo Tabori and Lieut. Max Truex of the U.S. Air Force, two of America's top distance runners.

Kidd's fastest time for the event is eight minutes, 49.1 seconds, which has been bettered by only two men World record-holder Murray Halberg of New Zealand and Tabori. Truex equalled it.

Non-Stop Chisox Zoom Into 4th Spot

Twist Tigers' Tail Twice

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Chicago White Sox, stone cold in the cellar little more than two weeks ago, suddenly are batting it out with power at the top in the American League pennant race.

They moved into fourth place with a 12 - game streak, their longest since 1951, by knocking off the League - leading Detroit Tigers 8-5 and 11-1 before a standing - room crowd of 57,271 at Detroit Tuesday night. That's the longest winning string—and in the biggest crowd — in the major league season.

The sweep made it 19 victories in 20 games for Chicago, now only 1½ games out of first place and within three games of the third - spot Cleveland Indians.

Manager Al Lopez went for broke in the opener, using three starting pitchers. But he relaxed in the nightcap as the White Sox paired a 19 - hit barrage with Juna Pizarro's near shutout and shelved Detroit's lead to a ball game.

BOWSFIELD WINS

The second - place New York Yankees, who could have taken over the lead with a victory, were beaten 7-6 by Los Angeles Angels and southpaw Ted Bowsfield of Penticton, B.C.

Bowsfield (4-2) got the decision despite six innings of erratic work, giving up six runs on six hits. He also committed two errors. He issued one walk and struck out three men.

Washington Senators, after losing 10 straight games, defeated Cleveland 8-3. Baltimore Orioles joined Chicago in fourth place by beating Kansas City Athletics 5-3 and 7-2. Minnesota Twins plunked Boston back to sixth position with a 6-5 and 6-3 sweep over the Red Sox.

The White Sox, working behind Frank Baumann, Don Larsen, Warren Hacker, Billy Pierce and Tuk Lown, won the first game on a two - run homer by Minnie Minoso in the eighth inning off losing reliever Paul Foytack (5-5).

WIELD OUT LEAD

Baumann also homered for Chicago, while Rocky Colavito and Foytack hit home runs for Detroit as the Tigers wiped out the winner.

Every man in the White Sox lineup except Nellie Fox drove in a run in the second game, held the Tigers hitless for 5 1-3 innings and kept them scoreless until the ninth, finished with a five - hitter. Phil Regan (7-3) was the loser.

Eddie Yost, with only two runs batted in all season, drove in four runs against the Yankees and brought the Angels from behind with a winning three - run homer for the Angels, whose first four runs were unearned. The Yanks, scoring three unearned runs, had homers Bob Cerv and Billy Gardner. Bowsfield, who got one hit in two at-bats, was helped by three innings of one - hit, shutout relief by Eli Grba.

Lennie Green hit two homers and drove in five runs for the Senators, pairing with Willie Tasby and Dale Long for consecutive homr runs in the first inning. Ed Yuhas (8-5), marking his 27th birthday, was the winner. Dick Stigman (2-1) was the loser in the eighth defeat in nine games for the Indians.

DROVE IN FOUR RUNS

Marv Throneberry drove in four runs and batted for a pair of solo homers in the opener for the Orioles. Both were off losing reliever Ed Blake (0-2) and the first broke a 3-3 tie in the fifth inning, giving the victory to Milt Pappas (4-3).

Ron Hansen and Jim Gentile homered in the second game, both off Gentile's shots with two runs batted in. Chuck Estrada (5-5) was the winner and Art Ditmar (3-4) the loser.

A two - run single by Zollo Versalles brought the Twins even behind with two out in the eighth inning of the first game and beat Mike Fornieles (3-4). Bob Allison's grand-slam home run bagged the nightcap in the ninth inning against Connie Johnson (3-6). Danny McDevitt (2-2) won the opener in relief, and Pedro Ramos (5-9), pitching a shutout for eight innings, took the second game.

Two Players Tossed Out, One Suspended

Trudeau Motors, leading 4-1 in the top of the fourth, were awarded a Commercial Softball League victory over Lights-foot Construction last night when the Lightfoots lost two players through ejections.

Don Dolan and Don Smith both disputed a decision by umpire Al Kelleher, Dolan is said to have followed Kelleher onto the field, continuing his argument, and made bodily contact with the official.

With Dolan and Smith both out of the game, the Lightfoots did not have enough players to continue and the game went into the record books as a 4-1 win for Trudeau.

At a meeting following the game, Dolan was given a game suspension.

Prior to the incident, Larry Hull of Trudeau and Jim Jones of Lightfoots had given up two hits apiece.

Trudeau scored single runs in the first and second and two in the third. The losers had plated one in the third and Dolan was called out for tagging up too soon to start the fourth-inning trouble.

Doug Murray tripled and "Snaker" Baker doubled for the winners. Don Dalon had a three-bagger and Don Wood a double for Lightfoots.

LIGHTFOOTS: Plane, R. Garvin, Wood, Rowboltham, Dolan, Newsome, Jones, J. Garvin, Caddick, Smith.

TRUDEAUS: B. Wannamaker, F. Murray, Whiting, L. Wannamaker, Baker, D. Murray, Wright, Fox, L. Hull.

Knocked Out in Fourth

Besmanoff Workout For Chuvalo

TORONTO (CP)—George Chuvalo disposed of Willi Besmanoff in spectacular fashion Tuesday night and the magic name of Floyd Patterson was mentioned, although indirectly, in the happy youngster's dressing room after the slaughter.

There's an "outside chance" he may get a shot at Patterson's world heavyweight crown later this year, said matchmaker Jack (Deacon) Allen.

Even allowing for the ring rustiness of his opponent, the 23-year-old Canadian champ looked the sharpest and most aggressive of his career and appeared a sure bid to move up in the world rankings from the fifth contender's spot he now occupies.

He floored the 28-year-old German, now fighting out of New York, six times in the second round before putting him down for keeps at 1:29 of the fourth of a scheduled 10 - rounder at Maple Leaf Gardens.

It was the first time Besmanoff had failed to finish a fight.

HOPES FOR CHAMP

Patterson already has mentioned Chuvalo as a possible opponent and Allen, who plays the role of Chuvalo's "adviser," appeared in figure George's chances by way of a process of elimination.

"I hear Patterson might fight this guy, (Tom) McNeeley in Boston but he's not even ranked," said Allen.

"Patterson won't have anything to do with Sonny Liston (top-ranked contender) or Henry Cooper of England. And Ingemar) Johansson won't get another chance."

Chuvalo, calm and unmarked, would discuss only Besmanoff.

"He was a pretty tough nut," said George.

"I sort of lost count (of the knockdowns), I was sort of disgusted. He kept getting up."

Besmanoff, who at 203½ pounds gave away nine pounds and three inches to the Toronto fighter, was still able to get up as the count reached 10 in the fourth round after taking a roundhouse left to the side of the jaw, although he was clearly dazed and beaten.

The crowd of 5,400 paid an estimated $11,000.

It was Besmanoff's 27th defeat against 66 wins and five draws. Chuvalo, who has lost five and drawn once, got the 16th victory and 11th knockout of his professional career.

The "Bulldog" Back Here Friday Night

That one-man wrecking crew is back again!

Dick "Bulldog" Brower who thrashed Farmer Boy Townsend and almost wrecked the Westlers Union here last week is returning Friday night.

Frank Tunney says he couldn't get a Sherman tank or a company of marines to tangle with the Bulldog so he picked the next best, Man Mountain Campbell.

The 240-pound hill-billy from Kenjucky has a sizeable chunk to "chaw on". This "Bulldog" is rough, tough, nasty and doesn't give a tinker's dam who the opposition is.

He had the faithful in an amazed uproar last Friday with his demolition tactics and if he is in the same amiable frame of mind, the Man Mountain may need more than his overalls to hold the pieces together.

However, if he gets mad enough he may bang a muzzle on the Bulldog. Or he may flatten him with the Big Splasher if the Bulldog will stay put long enough.

Gino Marella and Don Jardine team up in a tag-team battle with Stan Stasiak and Gene Murphy while the Farmer Boy will be back again matching muscles with the rough-house German, "Skull" Nurnberg.

Kenmors Meet Port Hope Tonight

The Belleville Kenmors meet Port Hope tonight at the Fair Grounds in an aura of trumpet bands, free cokes and chips and a galaxy of gate prizes.

The Hopers Harrison who beat the Kenmors 4-0 in their last appearance and touched a no-hitter at Newcastle last Saturday will face Larry Sodden on the mound.

The Hastings and Prince Edward Trumpet Band will be in attendance. Draws for prizes will be made every half inning.

Children under 14 will be admitted free if accompanied by a parent.

Next Sunday afternoon the Kenmors will play an exhibition game here with the Peterborough Juniors, currently leading their district league.

Ken Soden's youngsters are leading the Lakshore Intermediate League and hope to extend a five-game win string tonight at the expense of the Port Hope club.

Whip Cards, Dodgers Lose

Braves Move Up Ladder

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Milwaukee Braves may be on the move, but they'd chasing the first - place Cincinnati Reds legs on a treadmill in the National League pennant race.

With righthander Bob Buhl winning his second straight game and pitching his first shutout of the season in a 3-0 victory over St. Louis Cardinals Tuesday night, the Braves bounced back to .500 for the first time in weeks. It was their seventh success in nine games and moved them within one game of the fourth - place Pittsburgh Pirates. But they are still 9½ games back of Cincinnati.

The Braves are the only club that hasn't lost ground to the Reds over the last 10 days.

The Reds retained a three-game lead over the second-spot Los Angeles Dodgers with a 10-8 decision over Chicago Cubs for their 11th victory in 13 games. Los Angeles beat Pittsburgh 9-3 and San Francisco Giants hammered Philadelphia Phillies 12-5.

Buhl (5-5) shut out the Cardinals on six hits. He walked one man and struck out five while beating Curt Simmon (5-7), who allowed seven hits. A single by Frank Thomas and a double by Roy McMillan gave Milwaukee a second - inning run and Ed Mathews iced the win with his 18th homer of the season, a two - run shot in the sixth inning.

Five of the Cards' hits were singles. The other was a double by Stan Musial on his 10,000th at-bat, a figure topped only by Cobb, Tris Speaker, Honus Wagner and Rabbit Maranville in major league history.

The Reds, after blowing a 3-0 lead, beat the Cubs with five runs in the seventh inning after two were out. Four consecutive pinch hitters reached base in the rally, which was capped by a three - run, pinch triple by Jerry Lynch.

Jay Hook won his first game of the year. Bob Anderson (4-6) lost in relief. Billy Williams, Sammy Taylor and Don Zimmer homered for the Cubs, with Taylor batting low for three runs batted in.

Five hits, one a two - run double by Norm Larker, had the Dodgers a four - run third inning and a 6-1 lead against Pittsburgh starter Bob Friend (6-8). Dick Farrell (6-5) won in relief.

The two clubs swung for 30 hits, 18 by the Dodgers. It was the fourth defeat in five games for the Pirates, who benched shortstop Dick Groat and second baseman Bill Mazeroski, the heroes of last year's pennant and world championship.

Righthander Juan Marichal (5-4) blanked Philadelphia on four hits for eight innings but needed relief in the ninth. The last - place Phils batted around for their five runs in the ninth.

The Giants broke the game open with three runs in the fourth inning. An interference call against catcher Clay Dalrymple of the Phillies enabled one run to score and Tom Haller followed with a two - run double. John Buzhardt (2-9) was the loser.

Defeat Joyces 11-9

Cats Snap Loss String

By GARRY ALEXANDER

The Bobcats, using a completely revised lineup, snapped out of their losing streak last night by outlasting their inter-city rivals, Joyce Real Estate, 11-9 in B. and D. softball action at the Fairgrounds.

The other game scheduled for last night, Cobourg at RCAF was postponed until tonight because of repairs on the Trenton field lighting system. Joyces play at Picton tonight also.

Feelings ran high throughout the loosely-played affair, near fights developing on several occasions, but the runs, hits and errors ran even higher.

The Bobcats spotted Joyces one run in the first then scored seven runs in the second to take a commanding 7-1 lead. The Real Estaters came back with seven runs in the third to lead 8-7. The Cats' bagged singletons in the fourth and fifth but Joyces tied it for the final time, 9-9, in the seventh.

The winners scored twice for the victory in the ninth. Brown walked and Gilmour doubled him to third. John Batchelor singled home the winning run and the insurance tally scored on an error.

Six Bobcat hits, including a two-run homer by Cousins and a two-run single by Brown, plus two errors chased Joyce starter Frank Walker and scored seven runs off Walker and Doug Ellis in the second.

Two walks and Hollis's double bagged another in the fourth while a walk, an error on Green's sacrifice bunt and a fielder's choice play plated the Bobcats' other run.

Austin was hit by a pitch and scored later on Joyce's ground out in the Joyce first frame. In the big third they combined three walks, two errors, Ellis' double and singles by Soule and Faulkner, the latter's with the bases full, to score seven and chase Jim Morton in favor of Green.

Bobby Green was the winning moundsman, not allowing a hit until Carr and Goyer connected for singles in the game-tying seventh. Green gave up three hits in all, struck out seven and walked two, Morton allowed three hits, fanned none and walked two.

Doug Ellis lost in relief, tagged for nine of the 'Cats' 12 hits. He whiffed three and walked six. Walker fanned none and passed one but was hit freely.

Johnny Batchelor led the Bobcats with a double and two singles while Wayne Brown, Pat Gilmour and Doug Hull had two hits apiece. Earl Cousins homered and other hits went o Floyd Crawford, Ted Batchelor, Jim Matheson, "Widge" Adams and Jim Morton.

By PETER FRASER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP)—In the Polar Baseball League they play eight baseball without lights.

"At 11 p.m. any night of June you can sit outside and still read a book by natural light," says Al English, president of the Cranberry Portage Kings, one of the four northern Manitoba entries in the five-team league.

Formed six years ago, the league became interprovincial three years back when Creighton Braves, just across the border in Saskatchewan from Flin Flon, Man., joined.

Other clubs, in from the start, are The Pas Twopees and the Cardinals and Stylers, both from Flin Flon./

It may be stretching things a bit to call it the Polar League. Flin Flon, most northerly point, is 380 miles northwest of Winnipeg and still about 2,400 miles from the North Pole. Cranberry Portage is 25 miles southeast of Flin Flon and The Pas is 70 miles southeast.

PERMANENT FROST

But since the frost never leaves the ground, even in summer, and since it's far enough into the Land of the Midnight Sun so that the sky never really becomes dark at night at this time of year, it has a better claim to the name than any other organized baseball operation.

"Yet," says Bill Egan, Cranberry Portage manager, "we can count on beautiful baseball weather from the May 28 opening game until Labor Day week-end."

The league plays a 15-game schedule.

"We are handicapped by small gate receipts in each of the towns but our expenses are greatly reduced by the unnecessary burden of installing electric lights for night games," English says.

Egan and English, both civilian executives at the RCAF Cranberry Portage station on the Mid-Canada radar line, recalled playing an all-night poker game outdoors on the longest day of the year, June 21, without electric lights.

"And we had no trouble seeing our hands," Egan says, "so baseball players can easily see the ball if the game ends before midnight."

Fan interest in the league is high, unharrassed by television and other distractions common to city dwellers. The talent is local a it's unpaid. Finances come out of the 50 cents paid for a seat in the bleachers and the freewill donations taken from those standing.

Some hockey names have cropped into the lineups this season. They include Mel Pierson, New York Rangers property who played in the Eastern Professional Hockey League last season, Hal Readley, goalie for Brandon Wheat Kings in the Manitoba Junior League, and Vic Poirier with the Maple Leafs of Nelson, B.C.

Ed Mack, Chicago White Sox 18-year-old bonus pitcher, hurled for Cranberry in two exhibition games this season. He was in the area on a fishing trip.

The league was started by air force personnel with financial help from Flin Flon businessmen, who now sponsor radio broadcasts of some games.

League president Gordon Lavdra of Flin Flon foresees possible expansion. Thompson Man., 200 miles northeast of Flin Flon, is so eager for competition it is planning to charter a plane to fly the club in for a game July 1.

The Pas has the power team of the league, taking the championship four times in six years.

Does Not Think Career Will Be Ruined by Role

By BOB THOMAS

STOCKHOLM (AP)—"I hope this role doesn't mean the end of my acting career. Perhaps I should insist on another film artist—not a gunfighter."

This was the smiling comment of Max von Sydow about his assignment to play Jesus in George Stevens' The Greatest Story Ever Told. The legend of H. B. Warner had reached him here in Sweden, but he really didn't seem alarmed.

Warner was Cecil B. deMille's choice to play Jesus in the silent King of Kings. It is firmly a part of Hollywood lore that Warner's career was ruined by the role, because producers and audiences couldn't see him in anything but saintly parts.

In reality, Warner's career decline was due to the showman deMille, who refused to allow the actor to work for years after King of Kings. He was not a versatile performer, but later had a career as a character actor in «Lost Horizon».

It is doubtful that von Sydow would suffer a similar fate. In six Ingmar Bergman movie he has displayed amazing versatility.

The Bergman films brought him to George Stevens' attention.

LIKES APPROACH

His conversations with Stevens were successful.

"I was impressed by his approach to the story," said von Sydow.

"The script will stress the human relationships, especially in regard to Judas."

Von Sydow is a striking figure. He stretches six feet, four —good thing, because he will be playing with such giants as John Wayne. The unusual feature about him is the face. It is long and lean with hollow cheeks and eye sockets, and topped with a cropped patch of white hair.

Jets Split With Leafs, Marlins Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Love to see those Syracuse chiefs, say Charleston Marlins manager Jim Gleeson. The second-place Marlins won their 10th straight game from the eighth-place Chiefs 2-1 Tuesday night and climbed back to within 2½ games of the International League-leading Columbus Jets who split a double-header with Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Jets won the nightcap 7-4 after the Leafs took the opener 3-2. Rimond Virginius edged the Buffalo Bisons 2-1 and Jersey City Jersey beat Rochester Red Wings 8-5.

Tuesday night's one - run defeat was the Chiefs' 24th in 29 decisions and wasted a fine pitching performance by Sadecki who allowed the Marlins only four hits, but one was Bob Herrera's sixth-inning double that broke a 1-1 tie.

Dick Gray's bases-loaded triple in the fourth inning of the nightcap put Columbus ahead to stay as Al Jackson won his third game of the season. Steve Demeter and Ken Hamlin each had two-run homers for Toronto.

Hamlin also drove in the winning run in the opener as Russ Heman, acquired with Hamlin from Los Angeles Angels of the American Association, won his first Don Glendenon and John Powers each homered for the Jets.

Richmond's Jim Bronca last kept Buffalo in the throes of a losing streak with a four-hitter. It marked the fourth straight game—three of them losses—in which the once-powerful Bisons were limited to four hits or fewer.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's two leading jockeys, Calgary's Hugo Dittfach and Avelino Gomez, each won three races at Woodbine Tuesday. Dittfach now has ridden 29 winners at Woodbine's summer meeting while Gomez, emerging from a 10-day lay-off, has won 17.

Gomez won the second race on Wardoline, the fifth on Wise Ruling High and the featured seventh race on Hooker. Gomez booted home photo-finishes at the direct expense of Dittfach in the second and seventh races.

Dittfach captured the third race on Ess Jay, the sixth on Dr. Em Jay and the eighth and final race on Prince Portier.

In the featured Tilbury Purse Hooker, okayed by the Brible Bar Farm, paid $4.90, $3.10 and $2.40 as he ran the 1 1-16 miles in a handy 1:44.4.

W. R. Bastedo's contrary colt Ramblin Wreck, which finished third in the Queen's Plate, worked one mile over the grass course this afternoon in preparation for Saturday's $7,500 Achievement Stakes. He went the distance easily in 1:40.4.

Will Play In Two Divisions

NEW YORK (AP) — Eastern Hockey League owners decided Tuesday to play a 68 - game schedule next season with Clinton, New York, New Haven and Philadelphia in the northern division and Johnstown, Greensboro, Knoxville and Charlotte in the south.

At the same time, league president Tom Lockhart said, overtures seeking a franchise for Jacksonville, Fla., were given until July 31 to assure the league that 75 per cent of the stockholders of the proposed club would be Jacksonville residents.

Importance of Family Doctor In World of Medicine Shown

By CYNTHIA LOWAY

NEW YORK (AP)—The male patient had "an annoying little misery" in his throat. The middle-aged woman complained of cramps under one knee. An old woman wanted something to make her sleep better nights," and the old man with high blood pressure wasn't sticking to his diet.

Dr. A. John Bambara, a general practitioner in Farmington, N.J., sat patiently in his office listening, counseling, diagnosing, prescribing, and incidentally — reassuring his patients.

On his rounds he also penetrated into the rump of a squealing child, slapped breath into the lungs of a new-born infant, his 2,000th delivery in 18 years of practice. It was all part of a routine day in a family doctor's life.

This was the picture of a typical physician presented Tuesday night in an NBC documentary Doctor B. It showed a serious man, tired, overworked and worried because there was so little time left for his own family.

Yet the demands and needs showed the importance of this family man in an expanding world of medicine where the specialist is becoming increasingly important.

Dr. Bambara and his medical colleagues contributed he still had a vital position in protecting health. It was an enlightening and informative hour.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER
GENERAL TENDENCIES:

This is one of those days when you seem to be blocked at every turn in trying to put any practical work across or to get oldsters to add your current upswing, but if you will see that understanding, gentle and short all you can rise above anxieties and be joyous, then the world is soon to be your own particular oyster. SHELLS.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) This is one of those strange days when higher-ups are not in a good mood and you are disappointed. Take it in your stride and work diligently at any labors at hand, then be off to inexpensive delights. P.M. Retire early.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) While you desire to go dashing about with new acquaintances now, this is not the right time for such. Stick to work that needs particular attention immediately and labor diligently so that you insure security. Then help the needy.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Steer clear of that selfish individual who is depressing. Then be sure you do not become jealous of loved ones. Keep busily occupied with your work, making conditions better at home tonight. Enjoy inexpensive pleasures with kin.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) Hard-headed associates could make things unpleasant for you today, if you permit. Avoid them now and attend to personal matters or get busy around your home and you can still make headway now. P.M. Enjoy that new or old easy chair.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Be patient even though work conditions are not what they should be and fellow workers somehow get on your nerves, too. Evening however is fine for being with new friends and getting fine suggestions that will prove lucrative, if you follow.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) An ideal day for recreation, but be very sure you are not overly extravagant, especially where romantic interest is concerned. Take some time, however, to confer with authorities in your field of endeavor first.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) Step out early now and make the necessary contacts that will lead to greater hapiness and success if everyday life. Be very observant and increase esteem in which you are held by others.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 22) Particular care must be taken today while out driving or in any activity whatsoever. Also, use soft tones in conversations. Day is best devoted to aptly getting out reports and other paper work, while evening is good for fun.

Sagittarius Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) It is better you forget financial affairs and worries this day and be out for some needed recreation with a good friend. Do those cultural things you so delight in and come to greater understanding with pal, a kindred spirit.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Since you are not feeling very well and consequently not thinking very clearly, you feel imposed upon, abused. Don't become flustered but go to closest of kin for the suggestions and assistance you need at this time.

Aquaries (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Private anxiety could truly get you behind the eight-ball today, if you allow. Turn this into a stepping-stone instead by getting out early and using that energy on constructive work and calls on the right people. Begin upbrand.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Studying those depressing friends you have now and carry through with any important work or calls that will increase your income appreciably. Set up a more workable budget, too. P.M. Take in that health treatments you need.

If your child is born today he, or she will be one of those children who will learn only by first burning the little fingers, as it were. However, these lessons will never be forgotten and with the years will come real wisdom that will be helpful to others, also. By giving a good education, the imagination will also be increased and then the chart becomes very successful and you, too, will gain as a parent in later life.

BEAUTIFUL PLACE

We have often heard this expression in the past about the property at the corner of Front Street and George and now we have the pleasure to state that the outlook is merely a silent suggestion of the beauty that awaits you. You will find this property real fine apartments and what a delightful prospect for the offer to live in the one in complete privacy and enjoy the views from the others. Do you know that you can own it for as little as $1,000 payment and the balance like rent. This arrangement is the type you live with money coming in and a little bit left over for clothes and groceries. Call us if you are wise — you will come and see. Call us render said his department respects local autonomy and has no intention of forcing its attentions on unwilling municipalities.

MAYORS, REEVES

He said the mayors and reeves association and similar groups will be asked for opinions on the need for fiscal autonomy, on conflict of interest and on equalization of land value assessment.

During business session delegates approved a resolution that the municipalities lobby their members of parliament in electoral groups to convince them that all primary and secondary school teachers should be made a provincial responsibility.

Approval was given a resolution seeking an amendment to the Municipal Franchises Extension Act to give those now entitled only to vote the mayor and aldermen the vote for school trustees and public utilities commissioners, and on all matters except financial matters and by-laws.

The convention adopted a resolution requesting establishment of a special commission to inquire into "the effectiveness of the administration particularly in secondary education."

The resolution was concerned that secondary schools did not prepare those not going on to higher education for entry into business or industry.

The Ottawa proposal for pensions for municipal councillors was rejected as impractical.

HOPES FOR

tolement is reached with the strikers.

"We are going to spend thousands to beat them," he promised.

Zanini told the meeting if Premier Frost officially assured unions the workers would be protected against exploitation, the unions would instruct a return to work.

The extent of the strike expanded Tuesday. Originally starting among immigrants on housing construction projects and spreading to major commercial construction sites in the Metro area, Tuesday night it reached Ontario Hydro and Bell Telephone projects.

Already affected are the Gardiner Expressway, Malden Airport and the Toronto Transit Commission's east-west subway extension.

IS SYMPATHETIC

In urging a resumption of work as a prerequisite of settlement, Premier Frost said he felt a "lot of these men's workers have genuine grievances," but he said he did not like to use the word "exploited," but there was no doubt many workers were being "taken to town."

He added that management had many problems as the workers.

The premier named Carl Goldenberg, a Montreal lawyer with long experience in mediation, to manage construction disputes, as head of his inquiry commission.

Mr. Goldenburg did not share Mr. Frost's optimism that a resolution would be reached within two months. "This is not the kind of thing you can solve the day after tomorrow."

Two Handicapped Persons Have Many Happy Times

HANDICAPPED FRIENDS — Charles Crane, 55, blind and deaf since infancy, and 12-year-old Peter Sinclair, who lost both legs above the knee in a train accident five years ago, have developed a deep bond of friendship and mutual aid through their handicaps. The two live with Mr. and Mrs. G. Roy Philpot of Vancouver and their three sons and daughters. (CP Photo).

VANCOUVER (CP) — Peter Sinclair is 12 years old. He walks on artificial limbs, the result of an accident five years ago in which he lost both his legs above the knee.

Charles Crane is 55, blind, deaf and virtually dumb, the result of an attack of meningitis at the age of nine months.

The two met for the first time four years ago when Peter, embittered by the loss of his legs when trapped beneath a train, arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Roy Philpot in North Burnaby.

Mr. Philpot, a garage mechanic, and Mrs. Philpot, once matron of a Fargo, N.D., institution for the blind, have three sons and a daughter of their own, but decided to care for the youngster, who lost his logger father in an accident when he was five.

LIKE FATHER AND SON

They say they've found the experience of having the two handicapped persons around them has made their own children more humble and thankful for God's goodness to them.

"I introduced Peter to Charles, who has been with us since 1955, and they hit it off straight away," Mrs. Philpot said. "They became almost like father and son but the bond between them went even deeper than that. They seemed to get strength, courage and confidence from each other."

Within a few days of moving into his new home, Peter was learning the two-handed sign language used to communicate with Mr. Crane. He picked up the hand - to - hand alphabet quickly and, when anybody wants to talk with Charles now, Peter generally is there to interpret.

After each question, Mr. Crane, who has learned to use a typewriter with accuracy and speed, hands Peter slips of paper with his answers typewritten on them.

In an interview conducted in this manner in his two-room study in the basement of the Philpot home, he said his only income is a $74 monthly blind pension.

PLAY CHESS

"I have many difficulties, but I am happy, especially when I am with Peter," he typed out. "He has made it easy for me to live for the future and has helped me no end.

"I don't know what I would do without him."

Each night, using sign language, Peter reads poems to Mr. Crane and frequently they play chess.

"When anything really sensational happens in the world, I read newspaper stories to Charlie," Peter said. "One was the Russian space flight."

When he is alone, Mr. Crane spends most of his time reading or transcribing Braille books, which he receives from the National Institute for the Blind in England. He has more than 1,000 works, all in Braille, in his study.

Mr. Crane said he hopes someday to visit England and Europe. Peter intends to become a surgeon.

"Girls be a good one," said Mr. Crane, "He has the heart for it."

REBUFF FARM COMMUNES

VIENNA (Reuters) — More than 700 Hungarians were arrested last year following increased opposition to farm collectivization, it was disclosed today from the arrest of a member of the Hungarian Communist party Politburo, in the party's ideological magazine Tarsadalmi Szemle.

COMMONS PLAYS

of Canadian control — which he did not specify.

Mr. Fleming, after unsuccessfully seeking details: "I thank the honorable member for his answer. It is quite clear he has no solution."

Mr. Bourque: "May I say to the minister that I have a lot of solutions that I will be glad to give him if, as and when he calls me."

Mr Fleming: "The honorable member will not give his solutions to the House of Commons."

DIRECTORS CHICKEN

A budget provision for a duty of five cents a pound on eviscerated chickens imported from the U.S. was worked into the backs of a number of MPs from all parties.

One chicken - flavored exchange began when Hazen Campbell (PC — Stormont) accused Lionel Chevrier, former Liberal transport minister and former St. Lawrence Seaway president, of "piling up a smokescreen around the damage he had done to Stormont riding by locating seaway locks on the U.S. side of the border. Cornwall, in the constituency, is Mr. Chevrier's birthplace, and Mr. Campbell said.

"When I was a boy down on the farm, if a trusted dog killed a chicken we tied it around the neck until it rotted. The honorable member for Laurier today has a chicken tied around his neck called Cornwall Seaway Locks."

"Is it eviscerated?" asked Paul Martin (L—Essex East).

"It is eviscerated," Mr. Campbell replied. "The people of Stormont and the people of Laurier see it every time they look at him. He is a desolate man."

PROPOSES SCALE

Mr. Campbell proposed a sliding scale of unemployment insurance benefits. When unemployment was high benefits should be high to maintain purchasing power. When jobs were plentiful, insurance payments should be low to induce people to look for work.

Murdo Martin (CCF — Timmins) said the Canadian economy is on "the Diefenbaker hop—one step forward and two back." The government had an impressive score in measures to prop up business but not in ones to help the individual taxpayer.

THEY HAD THE ANSWERS — This trio of Grade XIII students from Quinte Secondary School had all the best answers in the 1961 Canadian Question Bee contest held in Kingston during the past winter season, and are seen with handsome Encyclopaedia Canadiana Trophy as Eastern Ontario winners. They won a 10-volume encyclopaedia for their school and received personal copies of Bartlett's Quotations. Holding the trophy are Geoffrey Cliffe-Phillips and Sherril Beeby. Third member of the team, Alastair Rickard, now job-hunting in Winnipeg, is seen in separate photo.

WEST BERLIN

which has gained ground recently, figures it would be better to propose negotiations.

Prime Minister Macmillan told the House of Commons Tuesday that Britain is willing to negotiate with Russia on Germany and central European security, but will not tolerate any infringement of the freedom of West Berlin or Western access to the city of 2,500,000.

Any such talks "must be negotiations and not asking us to submit to blackmail," Macmillan said.

In Paris, a French foreign ministry spokesman said the Western powers including West Germany will tell the Russians next week that they will not budge from their present rights in Berlin. For the West "there is no Berlin problem," the spokesman said, "but there is a situation of serious crisis provoked by Soviet initiatives."

President Walter Ulbricht of the East German Republic in a speech Tuesday served notice that East Germany wants to sit in on any East-West talks about Berlin and future allied rights in the city.

REAFFIRMS POSITION

The New York Herald Tribune reported that President Kennedy, using Khrushchev's son-in-law as a messenger, has sent word to the Soviet premier that what he said in Vienna remains the U.S. position on all major East-West issues, including Berlin.

The newspaper said the president's message was conveyed via Aleksei Adzhubei, editor of the government newspaper Izvestia and son-in-law of Khrushchev, who called on the president at the White House Tuesday before leaving for Moscow.

At Vienna, Kennedy told Khrushchev the West would not be pushed out of Berlin.

U.S. Vice-President Lyndon Johnson said it again Tuesday and U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk insisted the status of West Berlin cannot be changed by unilateral Soviet action.

OLD BOUNDARY

The Mason-Dixon line, named after surveyors Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, stretches 233 miles along the Maryland-Pennsylvania border.

Kennedy Calls Security Council To Study Berlin

Partial Mobilization By U.S. Seen Possible

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The pot in Berlin is boiling again.

President Kennedy called a meeting of his National Security Council for today (3:30 p.m. EDT) to discuss steps to meet any emergency in the Berlin crisis.

The NSC is the chief United States security planning group and comprises the President, senior diplomatic, military, intelligence and civilian defence advisers, including the secretaries of state and defence.

The White House session was expected to review contingency planning which the U.S., together with Britain and France, would put into motion if Russia tried to implement its Berlin demands with military force or the blockading of western access routes to West Berlin.

The U.S. views the developing Berlin crisis as an extremely dangerous situation, and President Kennedy has made it clear that a great deal of thought is being given to steps that might have to be taken to convince Soviet Premier Khrushchev of the West's determination to stay in West Berlin.

President Kennedy declined at his press conference Wednesday to outline the steps under study in Washington.

However, there was general agreement in diplomatic quarters that Khrushchev might push the Berlin crisis to the point where the United States would have to consider partial mobilization and the dispatch of more troops to Europe.

The president said Wednesday that no plan for partial mobilization of forces over Berlin had been placed before him at the present time.

Speaking a few hours after Khrushchev made a Kremlin address on Berlin, Kennedy warned that Soviet leader that Germany is no Laos and that the West has vital interests in the Contigent.

He urged Khrushchev not to make the "grave mistake" of under-estimating Western determination to protect the freedom of West Berlin and withstand pressure to recognize the East German Communist regime.

WARNS WEST

Khrushchev warned the West against mobilization and said threats of mobilization over West Berlin would not stop the Soviet Union from signing a separate peace treaty with East Germany.

But Khrushchev did not re-

FLEMING LIKES TO ANSWER HIS OPPOSITION

Works Minister Gives Some Help

OTTAWA (CP)—Finance Minister Fleming was said more than once that he delights in answering his opposition, Wednesday he was in his element.

In a rapid fire commons speech he castigated the Liberal Opposition for its sad, failing to produce ideas or proposals in the budget debate — for having "avoided a sug gested solutions like the plague."

Mr. Fleming asked rhetorically:

"Is this country going to the pow-wows; is it heading for blue ruin, as the honorable members opposite often tell us, for want of need for lack of confidence in the people of this country?"

Then he gave his answer:

Since the June 20 budget the Canadian dollar has moved to a discount of three per cent in terms of the United States dollar. Financial markets were stronger. Short-, medium- and long-term Canadian bonds were stronger and interest yields had declined appreciably.

SAYS THREW OUT

Mr. Fleming said the Liberal government's move toward a lower exchange rate on the Canadian dollar in 1950 was unpopular—what was said at their January 31, 1950, meeting when they favored similar action.

Yet, he said, economist Walter Gordon, then vice chairman of the 1956 royal commission on Canada's economic prospects and chairman of the federal rally's resolutions committee — had advocated the lower exchange rate.

"This is a scandalous way to use a very important ally," he lectured the Liberals.

Mr. Fleming also took issue with a Liberal contention that there was unemployment in Canada because

A Liberal motion for non-confidence in the government was defeated 139 to 40 in budget debate.

The motion said the budget presented June 20 by Finance Minister Fleming failed to provide adequate tax relief, and is inadequate to expand production and jobs needed to ensure growth of the economy.

Finance Minister Fleming said there is no justification for the claims of some bankers that they will have to increase bread prices to cover a five - cent - a - bushel increase in wheat prices.

External Affairs Minister Green hinted that Canada may forefuse to lift further Portuguese requests for military aid to Portugal's colonial policy in Angola, Africa.

Postmaster - General William Hamilton said the postage rate on American periodicals mailed in Canada will be increased starting Aug. 1.

U.S. Puts Atomic Battery in Orbit As One Rocket Lifts 3 Satellites

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP)—The United States has hurled its first atomic battery into space as part of a spectacular aerial triple play in which a rocket placed three satellites in orbit around the earth.

The Russians never have announced using a nuclear device in their satellites and the U.S. success would appear to give American scientists a significant boost over Russia in the race to harness atomic power for space exploration.

A Thor - Able - Star rocket blasted off from Cape Canaveral Wednesday night and the satellites stacked in its nose like a telescoop ice cream cone.

Both stages of the 50-foot rocket clicked with drill-like precision and fired the orbital package into orbit. Quickly spring devices kicked the payloads apart and they continued to circle the globe on separate paths nearly 600 miles above the earth.

Officials reported that the atomic battery was functioning and that clear signals were being transmitted by all three packages.

Former Bank Director Did Not Notify Finance Ministry Of Coyne's Pension Change

TORONTO (CP) — A former director of the Bank of Canada Wednesday night made public a letter to Finance Minister Fleming stating he did not inform the minister that special pension provisions were being planned for the bank's governor and deputy governor six months before they were approved.

J. T. Bryden of Toronto, who submitted his resignation April 4 for health reasons, said, however, that a representative of the deputy finance minister was present at the directors' meeting Feb. 15, 1960, when the controversial provisions were approved.

Also in a conversation with the minister more than a year later, Bryden added, Mr. Fleming was "surprised to learn of this and I was also surprised that you did not know of it."

Mayors and Reeves Reject Municipal Code of Ethics

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — After hearing repeated references to civic maladministration during its annual convention, the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves went on to the intended meeting Wednesday by rejecting a proposal for a municipal code of ethics.

The convention earlier in the day had been told by Mayor Jim Carter, assistant deputy minister of municipal affairs, that "there are some situations in Ontario, to my personal knowledge, that should have been made public by probes."

On Tuesday Municipal Affairs Minister Warrender remarked that while municipal scandals have occurred in only five or six of Ontario's 900-odd municipalities, these few incidents have been enough to give the impression that political morality in Ontario is at a low ebb.

The code of ethics proposal, submitted by York Township, one of the municipalities concerned in a bribery scandal, declared there had been an interesting crop of scandals and judicial inquiries among municipal governments.

However, all delegates present at the final meeting, with the exception of York Township Councillor Phyllis White, rejected the proposal, giving tacit support to a declaration by Scarborough Reeve Albert Campbell that the Municipal Act already has all the adequate safeguards of ethics.

The York proposal would have had a board of ethics to hear charges of corruption or misconduct levelled by ratepayers.

Mr. Carter told delegates that elected officials should take a good long look at their activities to be certain they are within the guidelines of existing legislation. He urged that municipalities consult the attorney-general if there were any doubts.

He declared, however, that his department has been going to become "a Gestapo, snooping people" at municipal bodies.

In business sessions Wednesday the convention adopted an Arnprior resolution that council members who are professional engineers be forbidden by legislation to disclose their interest in any municipal matters directly or indirectly involving their clients.

British Warships Said Headed Toward Kuwait

TEHRAN, Iran (Reuters) — British warships were reported heading for Kuwait today amid reports that the oil-rich sheikdom and the adjoining Persian Gulf.

Reports from Kuwait said two British Hunter jets expected to arrive Friday to guard the oil refinery at Ahmadi after an abortive plot by rebels to capture it.

The reports said Saudi Arabian troops arrived in Kuwait today and are patrolling the borders with Iraq. Other troops are expected from Jordan Friday.

Meanwhile, British troops also were reported to have fired on Iranian motor launches taking part in the Kuwait.

LONDON (AP)—The British aircraft carrier HMS Bulwark is steaming toward the Persian Gulf with 600 royal marine commandos, an admiralty spokesman announced. The spokesman said the carrier left Singapore Wednesday warships are on the move in the Far East.

Montreal Policeman Injured Trying to Dispose of Bomb

MONTREAL (CP) — A time-bomb exploded on the porch of Police Constable Gerard Plouffe as he tried to dispose of it Wednesday night.

Plouffe was dragging it off the porch of a house belonging to Mrs. Germaine Mongeau, when Frank has interests in Aldo's Bar and Mongeau's restaurant.

The powerful nitroglycerine bomb cracked the house's stone steps, damaged the front door in front of the house, and cracked panes in houses nearby and across the street.

Sgt. Plouffe was released from hospital after cuts and bruises were removed from his forehead.

The bomb incident was the latest in a violent series involving night clubs and their colorful characters. Within the last five days, two men have been shot and brutally, one was shot and wounded, and another reported being shot at six times.

"The violence is following a pattern," Detective William Fitzpatrick, assistant chief of detectives, said today. Until now, gangsters have dominated the stories of an underworld war.

Constable James Wood, about 3:55 a.m., and found a box on the porch. He dragged down a passing police car. Police found a small alarm clock and a cardboard box.

Montreal West police ordered Scarborough Beach Park cleared out of the house and asked Montreal police to send Sgt. Plouffe.

Sgt. Plouffe arrived about 6 p.m., looked at the contents of the box, and started dragging the box off the porch. It exploded.

Scanzano said he did not know why police would put a bomb on his doorstep.

COTC HAS PROFIT

OTTAWA (CP)—A record net profit of $1,343,751 is reported for the fiscal year ended March 31 by the Canadian Overseas Telecommunication Corp. The annual report was tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Transport Minister Balcer and marks the 11th profit in as many years for the Crown agency.

COMMONS BODY ASKS EFFICIENCY PROBE OF CBC

Guaranteed Income Suggestion Ignored

OTTAWA (CP) — An inquiry into the CBC's $100,000,000 a year operations by a team of efficiency experts was urged Wednesday by the final report of the Commons Broadcasting committee.

Ignored by the report was the CBC's own plea for a five-year guaranteed income of public funds in an amount fixed by law—a proposal that would end annual government control of CBC spending.

Both committee steps had been urged by Finance Minister Maxwell Henderson "in the light of apprehension over the manner in which the corporation spends its money."

Coupled with this move by the Conservative - dominated committee was a recommendation for a shake-up of the CBC board of directors under which corporation executives would be taken off the policy - making body—namely, President J. Alphonse Ouimet and Vice - President Capt. W. E. S. Briggs.

SHOULD EXPAND

The board would be expanded to 15 members from 11 and the chairman should be named by the government, the committee said.

At present the directors are appointed by the government but, have elected their own chairman, Dr. Davidson Dunton of Halifax — despite opposition protests that Parliament is headed the job of choosing the chairman.

J. W. Pickersgill (L — Beauvista - Twillingate), a committee member, said outside the meeting that the Broadcasting Act of 1958 was "dead" when the report apparently was written, and the recommendations are "totally unacceptable" to the Liberal party.

He said the Conservative government has been "clearly approached" by the independence for the CBC and, in addition to this, the committee now sought to give the corporation a chairman who would be "a servant" of the government.

ATTENTION TO DETAIL

"It is an attempt—whether it was inspired by the government or not, I don't know—to destroy further the independence of the CBC," Mr. Pickersgill said. "We feel that it needs to be strengthened, not weakened."

Douglas Fisher (CCF — Port Arthur), speaking later in the Commons debate, said he thought the report was the work of certain Conservatives who "interfere whose attitude toward the CBC is completely destructive."

The report is said to destroy the CBC as a public corporation. He said the CCF believes they want to see the corporation sold or dismembered, possibly by the sale of its programming or distribution system — "in other words, wiped out."

Mr. Ouimet had done a "magnificent job" in building the service for more than three months, he said, and "the reward was a punch in the nose."

DETROIT (CP) — Cannon of the national guard roared 21 times Wednesday to open the International Freedom Festival, a week-long birthday celebrations of Canada and the United States. Kennedy Uses Probe As Device To Avoid A-Tests

Voluntary Suspension Extended Indefinitely

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Kennedy apparently has decided to extend the voluntary suspension of nuclear explosions for an indefinite period, using a method that may block criticism at home by those who have been urging him to resume underground tests.

Faced with the need of a decision following Russian rejection of Western proposals for an effective test ban treaty, Kennedy has decided to set up a scientific panel of scientists to determine whether Russia has been cheating on her own self-imposed moratorium and if so, what Russia would gain from such tests.

There is no indication the scientists will be able to come up with any more information than that already available to Western experts on the scientific and intelligence apparatus. But the move gives him reason to delay the U.S. resumption of the tests, a delay that could go on indefinitely since the president set no deadline on the new study.

Douglas, Argue Will Not Stage Bitter Battle

REGINA (CP)—Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan has decided to fight Hazen Argue for national leadership of the New Party, but there are signs it won't be a knock-down, drag-out battle.

Mr. Douglas, CCF premier since 1944, announced Wednesday he will place his name in the stand for the new post against that of Mr. Argue, 40-year-old Assiniboia MP and CCF parliamentary leader.

But Mr. Douglas said he will not campaign for the job. "I have always said I would not seek the mantle of the man seeks the job," the 57-year-old premier said.

In Vancouver, Mr. Argue declared: "I am convinced more and more per less than I now do and my plans will not be influenced by Mr. Douglas' decision."

Mr. Douglas said the issues at stake are so vital that everything I can to ensure the successful launching of the new party."

The party, formed by the CCF and Canadian Labor Congress, will stage its founding convention in Ottawa July 31 to Aug. 4. The leadership will be settled then.

Laotian Parley Session off, No Speaker

GENEVA (Reuters)—The 14-country conference here on how to solve the problems of Laos cancelled its scheduled 26th general session today for lack of a speaker.

The cancellation was announced when none of the delegates had put his name down for the 26th session.

The announcement came after five of the 14 countries studied ways to solve the knotty problem of Laos' future government commission.

Trial Witnesses Reluctant to Identify Men

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto taxi driver testified Wednesday he was told by a man in a crowed outside the Toronto Maple Mattress Co. to mind his own business and not complain or he might get an iron bar over his head.

Edward DeMarco, testifying at the trial of four men charged with assaulting gambler Max Shapiro, said he had started to fused to take Frank Marchildon, 30, and Jack Weaver, 32, to hospital and was watching police cruisers arrive at the tavern when the unknown man spoke to him.

Marchildon and Weaver, he said, had run out of the tavern and jumped into his cab, ordering him to drive to a hospital. He was about to do so when a crowd burst out of the tavern and ordered him to stop.

DeMarco said one of the men in the back seat pushed him across the head and ordered him to drive on. When he refused, they left him in the car. He said he could not identify who hit him.

Other witnesses were equally reluctant to identify any of the four accused as having directly involved in the brawl in which Bluestein suffered severe head wounds and Marchildon a punched jaw.

Wayne Russell, 20, employed as a bouncer and doorman at the tavern, testified a third accused man, John Papalia, 37, of Hamilton, was holding a 10-inch billy a few feet from Bluestein. Bluestein was being struck repeatedly by other men with billies, but said he did not see Papalia strike Bluestein.

Russell said he tried to intervene in the fight but was grabbed by the arm and ordered by Papalia to stay out of it.

Mrs. Eva Anderson, whose checkroom was several feet away from the door of the beating, was declared a hostile witness by Magistrate Joseph Addison after she testified she remembered little about the incident and could not identify any of the men involved.

Weathermen Blame Wind Shift For Wrong June Predictions

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto weathermen said Wednesday many of their June predictions went wrong because of a last minute shift in the course of the Gulf Stream, which is 1,000 miles away.

John Knox, chief forecaster for the transport department said June's "erratic" weather puzzled the experts. He predicted a hot June, but soon arrived in the morning several times, he said.

In a bid to regain their reputation weathermen called for a warm and humid July 1 week-end as a prelude to a long warm trend.

June's temperatures so far were 3.3 degrees below normal, at a 65.5 mean. The sun shone 213 hours, 8 below normal.

The jet stream, an avenue of wind 300 miles wide and two miles deep blowing between 200 and 300 miles an hour, has shifted drastically, Mr. Knox said.

"It has bulged away northward, to Great Slave Lake," he said. "It has gone over the Yukon, dipped sharply southward over Hudson Bay and Northwestern Ontario, across the Great Lakes into the southeastern United States, where, cool temperatures have also prevailed."

The shift brought rain to Ontario. Toronto received 3.38 inches, about a third more than normal.

Lake Mazinaw Will Be Used For Record Dive

Members of the Quinte Aqua Divers will be attempting a record 300-foot dive in the waters of Lake Mazinaw in the near future, club officials said this morning. If the dive is successful it may possibly set a Canadian record for depth.

As yet the divers who will make the dive have not been selected but will undoubtedly be chosen from the senior divers and instructors of the club.

The technique and equipment to be used for the dive is under scrutiny in order to minimize to the greatest possible degree the chance of mishap or danger to the divers.

The depth to which the divers descend will be ascertained through the use of a rope marked at regular intervals with plastic discs, which the divers have to mark with their initials or a pre-arranged symbol to prove they reached that particular depth.

At the 200-foot depth the local divers expect to experience a decrease in temperature of between 35 and 40 degrees and a pressure of 150 pounds per square inch or approximately 141 tons bear down on the submerged body. The operation will be undertaken with the fullest safety measures possible. Other divers will be stationed at various depths above those attempting to dive to depth to render assistance in the event of a mishap.

The purpose of the dive is to ascertain whether or not it is possible to dive to this level without difficulty in the event of an emergency as well as to ascertain a complete body standard. The former will be of assistance in determining the club's capabilities when called on to do emergency dives in the event of a water accident.

Residents Inconvenienced By Rebuilding of Highway

The old saying is that "you can't stop progress," but when the progress means bringing a stretch of county road up to highway standard it means residents along the roadway.

This re-adjustment is now being experienced by eight different families along the five-mile stretch of Hastings county road north from Ivanhoe, which is to be rebuilt this year under the provincial road development scheme.

Eight houses along the right-of-way are either being moved or are being torn down, while three farmers' barns are also under the wrecking hammer.

The house moving and barn wrecking is now underway in preparation for the reconstruction program soon to be started. The contract for the road rebuilding job has now been let.

During the winter months brushing along the widened right of way was done by county employees while this spring new culverts are being erected.

Hydro and telephone construction men are now busy moving pole lines back in preparation for the regrading.

The property on which house had to be moved 50 feet from its former position took the public asphalical viewpoint.

"It's been a bit of inconvenience and we'll have to put up with dust for a year or so, but when it is finished we will have a good road," she said.

Motorists Asked To Be Careful Over Holiday

With the season's heaviest volume of traffic expected on the highways over the Dominion Day holiday this weekend, provincial police today called for co-operation of all drivers and motorists in their efforts to keep accidents at a minimum.

Throughout the Belleville area as in all provincial police districts, highway will have a full 24-hour patrol during the long holiday weekend.

Bowling Notes

Two rinks of mixed doubles journeyed to Brighton on Wednesday for the tournament staged by that club and one of them came home with first prize. Mrs. Grace Clapp and Wally Lavergne had the high income gross score of 44 plus 2, while Mrs. Mary Hulin and Sam Nelson of Brighton scored second high with Mr. and Mrs. Seaman, also of Brighton in the third spot. Monty Call and his partner from Kingston won the two-game high, while Mr. and Mrs. William Fuller of Trenton serve one-game high winner. Mrs. Lil Masaro and Claude Tice only managed to win one game and still have not mastered the greens in that town.

The Brighton Club had 26 rings in competition from Trenton, Kingston, Madoc, Campbellford, Belleville and the host club. The greens were tricky but fast and the rinks getting to the draw first were generally the winners. As usual the hospitality of the host club was superb and a real good day of bowling was had by all.

Premier May Summon Heads Striking Unions

By RICHARD O'REGAN

TORONTO (CP) — Premier Frost may summon heads of striking construction unions here unless there is an immediate return to work on the city's University Avenue subway and other commercial projects.

The subway project said there will be no return to work until a settlement is reached with each of the building trades involved.

The premier was requested Wednesday to summon the union leaders to a delegation from the Toronto Builders' Exchange which placed its complaints before him and summoned the Ontario cabinet.

Earlier a meeting of management contractors in the housing field approved settlement terms worked out by a management committee and union negotiators June 26.

A decision to present the proposals to bricklayers and laborers of the housing field Thursday was revoked at the last minute when the terms were disclosed in the press.

The Masonry Contractors Association and the bricklayers and laborers employed by the 600 contractors represent the largest group among more than 6,000 workers affected by the work stoppage.

Leonard Eden, executive vice-president of the association, said the contractors have agreed to accept findings of a board of arbitrators established June 20 by Frost to adjudicate grievances concerning contract violations.

The contractors have agreed to a rate of $2 an hour for bricklayers and $2.05 for laborers effective July 31, if there is immediate acceptance of the offer and a return to work. The existing agreements signed last August called for a $2.05 rate for bricklayers last March but contractors later said they could not pay it in face of competition from non-union contractors.

Boy Is Buried Police Probing Tips in Slaying

BUFFALO N.Y. (AP)—Three-year-old Andy Ashley reached his last home Wednesday beneath the big maples of a small town cemetery.

Police scanned the small gathering of people in the nearby village of Le Roy on the chance that a mental aberration might have driven his killer to the funeral. They saw nothing.

Through a report by four women driving through Dale-wave Park last Friday afternoon, investigators began to piece together the sequence of events leading to Andy's death.

The youngster's body was found Sunday afternoon in a park lake, his feet and hands bound by women's stockings. Police believe he was murdered by a mentally disturbed woman who kidnapped two other youngsters in the same neighborhood.

In the earlier cases, the children were left on a railroad embankment, bound and gagged but unharmed.

Investigators said four women driving through the park Friday reported seeing a woman walking toward the lake carrying a child wrapped in a coat, or blanket. Andy was reported missing about 4 p.m. An autopsy placed the time of death by drowning between 4:30 and 5 p.m.

INVESTIGATE TIPS

Among the tips investigated Wednesday was one from a car rental agency in Erie, Pa., reporting that a woman answering the description of the murderess rented a car there Friday. She identified herself as a former teacher of mentally retarded children in Buffalo.

Neither the woman nor the car has been seen since.

Another lead took police to Niagara Falls, N.Y., to question a woman from Guelph, Ont., who also resembled descriptions of the women they are investigators said, however, that the woman could not be the one at home in Guelph at the time of the other two abductions — one last week and another two months ago. They did not identify her.

Drought Threat To Milk Suppiy At Winnipeg

EDMONTON (CP)—Effects of severe drought conditions on the Prairies are beginning to reach beyond the farm gate and dairy-der fields and fodder short cattle.

First hint of new areas affected came Wednesday from Winnipeg, where milk producers have expressed concern they may be forced out of business.

The producers operate on contracts which they must fill or lose. Milk-producing herds must, therefore, be maintained at strength and supplies of feed at a premium, the producers is bleak.

Farmers could take little heart from weather forecasts, indicating more dry days. The weather which over the last few months has burned southern Prairie crops to the brink of disaster.

Widely-scattered thunderstorms were tentatively forecast for tonight, but the parched land will need steady downpours to recover.

Cattle ranchers were running desperately short of feed.

Crop officials said the condition of cattle receiving indirect farmers are culling herds of less desirable stock.

TRENTON RISES

The prospect of a crop failure also has brought increased market activity. An estimated 3,000,000 bushels of flax were traded on the Winnipeg Grain Exchange Wednesday, about 1,000,000 more than usually changes hands.

The Saskatchewan Farmer's Union predicted the province's wheat yield likely will fall between the figures for the provincial record years, when 12.2 and 12.6 bushels an acre were gleaned.

Alberta is in a somewhat better position than the other prairie provinces, with only the southern part of the province suffering severe drought.

At Ottawa Wednesday the bureau of statistics' crop report said immediate rains are needed urgently to "halt rapid and widespread crop losses" on the Prairies.

Giant Yukon, New Hangar Will Be on Display

Crowned as queen of the RCAF Transport Command fleet just two weeks ago in a colorful ceremony just outside her home, the huge newly-converted Canadair Hangar at Trenton, the giant CC-106 Yukon will make her first official public appearance on Saturday, July 1, at RCAF Station Trenton. Also making their Air Force Day debut at Trenton are the other recent additions to Air Transport Command featuring the C-130H Hercules, the CC-109 Cosmopolitan, the DA-16 Albatross and the Caribou.

Over four thousand personnel at RCAF Station Trenton and No. 6 Repair Depot Trenton are engaged in arranging ground displays and preparing facilities to accommodate the expected crowd which is anticipated this year. No effort is being spared to ensure that sufficient soft-drink stands, parking space, baby-sitting yards, washroom facilities and camera requirements are available to accommodate everyone with a minimum of delay.

Numerous exhibits and displays will be set up for the benefit of the ages and sexes alike. Bring along the family and make an entertaining afternoon at RCAF Trenton Saturday, Dominion Day, July 1.

Bobby Hull Will Be Best Hockey Player Says Gallivan

PICTON — Sport is not to be measured necessarily in terms of titles, honor, or recreation or as being able to keep youngsters out of mischief, but it is part of education because education encompasses the whole man, his mental, spiritual and physical aspects and needs, declared Lieut.-Colonel Sidney Gallivan, "the voice of the Montreal Canadiens", in an address at a father and son banquet at St. Gregory's Church, Tuesday night.

He asked the parents if sport is making an all-round contribution to the education of their sons and daughters.

The speaker explored the fact that many youth tend to give up every educational opportunity to pursue sport. He cautioned that the odds are stacked against one making a professional career in sport. "Of the 2,000 minor hockey players, only one will make the NHL," he said.

Sport does not become an end in itself under the proper leadership, the speaker said. Many times parents leave leadership to coaches who only count wins. If parents are interested in their children receiving the proper leadership in school, they should be interested in them being properly led in sport. With the right kind of leadership, sport provides an excellent means of teaching disciplines, sacrifice and recognition of the rights of others. Those who give proper leadership should go the thanks of all, for they make a real contribution to the welfare of the community, church and country, he said.

Dr. Fred Murphy introduced the speaker who answered questions for an hour.

The most exciting of the 473 games he has broadcast was an overtime game with Chicago in the Stanley Cup 1961; next year's winner—"always go with the champs, so Chicago again, now that Montreal has lost Harvey.

On league expansion—Maybe in ten years. NHL business is terrific at present.

On what happened to Montreal in playoffs—Bobby Hull came into his own.

Best hockey players—Gordie Howe, then best player of the mechanics of hockey; the next will be Bobby Hull; the most exciting, Henri Richard; the best goalie, Glen Hall; best centre, Beliveau.

Why Tax Second-Hand Goods?

"Another problem facing treasury officials is the sale of goods, perhaps a second-hand refrigerator or radio, to another private individual"—Canadian Press report on Ontario's new sales tax which goes into effect Sept. 1.

Few people like a sales tax—it is inconvenient for almost everybody except the tax collector. Still, most people, we think, were quickly reconciled to the institution of a retail sales tax in Ontario, after the Ontario budget announced plans to impose such a tax. In this reaction, Ontario residents were being realistic. They realized that the Ontario government has to obtain money somewhere to provide the numerous services which people demand.

Those who will pay the piper, though, were entitled to expect the Government would be similarly realistic in selecting the tune and we cannot escape the conviction that the government is failing in this regard when it proposes to collect taxes on second-hand goods sold by private individuals.

It may be argued, with sound logic, that it would be unfair to collect a sales tax on second-hand goods sold by dealers and then fail to tax similar goods made by private people not normally in the business. It seems to us, though, that the more reasonable conclusion to be reached from this argument is no second-hand goods should be subject to sales tax, rather than that all second-hand goods should be taxed.

P. T. Clark, comptroller of revenue, says the tax branch will make periodic checks of newspaper advertisements to determine whether the tax has been paid. This, though, hardly seems like a satisfactory solution. At best, a very few will pay the penalty for tax evasion. Many, a great many, will escape.

The plain truth is the average man will see no reason why he should pay such a tax, for the very good reason that it is obviously beyond the capabilities of the government to make an everybody pays such a tax. If Jimmie sells his out-grown skates to Johnny, his pal, how is the tax branch at Queen's Park going to learn about it? If the government ever did attempt to collect taxes on such transactions, the sales tax would be the most unpopular, and most frequently broken, law since prohibition. Moreover, in a great many instances, where sales of second-hand goods involve several items, rather than a single article, the decision to sell has been forced by financial hardship or by a death in the family forcing it to alter its way of life. These are not the circumstances in which taxes should be imposed.

Why Pick Stevenson?

Adlai Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, has returned from an 18-day tour of ten Latin American countries.

He has told a National Press Club luncheon at Washington that he found the U.S. had suffered a "black eye" in consulting, arming and encouraging the Cuban exiles in their unsuccessful attempt to overthrow Castro's regime.

This conclusion is not surprising. It is what he might have been expected to discover.

It is interesting to speculate, though, why Stevenson was chosen for the fact-finding tour.

According to one report, he himself was partly to blame for the failure of the Cuban expedition. It has been reported that Stevenson, on hearing of the original proposal to provide U.S. air cover for the invading Cubans, threatened to resign if the U.S. participated in the invasion in this overt manner.

Much of the comment which we have heard and read from the U.S. has made it quite plain that what bothers many Americans is not that the expedition was made, with U.S. backing, but that it failed.

Stevenson, though, is almost certain to have been in disagreement with the whole plan, and not merely disappointed at the lack of success of the invading forces.

This must have been known to President Kennedy. Why, then, was Stevenson chosen to tour the Latin American countries? It can be argued that the Kennedy administration, knowing Stevenson's views and believing these views would also be known in Latin American countries, at least by government officials there, hoped that he would receive a better reception because of them. But it is just as reasonable to argue that his selection is indicative of President Kennedy and his advisers swinging over to Stevenson's viewpoint. There have even been some suggestions the performance of Dean Rusk as Secretary of State has fallen short of the high hopes placed in him on his appointment. Could it be that Stevenson's star is in the ascendant and that his courageous stand against the Cuban adventure, far from damaging his prestige, has enhanced it with Kennedy?

Mr. K: Peter or Lenin?

Manchester Guardian

What does Mr. Khrushchev really believe? We know that he says he believes in the eventual triumph of world communism, but in what sense does he believe it? Is he belief merely a form of abstraction, to be brought out on festive occasions only? Or is it a positive guide to policy—something to be practised as well as preached? Are the Western commentators tend to the first view. They see Mr. Khrushchev as a solid, practical Bolshevik, tempered and given to sudden flashfires, but not at all a revolutionary in the sense that Lenin and even Stalin were.

Mr. Lowenthal has distinguished in an article by Mr. Richard Lowenthal in the current issue of "Encounter." Mr. Khrushchev's power, he points out, rests in the Communist party; and the party's power rests in the last instance on its ideology. "The ideological belief in world revolution," he writes, "is not just an old-fashioned cast of the millennium... it is an essential part of the legitimation for continuing the monopoly of the ruling party inside the Soviet Union."

* * *

Hence, Mr. Khrushchev's brinkmanship in the Congo, in the United Nations, and in the Geneva talks on Laos. The facts is not just the result of pressure by the Chinese or by the hardsin the Kremlin; it is a considered policy, aimed at securing a decisive objective. Mr. Khrushchev, in Mr. Lowenthal's view, does not think the balance of power has swung to the Soviet Union, that the West will never go to war, or unleash a major war against him, and that therefore he can make world revolution whenever the opportunity arises.

Mr. Lowenthal's argument makes Soviet policy during the last year seem coherent and therefore comprehensible. Even more attractive, it removes all doubts about what the West's future ought to be; for if Mr. Khrushchev is really bent on winning world domination in the shortest possible time, it is obviously futile to seek agreement with him. If Mr. Lowenthal is right (though he himself does not seem to realize where his argument leads) then the statesmen can abandon the faithful effort to reach a settlement of the Berlin problem, to negotiate a ban on nuclear tests, and to get disarmament on agenda to see reason in the United Nations.

But is Mr. Lowenthal right? The vital link in his argument is his claim that Mr. Khrushchev's belief in world revolution" is all "essential part of the legitimation" of the Soviet Communist Party's power. If this means anything (and it may not), it presumably means that if the Soviet Communist Party ceased to believe in world revolution its power would no longer be acceptable. This is most improbable. The mass of ordinary Russians do not want world revolution; and if the Communist Party gave up its messianic conviction its power would presumably grow more acceptable to the people, not less. It may, of course, be true that belief in world revolution is particularly essential to the party members, and that without it they would lose their self-confidence and their sense of purpose. No doubt they like to repeat the old incantations at the appropriate times, and no doubt they like to think themselves that they are the heirs of the Old Bolsheviks. But that does not mean that they believe the incantations any more than it means that they would fit into the Central Committee of today.

Indeed, if Mr. Lowenthal is right about the inner motivation of the Soviet Union must be a great deal more revolutionary than Stalin was. For there is no doubt that under Stalin world revolution took a back place to the immediate interests of the Soviet State—as thousands of foreign Communists learned to their cost. But if Stalin cared nothing for world revolution, why should his successors? Moreover, if Mr. Lowenthal's argument may be right. But so long as it rests on mere assertion, with no more assertion, with no facts to support it, like to be reluctant to jettison the view that Mr. Khrushchev is much closer to Peter the Great than to Lenin.

Most Things In Nature Are Useful

By SIDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices:

Everyone believes, secretly or openly, that his life would be more sinister than himself who he is presently living, while the mess the world is in; and this delusion is the Devil's greatest victory.

Why are all the women in the ads smiling so insipidly that they look like idiots? It is perfectly evident even to a child that they are trying to look gay and commercial, and the very opposite of what gives a smile its only charm — spontaneity.

The way a fool commonly justifies his ignorance is by calling himself an "optimist" — like the heavy loser who is still in the game at 3a.m. long after the big winners have gathered their loot and departed.

It is the people who are dissatisfied with themselves who go for psychiatric help; but it is unfortunately the case that terribly satisfied with themselves who are in greater need of it.

The whole point of scholarship is to learn when ignorance is pointless — a lesson too many scholars never absorb.

The fortune-telling us are always busy doing things for the less fortunate — but only through formal organizations, where no personal contamination is involved.

No legend has persisted longer in Anglo-Saxon countries than that the French are an extremely "romantic" people, whereas in truth they are the most prosaic about love in all its aspects — from the other hand believe like romantic adolescents, smiggering about sex and idealizing it at the same time, as if we are forever bumping our heads against the wall of our inconsistencies.

The grievous fault of the ordinary man is that he doesn't speak up when he should; and this epicurean fault of the intellectual is that he often speaks up when he shouldn't. (The reason he can't seem to compromise or to say the right thing, and the latter can't bear to lose an opportunity to say a hurtful thing.)

There is little that is useless in nature. Even the most noxious provides employment for life forms, and the most destructive the time of men who might otherwise be engaged in some rascality.

The first great rule of life is to accept reality, but the first good unless we observe the second great rule of life, which is to find out what's wrong in our essential self, and to get rid of the evil there. Only the good unless we observe the third great rule of life, which consists in paying absolutely no attention to the great rules of life. (I just wanted to see if I could write a paragraph in Zen philosophy.)

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

THE NEW MINISTER

A congregation seeking a pastor is both inspiring and amusing. It is inspiring because it represents a group of believers looking for someone who will be their leader in the things pertaining to God.

But congregations are frequently amusing in the requirements they set for the new pastor. He must be highly educated yet a plain simple preacher. He must be a good administrator, yet a pastor who spends every afternoon calling—He must have the sick on his mind at all times; yet never neglect his healthy. And if after he accepts a call he preaches plain, simple sermons, he is often regarded as tiresome; if he preaches deep theological sermons, he is accused of preaching over the heads of his hearers.

His wife must be simple in her tastes else she will set a bad example. But if she is too simple in her tastes then she is plain and uninteresting.

Every congregation wants a pulpit orator. He must be young enough to please youth, old enough to be mature in his judgment, but not so old that the congregation will be stuck with him until retirement.

Of course the Bishop being whom the Pulpit Committee starts out to secure simply doesn't exist, or if he does be is with the legion of angles in a higher order of life. Earthly congregations just have to get along as best they can with limited, faltering stumbling Christian believers like themselves who have had special training in theology and related subjects.

Stiletto Heels

Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph

We are happy to see where the extreme fashion of stiletto heels and knife-pointed shoes for milady are on the way out. The return of sanity in footwear design — although there are hints from Paris that someone wants to produce a shoe that would make women's feet look like those of a duck—is a welcome relief both to the shoes of man and the foot of women.

MPs Will Get 'Rec' Centre

Hamilton Spectator

"We are far from healthy," Mr. Andrew Davis, MP for Saint-Denis, told the House of Commons last week, during discussion of public works estimates for a recreation centre for members of Parliament. "One has only to look around the House to see how many are caused by lack of exercise," he said.

This may be fair political comment, but we think Mr. Davis should have addressed Mr. Howard Green, minister for external affairs; the Hon. J. W. Pickersgill, minister of transportation; and the Hon. Donald Fleming Prime Minister Diefenbaker's counsel. They belong to the Conservatives (hungry for so many years, and still leaner) and their paths are not easy ones for whom strenuous exercise might have some usefulness but also the danger of virtual evaporation.

However the slime will come when Mr. Coyne and Mr. Gordon Churchill, who have also endorsed for them, their roles as political punching bags and sparring partners. They have consent to the real leather ones in their new recreation centre. The new spartan military regime in South Korea, we read, has developed exercise periods for its desk-bound legislators, so we may be witnessing an Ottawa-Seoul axis on the physical fitness theme.

We also have read that Dr. Carl Hill, medical health officer for North York, is urging people to go around barefoot as a treatment for fallen arches. We were about to write that Mr. Coyne should take off their shoes on Parliament Hill, but we recall of that prehistoric figure, once beloved by caricaturists, a P.E.I. African chief wearing such formal garments as a top hat, frock coat and vest, but no shoes. With the surge of nationalism, Mr. Coyne, if he is Oxford or the City College of New York.

This in turn is reminiscent of a description given by a big political organizer in Hamilton, homespun Mr. Wardell Wilkie, once a T.M. presidential candidate: "The bereted lawyer from Wall Street." But the late Mr. Wilkie was not without a paunch — which leaves us no alternative but to wish our MPs, including Mr. Dennis, the best of luck with their new punching bags and rowing machines.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The lunch bill came to $4.20 for the three of us, and as I sat back, not picking up the tab, I noticed a $5 bill on the table for the waitress.

"Now, look, Jim," said my fellow guest, "half a dollar would be ample. Ten per cent."

"Listen," said my fellow Scot, "I'm not made that way. I'll up the buck and leave fifty cents and you keep the change."

"And I'll match you," said my fellow guest.

As we got our hats, my fellow guest pursued the subject. "This wonderful tipping business is a racket, he said "but it is people like you, throwing your weight around, who make it all the worse."

"Actually," said our host, "I don't tip. I just like to be a hero my good fortune. Maybe I am compensating for the luck that flows. If it comes to me, I've got to pass it on, or it won't come to me either."

"Listen," said my fellow guest, "I'm waiting for it!"

"I was lucky enough," said our host, "to be in a position where I'm free, and lucky enough to be able and healthy and equipped enough to work for it."

We tipped the hat girl seventy-five cents for three hats and the boy who has the concession said my fellow guest, "will get that!"

It is well to give ourselves a "good talking to" periodically.

A man and his wife may be worth, failure, success, or puzzled situation, better than anything else.

He may decide to arise from his bed, with the shiftless uselessness of his mistakes, and determine to be all of which he is capable. Then, with that decision, a flood of happy and marvelous energies are released!

William James says that there are in everyone potential reforms of activity that actually are shunted out from use, "therefore creating "imperfect vitality."

All of us could be caught at times with out minds off the thing at hand that might bring

LOADER — SATO

A lovely candlelight wedding was solemnized in Bridge Street United Church, on Saturday, June 17th, at 2.00 p.m. when Mary Sato, of Belleville R.R. 3, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Sato, became the bride of Albert James Loader, also of Belleville R.R. 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Loader. The Reverend Mitchell M. Devie, pastor of the church, officiated before a background of lighted candelabra, tall white standards of white gladioli, and yellow shasta mums. White satin bows marked the guest pews.

Mr. S. Alec Gordon, church organist, rendered the traditional wedding music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiantly lovely in her bridal gown of white French silk fashioned with fitted bodice having a pointed neckline and short sleeves. The bodice was accented with medallions of re-embroidered lace encrusted with seed pearls, which also adorned the chapel train gracefull skirt. Her finger-tip butterfly veil of silk illusion tulle was caught to a white organza rose set with pearls and she carried a bouquet of white gardenias interlaced with white stephanotis and ivy.

She was attended by Miss Kay McGowan, of Belleville, as maid of honor, and by Miss Ann Loader, of Trenton, and Miss Esther Sato, of Belleville R.R. 3, sister of the bride, as bridesmaid. All were gowned in mauve peau de soie featuring tulip skirts, with molded bodices, having scooped necklines, and short sleeves. Their headdresses were large white roses with face veils. White accessories and bouquets of white Shasta mums completed their costumes.

Miss Lois Tani, of Montreal, cousin of the bride, was a small little flower girl, in a short white organza frock, with organza floral headpiece. She carried a white basket of white Shasta mums.

Mr. Roy Loader of Belleville R.R. 3, brother of the bridegroom, was groomsman, while Messrs. Bruce Lowery and Ronald Loader, brother of the bridegroom, were ushers.

The reception was held at "Montrose," home of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Graham, Trent Rd.

The guests were received by the bride's mother, who wore a sheath gown of blue-grey lace and chiffon with white accessories and corsage of pink feathered carnations. The bridegroom's mother, in a rose linen sheath gown, with matching jacket, white accessories and corsage of white feathered carnations, assisted in the receiving line.

The bride's table was appointed with a beautiful white Madeira lace cloth, and centred with a three-tier wedding cake topped with a cluster of white mums and maidenhair fern, and misted about the base with white tulle and flowers. Four tall white candles added a delightful nuptial accent.

For travelling, the bride chose a Chanel suit of burnt orange, with white accessories, and corsage of white gardenias.

Those attending were present from Belleville, Montreal, Trenton, Toronto, and Bridgetown, Ontario.

The bride, previous to her marriage, was entertained at miscellaneous showers at the home of Mrs. Robert Harner, Belleville, and also at the home of Mrs. McGowan, Belleville, with Miss Kay McGowan as hostess.

MAESTAG, Wales (CP)—An invasion of women armed with sticks and shovels resulted when a cosmetics manufacturer dumped two truckloads of rejected goods on the town dump. They swarmed all over, gathering the scent powder and lipsticks. Local health officials had to be on the job because of the number of rats in the refuse.

"Lines on Life"

By Dr. Stuart R. Rosenberg

Man must become more fully human. We speak of making machinery more efficient, of building things that are functional of studying scientifically, of making things more progressive. "Efficient," "functional," "scientific," and "progressive," these are the hall-marks of our 20th century vocabulary. But the individual human being always will be the individual human being. You may seek to improve or to change society, but if you have not been concerned with the individual lives which make up society, you have neglected the heart of the matter. You may scientifically endeavor to prolong life, but again you are faced with the same challenge. Will the life you have succeeded in prolonging become more fully human?

For this reason, we must add still another dimension to our 20th century catalogue of concerns. We must certainly continue to seek efficiently, functionalism, and the application of the scientific method in order to make life progressive; yet all these efforts must be measured against the unsolved problem of human life. It is unsolved because we pay too little attention to it. It remains a riddle because we have not as yet sought to find the answers with the determination we have used in tunnelling mountains, bridging oceans, and spanning continents.

As the Second World War was coming to an end, a series of cartoons illumining the problem appeared in a magazine. The first depicted a man tuning in from America to Asia via telephone-television. He could speak, listen, and observe what was going on, all at the same time. The caption read, "After the war we will be able to see and hear what is going on all over the world."

A second cartoon showed a man depositing a single nugget of coal on a great ocean liner as it was about to leave for the high seas. The caption read, "After the war we will be able to send more power our ships for hundreds of thousands of miles with the atomic energy contained in a single nugget of coal."

A third showed a man in a combined airplane-automobile, about to leave from his garage for a quick trip to England. This heading read, "Tell the folks at the office I will be back from London in time for lunch."

The real point of this series was made in the concluding cartoon. This was a picture of a man surrounded by a variety of modern gadgets, yet looking very unhappy. Obviously, he should have been filled with joy at the fact that his modern power available to him. The caption read, "But what is it you going to do about him, after the war?" What are you going to do about him?

Our human needs go far beyond our knowledge and skill and the technical advances of material progress. Our real need, in spite of these things is to become more fully human.

Jesus has been defined as man's search for God. Some have even spoken of God's quest for man, but it is not another way. The highest goal of religion should be in man's search for himself; man seeking to find the meaning of the divine plan for his life.

And in this search you can be guided by three principles. Recognize how much you must depend upon others, that you may become yourself more dependable.

Seek to find the meaning of your own individuality, that you may truly become free and independent.

Above all, seek to relate your life of all. When you become one with all others, you become one with yourself.

Then, you may earn God's precious gift, which is to know the meaning of being fully human.

TRIPLE WEDDING

Three sisters married in a triple ceremony at Cagness Sur-mer, France, departed for honeymoons to Spain, Italy and Northern France.

Abner M. — Why can't she be satisfied just being a wife and mother?

Viola M. — It's not enough. I want to be me, Viola, too.

Abner M. — Ever since she read some book about self-fulfilment, there's no living with Viola any more. She talks about her wasted years. She services women who have a business or a big job. She blames me for moving her up here, 100 miles from the big city where all the "advantages" are.

She's 37, we've been married 15 years, and our three children are all in junior high and high school. There's plenty for Viola to do around here, keeping a nice home, entertaining our friends and watching over the kids. But she pooh-poohs all that and says she still has hopes of "amounting to something."

* * *

Viola M. — It's not any one book I read, or any one magazine or newspaper article, not even "something I ate," which gets blamed for most disturbances. It's me.

Ever since my marriage, I've felt that there's a real me somewhere deep inside that isn't getting any out. Maybe it's ambition. As time went on and the children came along, I did what was supposed to, both in duty and pleasure. But I still have the feeling that I want more, that everything up to now is merely the postponement.

I want Abner to understand and sympathize. I want him to help me work it out, not to satisfy my longings as an individual, not just a wife.

The Council — Abner is lucky. For every wife like Viola who comes right out with it and says, "I was robbed," there are a dozen others who just crabby over-zealous or oozing smotherlove without knowing why. They express their frustrations in the children because they don't know how else to unload and explode their inner frustrations at being denied self-hood!

They don't realize the havoc wrought through the ages by this unsatisfied Ego of Women. But there may be a few valuable Ph. D., dissertations, still to be written on how history might have been affected if Eve, Helen of Troy, Hamlet's mother and all the other angry, ignored females had been treated differently by their families and society. "Cherchez la femme," when the female is squelched, for an explanation of nagging, "silver cords," gossip and other behavioral problems.

We advise Abner to play along with Viola's whim a bit longer. Help Viola find her personal safety valve. Is she ploughing-under her talents? Is she looking for a real challenge or satisfaction in domesticity? If not, her chagrin is affecting Abner and the children, no matter how much they smile and cover gracefully she "goes through the motions" of household work. Maybe it's one day, a bump tomorrow or a tantrum the next day may have to be spread out, both painful.

People are, after all, like tea kettles — full of steam. What happens? If you clamp down the lid, the steam gets out via the spout. Cover the spout and the lid flies off. Viola's restless enough, out in her garden baby, it'll be time to go via the spout — via "accepted channels" — such as studies, new skills, or possibly a job.

SPEAKING of MANNERS

PATRICIA LEWIS

LIKE MOTHER, LIKE CHILD

Show me a child who hates the dentist, and I'll show you a mother who raves at the hairdresser and rants at the cleaning woman. Obviously, she's not very polite to her children, either.

When a youngster is rude and unruly, very probably he's aping the behavior of one parent or both. Parents who react violently to irritation have children who do the same thing.

Like charity, courtesy and good manners should begin at home. Learn to keep a grip on your temper. A mother who throws tantrums can't command the attention when junior acts up.

Extend to your children the same courtesy you expect from them. Knock on the door of a child's room before entering. He'll learn to respect your privacy as well. Let him have the floor at times, and pay attention to what he says. Parents who constantly hush a child produce a chatterbox who's always interrupting others to get the attention he craves.

Respect a child's personal belongings. What may be junk to you may be a rocket to Mars in the imaginative pre-schooler. Instead of consigning odds and ends to the scrap heap, rig up a hanging box to keep them in neat order. Mesh bags that once contained oranges and grapefruit make wonderful storage containers and are colorful when filled with books on a playroom wall.

Let your children see that you observe the niceties within the family. When "Please" and "Pardon me" are constantly in use, they quickly are absorbed into the most immature vocabulary.

QUESTION BOX

Question — A former classmate who lives in another city sent a card announcing the birth of a son. Do I have to acknowledge it by sending the baby a gift? — Mrs. A. B., Toronto, Ont.

Answer — If you see each other fairly often, or keep up a regular correspondence, then it would be nice to send some thing small, like a wrapper or baby robe. However, a gift is not at all necessary. A note saying how happy you are about the event would do just as well.

A Dominion Day Barbecue

By Mary Moore

The following letter sparked this idea for a July 1st cookout, "Dear Mary: . . . like to hear news of your family. We live in a farm house and two daughters 9, 3 and 1. Plan to use a barbecue this summer and wonder if it would be too much trouble for you to send some simple recipes." — Doreen M.

The most recipe I am giving for Doreen's and your benefit is for a cooked-all-in-one-pot meal complete calling for chicken and calling

CHICKEN JAMBALAYA

3 lb. fryer, cut in pieces, 1-4 lb. ham, cubed, 2 tablespoons vegetable oil, 1 cup chopped green pepper (1 large), 1 cup chopped onion (1 large) 2 cloves garlic, minced, 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce, 1-4 teaspoon thyme, 1-4 teaspoon tabasco, 1-4 teaspoon black pepper, 2 cups hot water, 1-1-3 cups uncooked rice.

Brown chicken and ham in oil. Remove meat. Saute pepper, onion, and garlic 5 minutes over low heat. Add seasonings and water. Simmer 10 minutes. Add rice and meat. Cover and cook over low heat 35 minutes. Fluff rice with fork and cook 5 minutes longer. Makes 6 or 8 servings.

SEA FOOD JAMBALAYA

(This is more expensive but delicious). Follow directions for Chicken Jambalaya — except for substitute 13 oz. canned or frozen oysters, thawed and 1 lb. peeled, cooked shrimps for chicken.

(Note: On July 1st Marianne and Herbie and family and Pete and Margy and I are all converging on our summer cottage and will have the above for our first cookout supper there. You will hear more about our cottage meals as I cook them).

TREASURE BUNS

1 lb. lean hamburg or ground beef, 2 tablespoons pet. 1 medium onion, chopped, 1-3 cup chopped green pepper (optional), 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon dry mustard, 1-2 cup undiluted mushroom or tomato soup, 1 cup grated Cheddar cheese, 2 teaspoon Worchestershire sauce, 1 teaspoon MSG (accent).

Fry first four ingredients together slowly until meat loses its red color. Add remaining ingredients and stir and cook 5 minutes longer. Split 8 hamburg or finger rolls and remove about 2 tablespoons bread crumbs from the centre of each. Spread with soft butter or margarine and prepared mustard. Fill generously with the beef mixture. Wrap each wrap individually in aluminum foil and heat buns through on the grill for 5 or 10 minutes, turning at halftime.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Reques's Budget He p

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—Could you assist me in drawing up a housekeeping budget?

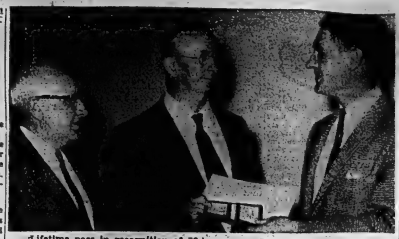
I have two school-age children. The rental of ourapartment takes a quarter of my husband's salary, and I would like to know what percentage, in your opinion, I should allow for food bills, clothing, holiday saving, etc.?—ELEANOR.

DEAR DORIS:—Stretching the almighty dollar to cover the needs of a family is a common concern; and helping to plan finances is one of the big jobs done by social agencies.

Because standards of living differ with the family, there is no rule of thumb. A family in the sticks may need a car; another couple find owning their home has priority. A dietitian-homemaker puts emphasis on food; a music lover or reader, od a hi-fi or books. So experts differ in even arriving at percentages. Taken by and large, the following may help your thinking:

Economists used to say housing should not exceed 20 per cent of income, but in 1961, in Canada, 25 per cent is more realistic for city dwellers. Food budgets vary from 15 per cent, for the high-income family, to as much as 45 per cent for the low-income, many-membered family; with an average of around 25 to 35 per cent.

Home operation—light, heat, general upkeep—calls for 10 to 15 per cent of income. Clothing seems to use up about 15 per cent, with the greater part of this spent on growing children's clothes. Transportation has to be planned for, whether this means family car or bus-travel. The figure is around six per cent.



Added to this, the economists say we should plan for medical care, recreation (including holidays), furniture, personal needs, reading, education.

Anything left? This depends on how your individual needs have juggled these figures. Certainly there should be savings set aside for emergencies and for old age (some perhaps in the form of insurance.)

In planning this last it is well to note that the average person lives through three financially depressed periods in a lifetime: (1) When he has just left school and taken his first job; (2) When he has just married, set up home and begun a family, with all the obligations these involve, and (3) When he has reached retirement and no longer has income from work.

Lifetime pass in recognition of 50 years' service with the CNR is seen being received by former chief despatcher, Lionel Train (centre) with area manager J. A. Pollock, making the presentation. On the left is Alex Wilson, operations manager at Belleville.

A half century of service with the railway is also recognized for Ed Schrieder, boilermaker with the local motive power division. He is seen (centre) receiving lifetime pass from area manager J. A. Pollock. K. E. Hunt, general superintendent of equipment is on the left.

Two 50-Year Employees Given Life Passes on CNR

One hundred years service with The Canadian National Railways was recognized at the North Station Wednesday afternoon as two long term employes were presented with lifetime passes for themselves and their wives.

Honored in the brief ceremony at the office of J.A. Pollock, Area Manager, were Lionel Train, former chief dispatcher at Belleville, now on holidays prior to retirement and Ed Schrieder, boiley maker with the motive power department of Belleville.

Mr. Train started with the railway in June 1911, became a station operator in 1914 and was made despatcher in 1917. He came to Belleville from Lindsay in 1926, was made night chief despatcher in 1931 and day chief despatcher in 1938. He retries officially at the end of June.

HAS YEAR TO GO

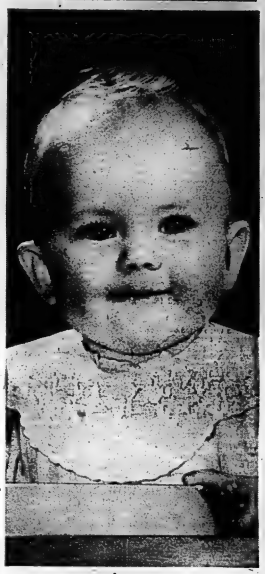
Mr. Schrieder started with the railway at Belleville when he was but 15 years of age, did sweeping and other chores for a few weeks and then elevated to the role of boilermaker's helper.

Now there are no more boilers to make or tend with the CNR, but, as railway officials put it, the boilermaker classification covers many other jobs with the railway than maintenance of boilers.

Mr. Schrieder still has better than a year to go before retirement.

Yesterday both men were formally presented with their lifetime passes on the CNR by area manager, J. A. Pollock, who congratulated them for their long service with CN

"Fifty years is a long time to be with the railway", he said. "I'll never make it myself".



Local area officials, including operations manager Alex Wilson and K. E. Hunt, general superintendent of equipment were on hand for the presentations.

Alta. Social Credit Leader Never Lost Evangelistic Zeal He Had as a Youth

By DAVE BOWES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — Wherever he bobs up—Ottawa, Edmonton or Ethiopia—Robert E. Thompson rejects the "git up and go" spirit that has driven him for most of his 47 years.

A leading contender for the national Social Credit leadership, he has never lost the evangelistic zeal that first showed itself when he was a youth in central Alberta, near the cradle of the Canadian Social Credit movement.

As a 20-year-old he caught the fervor whipped up by the late premier William Aberhard and was a hustling party organizer in the years that swept Social Credit into power in Alberta.

As president of the Social Credit Association of Canada, he is tidying up details for the July 4-7 convention in Ottawa which will name a successor to Solon Low who retired last year.

If Bob Thompson is chosen, it's certain he will drive hard to move Social Credit out of the wings and back onto the federal political stage.

It's equally certain that with Dr. Thompson at the party's head its position will be well to the right of centre. For, as Prof. John A. Irving of the University of Toronto, chronicler of Social Credit history, he said, Barry Goldwater, the ultra-conservative U.S. senator, "may be characterized as the Robert Thompson of the United States."

One of four announced contenders for the leadership—others are former MPs George Hahn of New Westminster, B.C., Real Caouette of Rouyn, Que., and Alex B. Patterson of New Westminster, B.C.—Mr. Thompson has been boosted by Premier E. C. Manning.

Mr. Manning, who along with a British Columbia's Premier W. A. C. Bennett, has ruled himself out of the race, told a Red Deer, Alta., nomination meeting that chose Dr. Thompson as a federal candidate:

"I hope the convention will ask your candidate, Dr. Thompson to assume the leadership of the Canadian Social Credit party."

In the 12 months since he resumed active work with the organization, Bob Thompson has flitted across the country pumping new life into constituency organizations and spreading the Social Credit word from platform and on radio and television.

Between his first organizational efforts in the 1930s and his present drive, he raced through another two or three careers.

He attended Calgary Normal School, the University of British Columbia and Palmer Chiropractic School in Davenport, Iowa, from which he received a doctor of chiropractic degree, and Bob Jones University at Greenville, S.C., which awarded him a degree of Bachelor of Science in educational administration.

During the next 12 years he travelled widely on special assignments for the Ethiopian government. In the six years before returning to Red Deer in 1958 he headed a leprosy mission to African tribes.

Five of the Thompsons' eight children were born in Africa.

Recently he was appointed president of the Canadian Memorial Chiropractic College in Toronto which has embarked on a $1,500,000 expansion program.

Not long ago he said: "I believe the Social Credit organization is moving faster on a national basis than it ever has."

If it is, it's partly because Robert Norman Thompson has been prodding it.

Thinks Senator Paid in Cash To Evade Tax

MONTREAL (CP)—The president of Jean Talon Hospital, Dr. George Hori, said Wednesday income tax purposes may have prompted Senator Henri Courtemanche to take payment for legal services to the hospital in cash rather than by cheque at times.

The doctor, after asking that nothing he said be used against him in future, spent most of the day testifying before a provincial board of inquiry looking into the hospital's affairs.

Judge Victor Chabot of St. Hyacinthe, the board chairman, promised protection on condition that Dr. Hori told the truth.

Dr. Hori said there never was a question of giving a 10-per-cent commission to Senator Courtemanche, former secretary of state in the federal Progressive Conservative cabinet.

He was asked by commission lawyer Jerome Choquette if there was any relation between a $10,000 payment to the senator in May, 1956, and a $100,000 provincial grant received by the hospital two months earlier, and between a $5,000 payment October, 1956, the same month a $20,000 grant was received.

WERE LEGAL FEES?

"Plain coincidence," the doctor replied. "The payments were legal fees for professional services."

Mr. Choquette also questioned him about financing of a $52,000 house Senator Courtemanche bought in April, 1959.

Dr. Hori said he remembered few of the details, but he had financed a $20,000 mortgage on the house and made a $10,000 down payment on it when the senator said he was short of funds.

Senator Courtemanche testified last week that he had a $10,000 cheque in his possession for the down payment but was told Dr. Hori had taken care of it.

George Langley of Ottawa, manager of the bank the senator mentioned in his testimony, testified Wednesday that Senator Courtemanche had $3,837 in his account the day the house was bought.

Dr. Hori testified that he approached Senator Courtemanche with the proposal, of obtaining a public hospital charter at a particularly difficult period for his hospital.

Dr. Hori said he didn't know at the time, that government grants to hospitals existed.

At one stage, Judge Chabot said: "This witness has an extraordinary lack of memory. The number of direct answers he has given is almost nil."

About 100,000 chickens were killed in efforts to stamp out a contagion spreading through poultry farms in Mexico in 1961, it is announced.

KENNEDY CALLS

peat his previous assertion that Russia would plish through such a treaty before the end of this year.

Kennedy made it plain that the U.S. stood ready to negotiate with Russia on the question of Germany and Berlin on the basis of self-determination of the German people — and Europe.

The New York Times reported that Kennedy administration sources said the president had opened a policy drive to engage the Russians on a broad range of East-West differences, rather than the isolated one in Berlin.

"This policy campaign will entail domestic measures, including civil defence tasks that will alert the American people to the possible consequences of a showdown. International measures are also planned to impress the Communists with the "credibility" of the Western power resources."

There were ominous signs of things to come in the announcement by the East Germans Wednesday that they would impose restrictions on foreign air traffic across their territory, beginning Aug. 1.

A new decree makes it mandatory for foreign aircraft to register with an East German air safety centre on entering and leaving the state's territory. Foreign aircraft with radios will have to get permission to fly across East Germany.

President Charles de Gaulle urged French unity in a speech at Verdun, where the French fought the Germans in three wars.

"We are surrounded by a dangerous world. There is a menace from the east. Is it genuine, or is it bluff? Probably a little of both. We must face up to it, to avoid the storm."

sult in a bread-price increase.

"Every economist says so," interjected William M. Benidickson (L — Kenora - Rainy River).

"Plain, unadulterated nonsense," retorted Mr. Fleming.

The minister said the Canadian wheat board got its wheat selling price up five cents a bushel following the budget because otherwise, if the wheat price had not been brought in line with the new exchange value, wheat would have been offered on world markets at a lower price "undesirable" result.

Any major reduction in the overseas price of Canadian wheat would have been met by competitors, Mr. Fleming said.

COULD ABSORB

He added that he understands the wheat board price increase will raise the price of a 24-ounce loaf of bred by one-eighth or one-ninth of a cent. The bakeries could absorb that without passing it on to the consumer.

Mr. Fleming spoke before the Commons rejected, on a vote of 139 to 40, a Liberal non-confidence motion accusing the government of restrictive budget measures inadequate to expand production and jobs, "despite the burdens imposed by a fifth consecutive deficit of a record size."

The minister also blasted the Liberals for saying the budget proposals were inflationary and for painting a picture of the government turning on the printing presses."

"Every honorable member opposite knows in his heart that there is no thought on the part of this government of extending any countenance whatever to inflation or turning on the printing presses," Mr. Fleming said.

MENTIONS DEFICIT

He had a helping hand from Works Minister Walker.

What of the $850,000,000 forecast deficit? Mr. Walker said in effect.

The Conservative government since taking office in 1957 had increased old - age pensions by $607,000,000 a year from $379,000,000 and payments to the provinces go $1,478,000,000 from $630,0.

He said:

"If we had kept the even tenor of the Liberals' ways over the 22-year period and denied Canadians the social justice payments to which they were entitled, instead of having a deficit of $65,000,000 we would be budgeting for a surplus of $250,000,000 this year."

FORMER BANK

change in these provisions six months before the directors acted in February, 1960, and you have a letter from Mr. Bryden to prove it, which you persist in concealing."

Mr. Bryden's letter says:

"The letter I addressed to you on April 7, 1961, gives in chronological sequence the meetings and discussions relating to both salaries and pensions which led up to the approval by the board of amendments to the pension fund by-law. I continue to regard this letter as a confidential communication. At Mr. Coyne's request I subsequently sent a copy of this letter to him in his capacity as governor of the bank, since I was still technically a director of the bank at the date the letter was written.

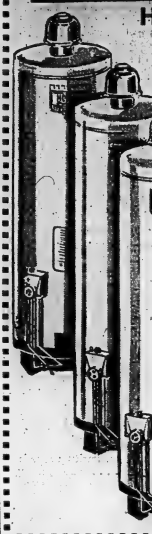
"I had two conversations with you with respect to pensions. The first was in August, 1960, when in a very casual conversation I said that a subcommittee of the board was giving consideration to the bank's pension fund and to salaries. No reference was made to the special provisions dealing with the pensions of the governor and deputy governor and in fact no details at all were mentioned because, at that time, the board's subcommittee had barely started to work.

MENTIONED ACTION

"The second conversation with you was on March 21, 1961, when I mentioned in another connection, the action taken by the board on February 15, 1960, with regard to the special pension provisions for the governor and deputy governor. You were surprised to learn of this and I was also surprised that you did not know of it."

Mr. Fleming charged in the Commons on June 19 the governor was lacking in responsibility in "failing" to inform the government of the board's decision to increase the governor's pension to $25,000 a year from $12,000.)

Earlier in the letter, Mr. Bryden says the board had an opinion from the department of justice that amendments to the pension by - laws were within the powers of the board and did not need the approval of governor-in-council.



"The changes were unanimously approved at the meeting on February 15, 1960, inasmuch as the deputy minister of finance had a representative at that meeting I, at least, took it for granted that these changes would be brought to your attention through the normal channels."

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, THURSDAY, JUNE 29, 1961

BELLEVILLE SUPERVISORS — (Front): Carol Kelar, Jane Gray, Donna Walt, Marsha Lidster, Susanne Palmer, Sandra Picard and Nadine Flunder. (Girls standing): Gale Braden, Carolyn Worley, Julie Bradford, Patti Waite, Kay Cunningham and Diane Savage. Boys: Rickey Donovan, Terry McCabe, Jim Muir and Graydon Scott.

Supervised Playgrounds Now in Small Communities

Supervised playgrounds have long been the accepted thing in the larger urban centres, but the idea is also fast catching on in the villages and towns in rural Ontario.

At least that is the feeling of recreational directors throughout eastern Ontario who point to the fact that this year has seen the largest ever enrolment of playground supervisors at the annual pre-season supervisors training camp at Quin-Mo-Lac camp on Moira Lake south of Madoc.

"Normally there are about 130 including staff, at the camp, but this year there are about 170, of which about 148 are supervisors," stated camp director Wesley Ogden of Oshawa.

This year there are 22 different communities from Ogdensburg to Cornwall and north to Haliburton, represented at the camp. The supervisors come in for a week's training on playground operation.

At this year's camp there is a heavy predominance of girl supervisors, who outnumber the boys 110 to 40.

LARGEST CAMP

The supervisors' camp opened last Saturday and will break up this evening. Lloyd Doran, Belleville recreational director is camp manager.

This year for the first time many of the smaller communities such as Marmora, Tweed and Bancroft have sent playground personnel to the Quin-Mo-Lac supervisors training camp.

"The smaller communities seem to be catching on to the supervised playground idea," noted Mr. Ogden. "This is the largest training camp we have had in ten years of operation.

During the week at camp the supervisors learn about group control, playground teaching techniques, playground safety, the use of volunteers and all about special events to hold the interest of the young playground frequenters.

The supervisors also learn how to deal with problem children and how to maintain discipline. And they learn how to plan playground activities in keeping with the day and the mood.

GET PRACTICAL TRAINING

And in addition to the lectures the supervisors are able to get in a little practical playground experience which does a great deal to dispel the first-day jitters when playgrounds open.

Wednesday was "Indian Day" at Camp Quin-Mo-Lac and for the day approximately 30 public school pupils were brought in from nearby Madoc.

It was with these 30 young children that playground supervisors at the training camp were able to get in a little practical experience.

Various group activities were demonstrated; Indian games were played and pow wows were held. And there was even instruction on how to erect an Indian tee-pee.

Tonight the playground supervisors will break camp and return to their respective municipalities where next week they will be able to put their brief training to use as playgrounds open on Monday.

PC Party Organizer Admits Getting $21,000 Kickbacks After Being Recommended

QUEBEC (CP) — A Progressive Conservative party organizer for Eastern Quebec said Wednesday he received about $21,000 in kickbacks on Union Nationale government purchases from private companies between 1955 and 1960.

Lucien Boucher, 46, Conservative party organizer since 1957, told a Quebec royal commission he drew a net profit of "possibly 10 per cent" on transactions his firm — a distributing outlet for motors and machinery parts —made with the government during the five-year period.

The royal commission, inquiring into the purchasing practices of the former UN administration between July 1, 1955 and July 1, 1960, will sit again today and Friday. Then it is expected to adjourn until the fall.

Mr. Boucher, one of four witnesses who testified Wednesday they received kickbacks on government purchases, said his firm did about $175,000 worth of business with the Quebec government.

WAS RECOMMENDED

He said he was recommended for the kickbacks by "a man I respect, a man for whom I have growing admiration, Hon. Gerald Martineau."

Mr. Martineau is a Quebec City businessman and a member of the legislative council—provincial upper house.

Several witnesses earlier told the commission Mr. Martineau arranged for payments on sales commissions to Union Nationale party workers on government purchases.

Mr. Boucher said his firm, Selection Auto Parts Registered, sold to the provincial government and other concerns. He said he bought parts from Northern Equipment and Mascot Equipment for resale.

The witness said he had received sales commissions on government purchases from Brandram - Henderson Limited, Cobra Industries Inc., Chas Cushion Limited, Sales Equipment Inc., and Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation.

He said he did not remember precise figures, but that he would return to the witness stand today and give details of all amounts he received.

Mr. Boucher told the commission he was active in the 1956 provincial election campaign in Quebec - Centre riding for UN candidate Maurice Cloutier and again in the 1960 election.

The three other witnesses were Henry Lallier, secretary of the St. John - Baptiste Society; Laval Couture, a travelling salesman, and Gaston Chartre, Mr. Couture replied.

Clerk of Privy Council Wants Powers Widened

OTTAWA (CP)—There won't be time to run around Ottawa looking for someone to put the Great Seal of Canada on a vice-regal proclamation if Canada comes under sudden nuclear attack, a Commons committee was warned Wednesday.

R. B. Bryce, clerk of the Privy Council and secretary to the cabinet, said Parliament should pass an act conferring extraordinary powers on the government to put emergency measures into effect automatically and instantaneously should a nuclear bomb be dropped on Canada.

At present, emergency powers could only be brought into force by a formal proclamation of the War Measures Act.

Mr. Bryce said that if a nuclear war comes, it is likely to come suddenly and be total in its effect.

We now must make preparations on the expectation that war will be in Canada. We must anticipate that North America would be a main target. . . We cannot anticipate the nature or scope of attack in Canada, or its physical nature. The bombs that were dropped on Japan in the second world war are a very poor guide to today's weapons."

Judy LaMarsh (L — Niagara Falls) cautioned Mr. Bryce not to speak of nuclear war in terms of "when" it comes, but "if".

"When you say 'when war comes,' it is a great disquietude to me," Miss LaMarsh said.

In Exercise Tocsin, this year's emergency measures practice session, it took 23 or 24 minutes to get a proclamation passed under the Great Seal of Canada.

"I knew it was coming and had everything laid on," Mr. Bryce said, "but even 23 minutes is quite serous."

Miss LaMarsh said she was worried about the amount of warning that might be given.

Mr. Bryce said that he felt the public should be warned of attack as quickly as the government is, but the government would have to take the responsibility that it was not going to create confusion by a false alarm.

Perhaps Nikita May Have Pulled Western Alliances Closer Together on Berlin

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A major result of Premier Khrushchev's campaign of threats against Berlin and Germany is the renewal in some of the seeds of discontent in the western alliance and growing evidence of a stronger, more unified Western front compared with the carping and quarrelling that took place over the Laotian crisis.

Britain wants to step in quickly, to do what it can as peace-maker to prevent a East-West military showdown over Berlin. But there is no indication Prime Minister Macmillan differs essentially from the policy enunciated by President Kennedy—that there will be no Western appeasement, compromise or withdrawal from its role and pledges in Berlin and Germany.

Undoubtedly without intention, Khrushchev appears to have refurnished the glue that long has cemented the alliance—the critical need of closing ranks and maintaining a unified front in the face of a possible new Korean war. As President de Gaulle of France insistently maintained, Western Europe may not be so eager to fight to maintain Berlin's freedom as the U.S. would be to beat back an enemy in its own back yard.

American policy advisers are still not convinced Khrushchev would risk a war over Berlin. And indeed the Soviet leader gives evidence of willingness to hold further negotiations on the issue. Kennedy has pledged the United States to a hard, unflinching line. But he also wants to avoid war.

Thus it would seem inevitable that Kennedy and Khrushchev will be forced to meet once more, perhaps more as a face-saving gesture for Khrushchev than in any hope of finding a solution that would be satisfactory to East and West.

Kennedy suggests the best way out is to let the Germans, in the East and West sectors, decide their own future through free elections. Khrushchev won't agree to this. He wants Germany split permanently, a move which would mean Western recognition of what Kennedy calls Russia's "East German regime."

Kennedy won't yield and is not likely to do so. He did retreat in his threat of military intervention in Laos, but as he now states, Germany is no Laos.

As events are shaping up, restoration of a united Germany becomes a matter of remote reflection for further generations.

Senate Committee Approves Capital Punishment Bill With 1 Amendment Added

OTTAWA (CP) — The Senate banking committee Wednesday amended the government's new capital punishment bill to add safeguards "providing that the justice minister is informed of juries' wishes on recommendations of mercy—whether or not they are unanimous.

The committee approved the bill as amended after an eight-hour study of the measure which divides murder into two categories—capital and non-capital. Only capital murder, defined in the bill as "planned and deliberate," is punishable by the death penalty.

Senator Salter Hayden (L — Ontario), chairman of the committee, was among senators who feared that a less - than-unanimous recommendation of a jury would not be included in the reports judges are required to make to the justice minister. The reports are among documents studied by the cabinet in considering commutation of death sentences.

Mr. Hayden noted that while the new bill provided for unanimous recommendations to be forwarded, there was no provision for majority recommendations.

The committee said a situation could arise where 11 jurors might favor recommending mercy. The 12th juror not in favor could stop the majority from registering its views.

William Brunt, acting government leader in the Senate, said the amendment made it very clear that judges were to forward the views of the jury, on clemency even if they were not unanimous.

Opposition Leader W. Macdonald said it was a "great improvement."

When the bill was reported to the senate later, Senator Arthur Roebuck (L—Ontario) said he was disappointed in it. He said it represented little change from existing legislation.

Mr. Roebuck said the amendments were minor and may do little good. But those who wished to narrow the types of murder which are punishable by death "have still a job of advocacy before them."

In an appearance before the committee, Justice Minister Fulton said three university law professors who criticized the bill "either do not understand it or do not agree with the government's policy."

Professors J. LI J. Edwards of Dalhousie University, H. R. S. Ryan and A. W. Mewett of Queen's University said the bill's language is confusing.

Mr. Fulton said the professors were wrong in their belief the government wished to impose the death sentence only on planned and deliberate killings. There were others where the death penalty would be imposed.

As an example he cited an imaginary case of a man who burns a building to collect insurance. He believes the building is empty but in fact a man dies in the flames. Such a man is guilty of capital murder, he said.

The Tracks

TORONTO (CP)—Strongboy, the consistent sprinter owned by J. E. Provoke Seagram of Weston, won the Seaford Wanada Purse at Woodbine Wednesday, running 1 1-16 miles in 1.46 as he defeated Lestrou Hose by one length.

Queen's Tour finished a distant third while Last Time was fourth and last in the small field of horses from the minor handicap division.

It was the second win in four starts for Strongboy this season. He was second in his other two races.

Lestrou Hope, owned by Mac Bell, ran in his first races arriving from Calgary. The four - year - old chestnut ran in last year's Epsom Derby.

Strongboy paid $2.90, $2.40 and $2.30. He combined with Lestrou Hope for a surprisingly $5.20 double at $30.15.

The daily double paid $104.30 as Cusset and Rubel Khali won the first two races.

BOSTON (AP)—Polyfad upset Our Hope in the $57,700 Massachusetts Handicap Wednesday because of Eddie Arcaro and the three pounds he shed.

Jockey Arcaro, who has ridden for 30 of his 45 years, showed why he is the topmoney winner in the business when he brought his mount home in a photo-finish triumph over the 11-to-10 favorite.

The time for the 1¼ miles in the 37th running of the New England classic was 2:01.3, four-fifths of a second off the Suffolk Downs track record.

Arcaro, who survived a foul claim to keep the triumph over Our Hope, usually rides at 114 pounds. Wednesday he tipped the scales at 115 and had to make 112 so he took to the sauna box to sweat it off.

Those three pounds I took off permitted the horse to last," Arcaro said.

Arcaro made about $1,900 a minute in his ride aboard the five-year-old gelding he had taken to the winner's circle in the Nassau Handicap at Aqueduct last fall.

Million Killed Illegally

Wild Fowl "Market" Huge

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal under - cover agent estimated Wednesday that 1,000,000 wild fowl a season are illegally killed or crippled in the United States by hunters who sell the birds. He called them market hunters.

Anthony M. Stefano, an agent for the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, told a House merchant marine and fisheries subcommittee than over a 30-year period in gathering evidence he purchased 21,000 ducks and geese in 364 market-hunter cases.

He added that this number probably represented only about one per cent of the market hunters in the U.S.

Frank P. Briggs, assistant secretary of the interior for fish and wildlife, said Stefano both recommended that the number of enforcement agents be increased to 220 from 138 and the number of undercover agents to 13 from two.

Jets Nip Leafs 1-0, Bisons Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Buffalo Bisons have stamped out of their batting slump in the International League.

Held to only 15 hits in four games, they matched that Wednesday night in a 5-3 victory over Richmond Virginians.

The hit production of three Richmond pitchers included home runs by Felix Torres and Wally Shannon. It was the 12th of the year for Torres, who also knocked in three runs. Shannon got three, singles in addition to his homer. Ted Savage also contributed three singles.

The league-leading Columbus Jets increased their lead to three games as the Jets nipped Toronto Maple Leafs 1-0 in 10 innings. Charleston Marlins split with Syracuse Chiefs, taking the opener 6-3 and losing the nightcap 3-1. Rochester Red Wings beat Jersey City Jerseys 8-4 and 4-2.

Five Buffalo hits were packed into the fifth inning when the Bisons erupted for six runs. The victory went to Bill Smith.

WINS SIXTH

Tom Cheney won his sixth game against two defeats and scored the lone run of the game as Columbus handed Toronto its fifth shutout defeat. Cheney struck out nine men and allowed six hits, giving way to Al McBean who mopped up in the 10th inning.

Charleston's victory in the first game extended Syracuse's losing streak to eight games and 11th straight at the hands of the Marlins. But two sacrifice flies by Ted Lepcio in the nightcap got the tying and winning runs.

The double victory by the Red Wings moved them past Jersey City into fourth place in the league race. Bobby Johnson homered twice in the seven-inning opener, his second with two out and none on the last of the seventh to win the game.

GRID COACH DIES

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Earl Walsh, 61, former football coach at Fordham University, has died, it has been learned. A graduate of Notre Dame University's law school, he was a football lineman and an Irish teammate of the great George Gipp and of former Iowa coach Eddie Anderson on the 1919-21 teams. He became acting head coach at Fordham in 1942 and served until the end of the year.

LONDON (CP) — Australia's big guns, expected to walk off with the men's titles at the Wimbledon tennis championships, came close to getting tripped up in the early rounds.

Neale Fraser, the defending champion, and Rod Laver, rated first and second for the tournament, were hard pressed Wednesday as the third day of play was run off under a sweltering sun.

California's Whitney Reed took the first set 7-5 from Fraser, drawing loud appreciation from the gallery for his pinpoint passing shots that caught the Australian left-hander flat footed again and again.

Fraser had his booming serve more under control in the second set and won 9-7. Reed bounced back to take the third 6-4 and Fraser squared the set with a 6-1 victory in the fourth.

The rubber set was a dingdong battle that saw Reed go into a 5-4 lead before Fraser pulled it out at 7-5.

TROUBLED BY FRENCHMAN

Laver had to pull out all the stops as he got by Pierre Darmon, France's top player, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 in a gruelling two-hour struggle.

Abe Segal of South Africa pulled off the first upset of the 1961 annual tennis classic. He took Spain's Manuel Santana, fifth - seeded, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 12-10.

India's Ramanathan Krishnan, rated seventh, took Martin Riessen of the U.S. 6-3, 6-2, 11-9 and Chuck McKinley of St. Louis hammered his way into the third round with a 6-2, 6-1, 6-3 victory over Bertie Gerner, South African international.

Nicola Pietrangeli, the Italian ace who reached the semi-finals at Wimbledon last year, lived up to his No. 3 ranking with a 6-3, 6-4, 1-6, 6-3 triumph over Australia's Barry Phillips-Moore.

Montreal's Eleanor Dodge, taking her first shot at the European circuit, kept Canada's hopes alive in the women's singles. The attractive 26-year-old brunette won 4-6, 7-5, 7-5 over French veteran Michele Bourbonnais.

Mrs. Hana Sladek, also of Montreal, failed to survive her first - round match, bowing to South Africa's Lynn Ruttenberg 5-7, 6-2, 6-2.

Mrs. Sladek's Susan Butt, who drew a first - round bye, was slated to meet Sandra Reynolds of South Africa today. Miss Reynolds is the tournament's 13th seed, Miss Dodge goes against Mrs. Allen Mills, wife of the British Davis Cup player.

No Leaf Players for North Bay

TORONTO (CP) — All Ontario Hockey League teams except Toronto Maple Leafs agreed Wednesday to assign players for the 1961-62 season to North Bay, newest entry in the Eastern Professional League.

Montreal Canadiens agreed at a meeting to provide eight players and Chicago Black Hawks, Detroit Red Wings, New York Rangers and Boston Bruins two each.

"It was the only way that a new team could be staffed with players," one delegate said. "Since Toronto refuses to sponsor a team in the league, it was our only alternative."

Leafs do not want to become involved with the EPHL team because it seems to them an unwise financial venture.

The five other teams decided that Toronto-owned players will not be allowed to play on any of the six EPHL teams.

Representatives at the meeting said a manager-coach for North Bay will be sought and an applicant interviewed within 10 days.

BOXER IMPROVES

TORONTO (CP) — Lightheavyweight boxer Jimmy Vaso of Utica, N.Y., is in satisfactory condition in hospital with a mild concussion suffered in a bout with Billy Fifield Tuesday night. Fifield, of Toronto, won a unanimous decision, administering a bad beating in the sixth and last round of the bout.

Mc Bi-es Race at Mosport

ORONO (CP) — The motorcyclists take over Saturday at Mosport Park for their first full-scale event on the sparkling new road - racing track.

Forty riders from Canada and the United States, some with big - time racing experience in Europe, are expected for the 25th running of the Kaye Don Trophy race, a 100-mile test acknowledged as the premier motorbike race in North America.

A recent foot injury to Ed La Belle of Philadelphia will prevent him from defending his championship, leaving the field wide open.

The Kaye Don Trophy is limited to machines with engine displacement of 500 c.c. or smaller. Also on the program are events for lightweight bikes, an unlimited race and an exhibition race for bikes with sidecar and passenger.

Duren One-Man Gang, Beats Yanks 5-3

Tigers Stop Chisox At 12

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

Ryne Duren had his moments when he was with New York Yankees — saving the pennant-clinching game of 1958, running up a string of 32 shutout relief innings in 1959, tying the major league record by striking out the first five men he faced as a starting pitcher last year.

But nothing for former relief ace ever did with the Yankees can match what he did to them Wednesday night.

The fireballing righthander had the Yankees hanging by their thumbs, striking out 12 and giving up just three hits while coming within three outs of his first complete game in the majors as he led a 5-3 win over the Los Angeles Angels beat New York 5-3.

Duren triggered a five - run sixth inning with a two - run single and struck out 10 in 25 at-bats since July 13, 1958—ahead of Albie Pearson's three - run homer.

TRADED BY YANKEES

Duren's sweet taste of success, after being bartered off to the Angels by the Yankees last month, dropped the five Yankees into a tie with the first-place Detroit Tigers in the American League race. The Tigers pasted their lead by choking off Chicago's winning streak at nine games walloping the White Sox 13-5.

The third - place Cleveland Indians split a doubleheader with Washington, winning 3-2 in 10 innings before the Senators took a 6-2 decision. Baltimore Orioles broke a tie with Chicago for fourth place by beating Kansas City Athletics 5-4. Boston Red Sox, despite only four hits, defeated Minnesota Twins 8-2.

Duren (3-4), who had just five of his last six decisions, slammed only two singles through the first eight innings. Then he gave up his fourth walk, to Roger Mark, leading off the ninth, and Mickey Mantle followed with his 36th home run of the season. Jim Donohue mopped up in relief, retiring Yogi Berra, Bill Skowron and Johnny Blanchard in order.

GETS 2,000TH HIT

Duren gave up the Yanks' first run in the fourth inning. Tony Kubek singled and came around on two infield outs, scoring from second when Duren was late covering first while retiring Mantle on a grounder. Berra also singled in the inning for his 2,000th major league hit. Bob Turley (3-5) was the loser, dropping his fourth straight game.

The Tigers collected 10 hits and handed the White Sox their second defeat in 21 games with seven - run seventh inning fetting the clincher on Mike Roarke's two - out, two - run single. Lou Mead (4-1) gave up 15 hits, but went all the way for the victory. Ray Herbert (6-7) was the loser.

An error by losing pitcher Joe Cunningham and a sacrifice fly by Mike De la Hoz preceded the three runs in Cleveland's frame behind in the fifth inning of the opener. Jim Perry (7-5) was the winner.

DALE LONG HOMERS

Dale Long homered and singled twice, driving in four of the run - scoring singles in the sixth round for Washington in the nightcap behind the five-hit pitching of Bennie Daniels (4-4) Jim Grant (7-3) lost his second consecutive decision.

A three - run homer by Earl Robinson and a clinching four-run second inning for the Orioles at Kansas City aged beat Jim Archer (6-2). Wes Stock (3-0) won with 4 2-3 innings of relief, shutout relief.

Jackie Jensen's two-run single in the first inning and solo homers by Gary Geiger and Frank Malzone did it for the Red Sox as Delock (5-3) breezed in with a five - hitter. Camilo Pascual (5-10) was the loser for the Twins, who got their runs on a home run and double by Bob Allison.

Win Six in Row

Kenmors Trim Port Hope

By PETER CARVER

The Belleville Kenmors stretched their unbeaten string to six, defeating a sloppy-fielding Port Hope Outstars squad 8-4 in the opening night fixture at the Belleville Fairgrounds last night. It was "Family Night" and a good crowd turned out to see the game.

The victory upped the league leading Kenmors' margin to four points over second-place Oronoco, who have now defeated every team in the Lakeshore Intermediate League.

The Port Hope team aided the Kenmors by committing seven errors; five of these were charged to the outfielders who, it seemed, could not adjust to the lights.

Winner Foden went the distance for the winners, allowing eight hits, whiffing twelve and walking three.

Bill Wakely started for the Ontarios and took the loss. In 4 3-3 innings he allowed five runs on four hits. The Port Hope ace Mike Harrison relieved him and the Kenmors got to him for six hits. The Port Hope pitchers struck out ten and walked three.

The Ontarios opened the scoring in the first frame as Paul Wakely doubled and scored on brother Bill's long single. Belleville tied up the game in the third as Foden walked, stole second and scored on Fulwell's base hit.

The Kenmors won the game in the fourth as two walks, two miscues in the outfield, Maxwell's single and Rick Locke's double plated four runs. In the fifth, Moe Hunter's single aided by the Ontario's centrefielder and Hunter went around to score the Kenmors' sixth run.

Neil Wakely got on base by error in Port Hope's half of the fifth, stole second, advanced on a single and scored on Menzer's double. Belleville put the game out of reach in the seventh as the Ontario's catcher dropped the third strikes of two consecutive Belleville batters. A hit and two walks later, Foden finished the Kenmors' scoring with two runs.

Port Hope scored singletons in the eighth and ninth.

Rick Locke sparked the Kenmors with two doubles and a single while Larry Maxwly connected for two singles. Fulwellsline, Hunter, Follwell, Goyer and Masters had one hit apiece.

Ted Watts led the Ontarios at the plate with three hits, one being for extra bases. Bill Wakely and George Fenton collected two hits apiece while Paul Wakely had the doubles.

The Hasty Pees Band was in attendance and gave a fine concert. Free candy and pop was dispensed. Gift draws were made between innings.

PORT HOPE — P. Wakely, Fenton, Watts, N. Wakely, Marcer, Sidney, Lee, Brown, Kelly, B. Wakely, Harrison.

BELLEVILLE — Locke, Fulwellsline, Hunter, Goyer, Maxvety, Master, Vaughan, Clarke, Asselline.

Would Include St. Mike's

Toronto Plans Junior A League

TORONTO (CP)—The possibility of a five-team Junior A hockey league, including St. Michael's College, loomed today after an announcement Wednesday night by Stafford Smythe that Maple Leaf Gardens would help to build it in the Metropolitan area.

Smythe, chairman of the Gardens' hockey committee, said he told the Ontario Hockey Association at its last Junior A Council meeting Toronto Marlboros might withdraw from that league. He hinted at the meeting he would try to keep St. Michael's in A - Dalton hockey through formation of a Toronto league with a restricted schedule.

It is thought the league would be composed of St. Mike's, Marlboros, West Toronto Nationals, Scarboro Lions, and, on a regional basis, probably a team from the northern part of the area.

Speaking at a dinner here honoring the Memorial Cup champion St. Mike's and their Buzzers, OHA Junior B champion Smythe said Maple Leaf Gardens supported St. Mike's stand in junior hockey 100 per cent.

"We feel as they do that scheduling 70 games and more in the past there has been too much hockey. We hope to find a way to limit the number and number of games and it is our sincere hope St. Michael's will feel inclined to enter."

Rev. David Bauer, coach of the Memorial Cup champions who is leaving the school to accept a teaching post with St. Mark's University in Vancouver, said the school would consider forming a team in such a league.

An application to form such a league may be presented to the OHA within the next two months at a meeting of coaches, managers, management and equipment are straightened out.

No Change In Rating Of Chuvalo

NEW YORK (CP)—Montreal heavyweight Bob Cleroux has been advanced to ninth spot in Ring magazine's rating. The former Canadian heavyweight champion, with last month, advanced a notch following his victories over Roy Harris and Alex Miteff.

Canadian champion George Chuvalo of Toronto, who knocked out Germany's Willi Besmanoff in the fourth round Tuesday after sending him to the canvas six times in the second, is the only man rated this month.

Tom McNeely of Arlington, Mass., being considered for a September bout against world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson, was listed 10th.

There were no other changes among heavyweights.

World flyweight champion Pone Kingpetch of Thailand was named fighter of the month because his successful defence in Tokyo against Japan's Mitsunori Seki.

The light-heavy class, Gilio Rinaldi of Italy, beaten in his title bid by Archie Moore, dropped to number three as Doug Jones of New York moved behind Harold Johnson of Philadelphia. Jonson is recognized as champion by the National Boxing Association.

TIGERS SIGN PITCHER

COALINGA, Calif. (AP) — Pitcher John Tsitouris, 23, Wednesday signed with Detroit Tigers for a bonus in excess of $25,000. He has been assigned to Denver of the American Association.

Stop "Win at Any Cost"

Wants Hockey Coach Clinic

TORONTO (CP) — A national coaching clinic to help rid hockey of the tendency to win at any cost was suggested Wednesday night by Rev. David Bauer, coach of the Memorial Cup champion St. Michael's College Majors.

"Football and baseball have their coaching schools," he said, "but we in hockey have been loathe to share our knowledge. The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association should seriously consider a recommendation from the Manitoba branch that it become a coaches' institute be formed."

Father Bauer, in his valedictory speech to players, school officials and guests at a dinner here, said such a clinic would re-establish the aims of hockey in regard to the character development of players.

"Such a school would help to rid the game of something which is now a blight — the tendency to win at any cost."

He criticized long schedules which produce back - to - back games, resulting in tired players skating in the warm-up and increasing the high - sticking, boarding and slashing.

"But the idea is not just to better the game, but better the boys," he said. "After all there are greater problems than winning the Memorial Cup."

REGRETS LEAVING

Father Bauer, who will soon take up teaching duties at Vancouver's St. Mark's College, said he regretted leaving active participation in hockey.

"It doesn't matter that I am leaving," he continued. "It matters that the game become greater. It doesn't need me or any particular man but I will give it support wherever I am."

Other speakers at the dinner included Stafford Smythe, chairman of Toronto Maple Leafs and Leaf assistant general manager Frank (King) Clancy.

PLAN LARGE MEET

MCKINLEY (AP) — More than 130 athletes from 27 countries, including the United States, will compete in an international track and field meet here July 1-2. Natalia Petukhova, chief coach of the Russian track and field group, said Wednesday it will be the largest international meet in the world this year. More than 230 Soviet athletes will compete against the visitors.

Ray Judd Leaving Lakefield?

Ray Judd, well-known softball pitching star for Lakefield Merchants, may be leaving the Peterborough area according to a report in the Peterborough Examiner.

"Judd is planning to fly to Providence, R.I. Thursday for an exhibition softball show Saturday. The Arizona pitcher has an offer to pitch ball there, and is considering it. The weekend show is a preliminary to the final signing and Judd's tickets have been sent here.

"Should the deal go through, Ray Judd will be lost to Peterborough for the year and probably for all time.

"I would like to remain here," the drawling southerner told Fred Mayhew Sunday. "But I must protect my future; and if the offer is attractive enough, I'll accept. I'm married now, you see."

"While Engineering of Providence is the firm interested in Judd; and the big right-hander will be interviewed by manager Jack Pendleton Saturday to determine his future for three months, possibly more."

Braves, Pirates Win

Cubs Clip Redlegs, Dodgers Lose

By ED WILES
Associated Press Sports Writer

If you think Los Angeles Dodgers are sitting pretty, just off the pace in that National League race, figure again, they'd be if Don Drysdale was winning.

The lanky right - hander, who never has come up with the 20 victories expected of him each spring, is no better than 5-5 at the moment — and he hasn't been a first division club in seven tries.

The young veteran missed again Wednesday night, failing to last three innings at Pittsburgh as the fourth - place Pirates whipped Los Angeles 8-3. That kept the second place Dodgers from picking up more than a half - game on Cincinnati and the Reds came out with a 3½-game lead despite dropping a doubleheader to Chicago 16-5 and 7-2.

Third - place San Francisco blew the lead four times and wound up with a 7-7, 15 - inning tie at Philadelphia in the longest night game (five hours 11 minutes) in major league history. Milwaukee Braves beat St. Louis Cardinals 8-3.

BUCS START EARLY

The Pirates tagged Drysdale for four runs in the first inning on four bases - loaded triple by Dick Stuart and a single by Dick Schofield. Drysdale gave way to Ron Kline after bills walked three men and was charged with six runs after leaving in a two - out third inning.

Southpaw Joe Gibbon (6-3) got the Dodgers for the third time in three decisions.

The Cubs collected 25 hits, including five home runs, while beating Cincinnati to the first runs behind righthander Glen Hobbie.

Southpaw rookie Jack Curtis (4-3) held the Reds to four hits in the nightcap, all Elliot had a pair of two - run singles and Dodger Allman and Jerry Lumpe all homered among the Cubs' eight hits. Allman was 6-for-9 in the twin bill and took over the league batting lead at .349 topping Ken Boyer, who got four hits, a triple and a single.

CATCHER BLUNDERS

The Phils and Giants each scored three runs in the 15th inning with the Phillies getting the tying run on a freak error. Tony Gonzalez, who had singled to open the run in the inning, scampered in from third when catcher Hoble Landrith got off a high peg on a routine return toss to pitcher Mike McCormick. The game was halted under the 12:59 a.m. curfew rule.

The Braves stayed within one game of the Dodgers by whipping Cards as they put away their eighth victory in 10 games with a three - game sweep at St. Louis.

They scored three unearned runs in the second inning against loser Bob Gibson (5-5), then piled up four runs on homers by Joe Adcock and Frank Thomas. Rookie Bob Hendley won his first game of the season.

Second Win of Week

Walts Wallop Joyces 8-4

By GARRY ALEXANDER

The Picton Walts tightened the Belleville and District Softball League in Picton last night when they downed Joyce Real Estate 8-4. It was the Walts second win this week.

Walt Fraser's boys pounded out two home runs, two triples and two doubles among their ten hits. They took an early 3-0 lead, saw it cut to a 3-4 edge in the fifth, then rewed up the decision with three runs in the seventh.

Righthander Roger Chapman set Joyces down on six well-scattered hits in pitching the win. He struck out 16 and issued eight walks.

Ron Gaetz' Wannamaker was the loser in his first start of the season. He was charged with all the Picton runs, off nine hits, in six innings plus. He fanned two and passed seven. Doug Ellis threw one-hit relief ball, striking out two and walking one.

Bob Kennedy and Keith MacDonald each hit a double and single for the Walts while Marv Stacey and Ron Weese smashed home runs. Chapman and Keith Stacey contributed triples while Bob Heffernan and Denny Hayden added singles.

Claude Carr had a perfect night for the Belleville club, rapping a home run, triple, a single and walking three times. Bert Faulkner clouted two singles, Jackie Elliott a double and Chuck Kingston a single.

Wannamaker was shaky at the start and three walks in the third, along with hits by Heffernan and Carr, produced a run behind 3-0.

The clubs traded single runs in the next two frames. Carr homered for Joyces but Marv Stacey got back to the long homer to left centre. Kingston's bunt single, an error sending him to second, and Elliott's lined double bagged Joyces' second run.

Chapman and Stacey both hit their triples in the fourth to give Picton a 5-3 lead. Joyces fought back for two runs on a pair of walks, Faulkner's single and Kingston's fly ball to left.

Picton made it decisive in the seventh while chasing Wannamaker. Hayden singled to left and went all the way when the ball got through Ellis, playing right field. Weese followed with his homer and Kennedy lined a long single. MacDonald doubled for the final run after Ellis retired Heffernan.

Sport Snapshots

BY JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Not one member of Canada's 1960 Olympic swimming team reached peak performance at the Ronsi Games.

This is tantamount to saying that Canadian Olympic swimmers were a bunch of loafers who didn't train and who went to Italy on an expenses-paid junket as part of a Canadian team that served to point up Canada as a third-rate nation on the international sports scene.

This was not the case. The fault can be traced to a number of obstacles facing amateur sport in Canada—lack of facilities, expert coaching, apathy on the part of the public to its athletes, and so on.

It's an old, old story and has been repeated on numerous occasions since the Second World War years.

THREE-DAY CLINIC

With this background, it was enlightening last weekend when 60 Ontario swimmers and coaches gave up three days of their time and up to $40 of their hard-earned money to listen to all of this stuff and much more from experts. There wasn't a dissenting voice and all went away convinced that the clinic was worth-while.

It was held at the Ontario Athletic Commission camp at Lake Couchiching, about 90 miles north of Toronto. Panel discussions were conducted by experts from the United States and Canada and coaches gave tips on stroke technique.

Panelists didn't hold their punches and the facts and figures brought out made outsiders writer. Such as:

There are only 3,000 registered swimmers in all of Canada, believed to be the lowest per capita in the world.

This compares with 30,000 in Australia, 20,000 in New Zealand and 13,000 in Michigan in the U.S. alone.

JUST THREE POOLS

There are only three 55-yard pools (Olympic and British Empire Games size) in Canada at Montreal and London in Ontario and Vancouver.

Australia, the pool nation of the world, has 1,000 pools between the 1958 Pan-American Games and the 1960 Olympic Games, said John Faulkner of the University of Michigan. "This is a real problem.

"How?" he asked, "can anyone expect swimmers to excel in Olympic competition when they are forced to train in 25-yard pools? They haven't the faintest idea what they can do in the longer pools."

NEED STIFFER TESTS

Faulkner, a native of Kingston, Ont., who has a Michigan frau from the University of Western Ontario in London, was coach of the 1960 Olympic team.

"The 10 men and women who made up our swimming team were the best coached and best trained swimmers and divers we had ever sent into international competition . . . and not one of them reached peak performance."

"Everyone was improving in training at Rome when their race was swum. The fault with this lies with the coaches or the swimmers. The culprit is the system and the attitude of amateur sports in Canada. . . .

"Like the United States we are a non-affluent society but the Americans at least are given public support and they train an athletic elite to represent them internationally."

South Hastings Baseball

Latta defeated Foxboro 5-2 in a South Hastings baseball league game played last night.

Stan Reid hurled five hit ball for Latta, firing three strikes past 17 Foxboro batters. He walked three.

"Soup" Campbell toiled in defeat, allowing eight hits, fanning half a dozen and passing three.

All the game's hits were one-baggers and no player on either team got more than one. Latta hitters were Wayne Gow, Frank Ray, Ross Parks, Harry Reid, Stan Reid, Lorne Cronkwright, Doug Rollins and Don Harris.

Foxboro safeties went to Reynolds, Charlton, Sinfield, Dickey and Dalrymple.

Cobourg Beaten by Flyers 7-1

TRENTON (Special)—RCAF Flyers stretched their Brighton-Trenton Softball league winning streak to three games here last night when they downed the Cobourg Merchants 7-1.

The win tied the Flyers with the Bobcats, both with eight points, while the loss left Cobourg tied with Picton, with ten points. Zorbara lead the Flyers with 12 points but the standing tightens with every game.

Cobourg scored two unearned runs in the fourth inning to snap a scoreless tie last night. They added another pair in the sixth and sewed it up on a three-run homer by "Moe" Mowat in the eighth. Cobourg got their lone run in the eighth after leaving ten men stranded in the first six frames.

Howie Coke pitched the victory, allowing five hits, striking out eight and passing four.

Rolly Gerrard pitched the route in defeat tagged for ten hits while fanning five and walking two.

John Hughes led the Flyers with three singles in four trips. "Moe" Mowat had his homer and a single while Gil Girard doubled and singled. Other base hits went to Doug Alexander, Don Ogden and "Bugs" MacDonald.

Cobourg hits, all singles, went to Al Church, Leo O'Brien, Scotty MacSporran, Stu Lindsay and Brian Hart.

Jerry Lewis' "The Ladies' Man" is Hilarious, Eye-Filling Treat (Review)

That man Jerry Lewis is back again, accounting for the laughter at the Trenton Belleville yesterday with the opening of his new comedy, "The Ladies Man." Lewis not only stars in the Technicolor film, but also produced, directed and co-wrote it with hilarious entertainment the result. He has never been funnier or more clever for he's surrounded himself with a bevy of talented beauties and guest stars who contribute great fun for the whole family.

The Paramount release co-stars former opera star Helen Traubel, introduces Broadway's Pat Suzuki and features Gloria Jean, Hope Holliday, Kathleen Freeman, Buddy Rose and guest stars George Raft, Harry James and his band and cowgirl Buddy Lester. The girls, a dazzling assortment of stunning blondes, brunettes and redheads, the portray residents of an all-girls boarding house in Hollywood.

Jerry is seen as a character named Herbert H. Herbert who, unfortunately, is a disgusting romance, has absolutely sworn off women forever. He takes a job as houseboy for motherly-looking Helen Welenmelon (Helen Traubel) unaware that her boarding house is exclusively for females — many with film careers seeking females. The plot details Jerry's misadventures, his "education" and his new romance. In the course of development there are songs, dances and specialty show-dropers not only by Jerry but by the entire all-star talented new faces and figures peopling "The Ladies Man." All of it — and all of them — are great fun and highly recommended to the laugh-minded.

"HAND IN HAND"
First Showings

An unusual combination of delightful entertainment and thought-stimulating conflict, is Colorado Pictures' new release "Hand in Hand," is said to depict with warmth and insight how two abominable children perceive their friendship against the current unrest inherited from the world of their elders. Starring John Gregson, Sylvia Thorndike and Finlay Currie, the film introduces two accomplished juvenile actors, Loretta Parry and Philip Needs.

Diana Morgan's screenplay describes the lovely and determined friendship that spontaneously springs up between a little Catholic boy and a little Jewish girl. The story are complicated by religious prejudice.

How the innocents come to grips with the poison of prejudice and eventually make their childish resources is said to make for a gripping and absorbing film. Philip Leacock, a director who gained fame for his insight into childish character with "The Little Kidnappers" has piloted "Hand in Hand."

Miss Winston served as producer of the Columbia drama.

On the same program an added first run comedy hit, "Five Golden Hours" stars Ernie Kovacs, Cyd Charisse

Marlene Enters U.S. Open

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. (AP)—Baltusrol is a big, mean golf course, but the girls starting today in the 41st United States women's open golf championship aren't afraid of it.

"I was thrilled when I heard we were to play here," said Louise Suggs, the Georgia Flash who won the open twice in the days when the Ladies Professional Golf Association sponsored the event.

"I had heard so much about this course. Now I find it a real mean course, but a good test."

"It's long, long, long, but what a dreamy course," echoed pert, Barbara Romack, the 1954 women's amateur champion who has developed into a long hitter for her size since she turned pro.

Representing Canada in the second-largest field in the tournament's history is Marlene Stewart-Streit of Pontiniil, former U.S. women's amateur champion.

AT THE PARK — A cynical Doris Day listens to the head of the family, David Niven, lay down the law to their four mischievous youngsters in this breakfast scene from Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Please Don't Eat the Daisies", film version of Jean Kerr's hilarious best-seller. Janis Paige, Spring Byington and Richard Haydn co-star in the CinemaScope and color attraction opening tonight at the air conditioned Park Theatre for a three day engagement. On the same program Leo Gorcey, Huntz Hall and the Bowery Boys in their wildest comedy "Master Minds".

Shirley Booth Well Received In Tad Masel's 'The Haven'

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Play-wright Tad Mosel and Actress Shirley Booth joined forces Wednesday night to turn out an exceptionally effective Hour on CBS.

Mosel's The Haven was more a vignette and character study than a drama, the story of a weak but kind little gentle man's brief revolt from his wife and two children—and his return.

Miss Booth played the type of woman she did so well in Come Back, Little Sheba, a good woman afflicted also like Grace Raymond, as her errant husband, was so wooden and without pity as to call sympathy played on the side of the wife.

The plot wasn't much: Just a couple and their two children returning to their summer cottage where he wife finds evidence her husband had been there with another woman. Miss Booth pulled off convincingly a difficult scene when she changed instantly from hurt and anger at betrayal to warmth and concern for her husband's unhappiness.

CBS producer Albert McCleery, testifying before a Federal Communications Commission hearing this week, characterized Jeffrey Dick Clark's Bandstand, aimed at the teenage crowd, as the "sexiest" show in TV. And all this time I've though that adjective applied to a cigaret commercial.

Sam Levenson, who was on Ed Sullivan's Show the other Sunday, will fill in for vacationing Jack Paar next Wednesday and Thursday nights . . . Durward Kirby will continue on the Garry Moore show next season

James Cagney Not as Tough As He Is Painted in Films

By BOB THOMAS

MUNICH (AP) — German fans look in awe at "dee tuff guy." James Cagney, convinced that he is equally adept with a gun or his fists.

They should know that he has never fired a shot in anger. And he hasn't been in a fist fight since he was 17.

"It was after school in New York one day," he recalled. "This mean character was bothering a friend of mine, and I told him to cut it out. The guy wouldn't quit.

"It happened to be standing on a high work, so it brought me up to his size. I figured the only way to win the fight was to get it over in a hurry. I put one hand in back of his head and hit him with the other one. I broke his nose and that was the end of that fight."

That was also the end of Cagney's fistic career. But he has made toughness pay off on the screen, in fact he is now marking 30 years as a star. His first big deal was the public conscience was Public Enemy in 1931.

Though he has played everything from Lon Chaney to Jean George M. Cohan (Academy Award, 1942), he is still best remembered for those two-fisted early years. So fare his contemporaries.

"People still think Eddie (G.) Robinson is a tough mug," Cagney observed. "In reality, Ed is a cultured gentleman, a real collector of art. They were wrong about Humphrey Bogart, too. Boggie came from a fine New York family.

"As for George Raft, he is the most diplomatic of men. He can get himself out of any situation."

Cagney is in Germany to play a hard-hitting American businessman in Billy Wilder's One, Two, Three.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RICHTER

Friday, June 20, 1941

General Tendencies: This is the day when you would be wise to think more into rms of being more direct with your friends, how truly devoted you are to them instead of following an impulse to snoop into their affairs or see where you can do a little gold digging where they are concerned. Be social, charming and avoid all questionable activities.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) Be sure to avoid those individuals today who are out to make trouble and stick with proven and chosen companions of long standing. Then you can advance as well as be happy in your social and personal life. Be discriminating. Grow.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) Be most ethical in all civic or public affairs today. Be careful you do not succumb to the wiles of a jealous associate who wants to lower your standards of living. Have a stress will power and you can make great strides forward.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Look to new acquaintances for the fine ideas that will help you to advance in your career now. Don't pay any attention to that co-worker who is not really your friend and does not want to see you unsuccess. Avoid him or her, deliberately.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 23) — Use a more modern method or psychology in dealing with key people today and you get better results. Also, steer clear of that partner who wants to have a good time and would cause you to give up your principles. P.M. be economical.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Rather than listen to that rather impractical person at home now, follow the advice of clever associates who want to see you get ahead faster. By co-operating with real devotion and enthusiasm, you will know greater success.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Subjects that impulse to get out to what is different and untried and stick to work that needs your immediate attention. Use more efficient system, too, so that you lop off time and effort. Don't be so aimless in the future — have a true goal.

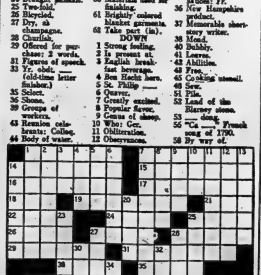
Libra (Sept. 24 to Oct. 22) — Take time to have a good time today, but don't feel that you have to be extravagant. Find a truly satisfying hobby which will offset all that work you are constantly, coincidentally at.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 22) Important you think more about the welfare of those in your than own personal desires. This will increase own security as well and give you a greater incentive in the business world. Be a true bread winner and be blessed.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) — Be sure you contact the right people now who can help you to succeed with some new plan or idea that has occurred to you. Staying at home becoming your fate is the least intelligent thing you can do — get busy!

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) All monetary affairs can be ameliorated splendidly if you avoid that individual who takes up so much of your time needlessly. Be with experts in your field instead. Then sit down tonight and set up a more workable budget.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Important you know what is best to do to make your own personal life more successful and happy now and take the right steps in that direction. Avoid higher-up who has been quite limiting and uses you almost as a slave. Grow!



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Think more in terms of increasing security and eliminating anxieties rather than going off on a tangent today. Also be sure you help someone in trouble, since this will bring fine returns in the future. Get future better organized.

If your child is born today—he, or she, will be one of those delightful people who can sell anything from minks to marigolds, and therefore should be given an education in the arts and sciences, cultural topics, plus a good religious training so that people from every walk of life will be a potential customer. Big projects call be handled just as easily as small ones, and since idealism rules this life, success is unlimited here.

EXTENDED MONROE DOCTRINE — In 1936 while visiting Kingston, Ont., President Franklin D. Roosevelt declared the United States would not stand idly by if Canada were ever attacked. The next day he said the declaration was related to the Monroe Doctrine, an extension of the original idea of keeping Europe from establishing new colonies in Latin America. Here Roosevelt is shown standing beside a Monroe memorial. (CP Photo).

Invasion of Cuba April 17 Showed Monroe Doctrine Influences U.S. Policy

The American-directed invasion of Cuba April 17 indicated that the Monroe Doctrine still influences U.S. policy in the western hemisphere. This story discusses its effects on relations with Canada.

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — The Monroe Doctrine has exercised considerable influence over Canada's defence policies through the years.

The doctrine, laid down by President James Monroe in 1823, warned European nations that any interference with the independence of nations in the western hemisphere would be opposed by the United States.

It implied that the U.S. would always be ready to turn back any attack on Canada.

But the implication was broadened into a firm pledge of assistance by President Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1938—also carried the possibility of American intrusion in Canadian affairs.

Would American military protection mean some degree of American political control? Could Canada always depend on the U.S. to make the right decision in a time of crisis?

When the U.S. decided to lend its support to the unsuccessful invasion of Cuba in April, it was, in effect, invoking the principle of the Monroe doctrine although President Kennedy was careful not to say so.

That the possibility of unilateral American action—in this case to combat the Communist threat — worried the Canadian government was evident when Prime Minister Diefenbaker said:

"I believe it to be profoundly true that no single nation today by reason of its population and wealth possesses the power to meet the world challenge of communism and that only in unity can there be security for nations who put their trust in freedom and survival for all mankind."

But any Canadian concern doesn't alter the facts of North American defence.

Welcoming President Kennedy to Ottawa in May, Diefenbaker said:

"In the field of defence each must depend on the other and both must be joined in co-operation. To follow any other course is suicidal blindness. Canada by herself cannot provide for adequate defence. The United States cannot defend itself without Canadian co-operation and the use of defence facilities in Canada."

Just before the Second World War, in speaking for more defence funds, Ian Mackenzie, then Canada's defence minister, told Parliament:

"The more you subscribe to doctrines of Canadian nationalism, the more you must provide for the defence of Canada. You cannot any longer lean upon the alliance or the implied alliances of the past; you can no longer lean upon the implications of the Monroe doctrine."

Since that time Canada's defence machinery has become tied ever more closely to the United States and there is no immediate likelihood of a reversal of this trend.

The question then arises—what can Canada do to help set her fears at rest?

The United Nations and North Atlantic Treaty Organization already provide a forum for consultation on many problems and a check on unilateral action in many fields.

But the United States acted in Cuba without consulting anyone else and, if it chose to buck world opinion, could do so again.

Senator Wayne Morse, Oregon Democrat, has suggested it is time Canada gave up using the United States as a buffer between itself and the troubles of Latin America. He said Canada should join the Organization of American States, it could then play a bigger part in dealing with the problems of the hemisphere.

Kennedy followed up by openly inviting Canada to become a member of the Inter-American body. Although there is no immediate prospect of Canada doing so, the question has been under serious consideration in Ottawa.

It is not likely the U.S. will ever give up the ultimate right of taking action on its own to meet what it regards as a foreign threat in this hemisphere.

But by joining, Canada might be able to exercise some restraining influence on U.S. policy in this part of the world.

Prairie Drought Causes Anxiety Among Ministers

Will Try to Save Bulk of Cattle

OTTAWA (CP) — Drought prospects such as the "dirty '30s" will send the federal and Prairies agricultural ministers into urgent consultations Sunday in Winnipeg.

Saying the bulk of more than 5,000,000 cattle in Saskatchewan and Manitoba cattle valued at some $750,000,000 is the main objective if, disaster strikes, the talks include preventing a marketing panic.

D-Day — for disaster — will come in the next 10 days if drought and searing temperatures continue, crisping crops beyond salvation, federal sources are written off daily.

These facts emerged Thursday as Agriculture Minister George Hutton of Manitoba and federal minister Alvin Hamilton reached agreement in principle on various points of an emergency plan during 4½-hour talks. Mr. Hamilton said these points will be submitted to the other two provinces as well.

STEPS OUTLINED

General plan of help will fall into these categories, a press statement said:

1. Save the dairy herds and beef-breeding stock.

2. Prepare for action to prevent a sharp price break in the event of through farmers unloading herds.

3. Prepare for alternative fodder supplies and feed assistance by shipping some cattle east to Ontario where the abundant U.S. stocks of feed grains.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced, however, that the same assistance provided in 1958 and 1959 has been ordered for the Prairies. At that time the federal government and the provinces split costs of carrying fodder to cattle or cattle to fodder.

Mr. Hamilton said Thursday he has written the railways to request low freight rates for shipment of cutting such freight costs to help the Prairie provinces by one-third.

HELP NEEDED FARMERS

Announcement also means the same assistance provided in 1958 and 1959 has been ordered for the Prairies. At that time the federal government and the provinces split costs of carrying fodder to cattle or cattle to fodder.

Mr. Hamilton said Thursday he has written the railways to request low freight rates for shipment of cutting such freight costs to help the Prairie provinces by one-third.

HELP NEEDY FARMERS

Mr. Hamilton said the assistance applicable to the three provinces were worked out Thursday between Mr. Hutton and Mr. Hamilton:

Provision will be made to help moneyless farmers—expected to be numerous if the drought continues—buy seed for next year.

The price support floor of 80 per cent of best — beef cattle prices for the last 10 years will be developed to cover various grades.

Farm-to-farm surveys will be made to help those edged up-wards Thursday to 2.82 per cent from 2.80 last week with the total sale of $85,000,000 in 91 - day government treasury bills.

The rate is an indicator of conditions in the short - term money market.

The bank rate, minimum charge by the central bank on its infrequent loans to chartered banks, is set at one-quarter of one per cent above the average yield on the weekly sale of 91-day treasury bills.

The bank announced that $85,000,000 of the bills were sold this

Theatre Guild Opens Workshop Series at Centre

A cleverly executed demonstration of puppetry marked the opening on Wednesday evening, of the Belleville Theatre Guild's Workshop Series. In previous years it has been the custom for all theatrical activity, to cease at the end of the Spring season, but this year the newly created Workshop Committee has planned a program of activities that will continue right through the summer months. The program will include readings, performances of one act plays and demonstrations in make-up, and stage carpentry, it is hoped that these will help to maintain the interest of present members and encourage new members to gain experience before the fall season commences.

Chairman of the Workshop Committee, Mr. Mark Heiluhn, welcomed members and their friends to the Workshop Headquarters on Campbell Street, pointed out the improvements that had been carried out and introduced the instructor, and then introduced Mr. Rodger Greig, a member of the Theatre Guild, who delighted the audience with a highly original demonstration of puppetry.

The puppets, made by Mr. Greig, were colorfully costumed and provided much amusement, particularly for the younger members present. Mr. Greig presented a comic skit, an acrobatic number, an illustrated poem and a biblical scene depicting Noah and his Ark. All of these were thoroughly enjoyed by every member present. It was then announced that the next Workshop production would be a presentation of scenes from Shakespeare's "Anthony and Cleopatra" directed by Mrs. David Jardine. This will take place on Friday, July 14th.

Finally Mrs. Alan Hall announced that rehearsals for "Macbeth the Wind" to be produced by the Belleville Theatre Guild and Trenton Drama Group to open the fall season were available for those who care to read-ing.

Miss Helen Sukman convened the enjoyable Coffee Hour that followed, presiding at a table beautifully decked with colorful peonies. It was announced during this time that any interested persons would be welcomed to attend any of the Workshop plays presentations and members were encouraged to bring visitors.

Tweed Police Chief Given $3,800 Pay by Arbitration

An annual salary of $3,800, plus $1,000 per year for the use of his own car, and 10 cents per mile for travelling outside of his own municipality, is the basis of an arbitration award granted to Tweed Police Chief Walter Higgins by Judge Wilfred S. Lane of Picton.

Chief Higgins had requested a pay increase from his municipality and when this was declined he placed the matter before arbitration.

The hearing was held before Judge W. S. Lane at the Belleville county building on May 12th. The judge's finding on the case was made public June 28th.

Kenneth G. M. Ross acted as counsel for the village of Tweed while H. A. Pringle, QC, also of Belleville, appeared for the Police Association representing Chief Higgins.

Chief Higgins' submission at the time was that his hours at work as village constable were unlimited; and that he was on 24-hr. duty seven days a week He requested a 40-hour work week and a pay increase to $4,326. He asked two weeks' paid vacation.

The Tweed chief compared his position with that of a constable in larger centres, claiming his salary should be equal to that of a first class constable in a city.

In his report Judge Lane said Chief Higgins' present salary of $3,634 was far from adequate.

The judge said in his report that it would be ridiculous to compare the duties of a police officer in Tweed with those of a constable in a city. He said the only similarity was that they were both police officers.

Neither could be make a

Paul Martin To Be Speaker At Nomination

Former Health Minister Paul Martin, now back in the Liberal Member of Parliament for Essex East, will address the South Hastings Liberal Association's nominating rally at BCIVS next Wednesday at 8 p.m.

In making the announcement today, local barrister Robert Temple, only party member who has declared himself as a candidate for nomination, said the Association expects a large turnout at the rally.

Other possible candidates for nomination are reported to be former MP Wm. Fallowell and Dr. Donald C. McVicar of Deseronto, although neither has declared himself as a candidate.

The Liberal party is the first political group to hold a nominating convention locally prior to a federal election expected either this fall or next spring.

comparison between Tweed and communities the size of Gananoque or Picton.

The judge said the average wage paid to police in villages similar to the village of Tweed would be a reasonable yardstick in determining salary.

Judge Lane said he was not prepared to grant Chief Higgins statutory holidays but said there should be provision for annual holidays, or payment for holidays if the constable is required to work them.

He said the village should be prepared to pay for two weeks' holidays on the basis of time and a half if the constable was required to work them.

Judge Lane also ruled that sick leave to the amount of 10 days per year ,and accumulative to 120 days, should be provided for.

Expect 30,000 At Air Show

An afternoon of excitement and thrills awaits young and old at RCAF Trenton Saturday, when Station Trenton and 6 Repair Depot combine efforts to present their 1961 version of Air Force Day. All highways lead to Trenton on Saturday as a crowd close to 30,000 is expected to be on hand to view the elaborate ground display and the spectacular airshow to follow.

The north gates open officially at 12.30 and visitors are urged to arrive at the station early to avoid the heavy volume of traffic and also to take advantage of the static display and other ground facilities.

Hasty Pees Band Has New Uniforms

Showing marked improvement through intensive winter practice the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Band faces a busy summer season.

The band made a distinct hit with its two official appearances thus far. It performed at the regiment's annual inspection and at the Quebec-Ontario Lions Convention held in Kingston as second-place honors. This was the first competitive event the band has entered.

The band presents a brand new appearance these days as it is apparelled in neat, trim, red uniforms, copies of those worn by local regiments back in the 1800's.

Since the band was reformed last year it has improved of size, music, drill and now in appearance.

The, unit practises every Tuesday night from 7 to 9 at 10 o'clock at the Bridge St. armouries.

Pascoe Pleads Not Guilty To Charge

William George Pascoe was remanded until July 13 in county magistrate's court on Thursday when he pleaded not Guilty to a charge of careless driving in which an accident occurred involving a second car, which was driven by Mrs. Mary Mason of Portage La Prairie, Man.

Mr. and Mrs. Mason testified that the Pascoe car entered Highway 401 from the Shannonville gravel without first coming to a stop.

Ralph Thompson of Montreal, who was following Mrs. Mason's car, also testified that Pascoe did not stop before entering the highway. The Mason's car was proceeding east on Highway 401.

Defence witness D. Seid said the Mason's car passed him at a great rate of speed, cut back in front of him, went off onto the right shoulder, then veered across into the left lane striking the Pascoe car, which was crossing 401.

The testimony of the Masons, Mr. Thompson and Mr. Seaid differed considerably, confusing the court. The case was adjourned by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

The investigating officer, OPP Const. Jack Fullerton said there was about $800 damage to the Mason car and $200 to the Pascoe vehicle.

Group Capt. C. R. Thompson took over Thursday as commanding officer of 6 Repair Depot. He succeeds Group Capt. T. A. Sproston, who has retired. Group Capt. Thompson received the station commanding officer's pennant from Warrant Officer L. T. Seguin.

New Commander At Depot Takes Over

TRENTON — New commanding officer at 6 Repair Depot is Group Capt. C. R. Thompson of Edmonton.

In the symbolic handing over ceremony Thursday Wing Cmdr. W. H. Smith, who has been acting commanding officer since the retirement last month of Group Capt. T. A. Sproston, relinquished the command to Group Capt. Thompson. Wing Comdr. Smith will resume his duties as the chief technical services officer.

Group Capt. Thompson, 47, was born and educated in Edmonton. He is a graduate of the University of Alberta in aeronautical engineering physics. During the Second World War he served as a flying instructor under the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Since 1958 he has been the deputy director of aircraft engineering at Air Force Headquarters, Ottawa.

Group Capt. Thompson is married to the former Marjorie E. Winter of Edmonton. They have four children, Robert 17, John 15, Elizabeth 14 and Maureen 11.

Despite the day's heat and humidity, the handing - over parade was carried out with despatch and precision. Three squadrons comprised of three flights each participated. The flights converged on the parade square from two points of assembly. Group Capt. Thompson took the General Salute and the order of service was carried out with Wing Cmdr. Smith being presented with his pennant and Group Capt. Thompson's pennant being raised.

Wing Cmdr. Smith addressed the parade, commending the airmen and airwomen for their co-operation during his tenure of duty.

Group Capt. Thompson said he was both proud to take over command of the depot. He said that the success of his command depended on all units working together as a team and that he expected the same support from the personnel under his command as he would give them.

Ceremonial music for the parade and the march past was provided by the 6 R.D. band led by Sgt. Kelly.

Coyne Can Look After Himself

It is evident that there are now two distinct issues in the controversy over James E. Coyne.

What, at first appearances, seemed to be a disagreement over monetary and fiscal policies, the rights of which the average voter is not qualified to judge, has been gradually developing a second and more important aspect, the question of the nature of the control, if any, which the government ought to have over the operation of the central bank.

We say this is more important than any disagreement between the bank and the government because the way this issue is solved will determine the respective roles of the bank and government not merely in the present situation but for years to come.

This is an issue which the layman is much better equipped to weigh than the question of the correct monetary and fiscal problems in the nation's present economic situation.

Moreover, it is a question on which Mr. Coyne can expect some help from allies, both inside and outside the House.

That Mr. Coyne has grasped the full significance of the changed circumstances surrounding the controversy is made plain by the tone of his latest open letter to Finance Minister Donald Fleming—and indeed by the very fact that this should have been an "open" letter.

As long as the point of controversy was monetary and fiscal policies, Mr. Coyne could expect no real help from Opposition members in the House of Commons. Both the Liberals and the CCF had long been on record as opposing the monetary policy being followed by the Bank of Canada.

The procedure followed by the government in seeking Mr. Coyne's dismissal, on the other hand, provokes the Opposition with a potentially useful political weapon, if the matter is handled astutely by them.

We think, though, that the Opposition should beware of attempting to paint Mr. Coyne as a helpless and hapless public servant being abused by the government—and the government supporters, too, ought to beware of failing into a comparable trap of picturing Mr. Coyne as being devoid of logic, as "that poor man" as Works Minister D. J. Walker called him. From Mr. Coyne's public statements it is obvious that he knows precisely what he is trying to do, how he plans to try to do it and the best way to get his case before the public. He is quite capable of taking care of himself and presenting his side of the issue in a manner which is most likely to appeal to the public.

Job Seeks the Man

Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan has announced that he is prepared to stand for the leadership of the New Party. At the same time, he said he will not campaign for the position.

Such an attitude may sound strange today, but it is interesting to note that precisely the same view was expressed by Thomas Jefferson regarding the presidency of the U.S. In the early days of that country, indeed, it was the conventional attitude.

There is no reason to doubt the sincerity of Douglas, though it might be added that in his case the job has already shown distinct signs of seeking him. It is also true that he does not face the same temptation to seek the job that he might have to meet if he belonged to another party, for if there is much besides hard work in it for him it is not likely such rewards will come his way for many years, at the earliest.

Poor Arrangement

Here it is, the end of June, summer holidays are with us with all the city schools closed, the bass and muskie season opens tomorrow—and a lot of us are still monkeying with the thermostat every day or two!

Adding insult to injury, this damp spring and now summer, is the news that cattle raisers in the prairie provinces will receive federal assistance if the drought in that area continues.

We have no objection to such assistance—in any family worthy of the name those in trouble are given help when they need it—but it does seem a little thick that lack of rain on the prairies should cost us money at the same time as a plenitude of rain here is plaguing us.

This money comes as a tremendous shock. But it's the kind of shock treatment I like.—Mrs. Dorothy Brown, 54-year-old Liverpool, England, widow, who won over $305,000 on a 35-cent soccer pool.

Pontius Pilate

Brantford Expositor

Italian archaeologists digging in Caesaria have just unearthed a tablet inscribed with the name of Pontius Pilate.

This may revive interest in the onetime Roman procurator known for his action in delivering Jesus to the Jews to be crucified.

Pilate deserves better biography than that. Unfortunately the state of recordkeeping and even reporting at his particular time seems to have been shockingly poor.

Little is known of his early life, though the fact that he rose to be a governor and held the difficult Judean post for all of ten years would seem that he was unpopular with the Jews (but what governor wasn't?). All he left behind him was a name and sternly when need arose.

St. Luke tells of Galileans whose harsh treatment Pilate meted out to certain Galileans, but in that he was doing nothing less than any other ruler, Jewish included. It is also considered that on one occasion he used Temple funds to build an aqueduct which he thought more useful and necessary.

There is still much controversy over the part he played in the trial of Jesus. The Christian scriptures indicate that he was under heavy pressure from the priests, was not anxious to provoke another riot and finally surrendered his prisoner to them, though making it clear that "I have found nothing to support your charges."

In 36 A.D. he was recalled from office and according to some accounts, banished to Vienne in Gaul for what was his offence. There he died, though whether from natural causes or by his own hand we do not know for certain. For Pilate's end, as for his beginning, has not been well documented, or at least the documents have not been found. Let's hope that, like the tablet the archaeologists stumbled across, they may be

Meanwhile perhaps the most famous of all references to Pilate occurs, one written by Anatole France, in which how one Acius Lamia chanced to meet the aging Pilate at a spa at Baiae. They engage in interesting conference. The talk turns to the old days in Judaea and Pilate's friend mentions a girl who joined a small company of followers of a young Nazarene named Jesus, who came from Nazareth.

"He was crucified for some crime, I don't quite know what," says Lamia, by the way, "Can you remember anything about the man?"

"Jesus?" Pilate responds, "Jesus — of Nazareth? I cannot call him to mind."

At that it may not surprise you to learn that Pilate is now a saint — in the Abyssinian Church, by the by, says Mrs. Wife, Procla — in the Greek Orthodox communion.

Have to Live With Red Cuba

New York Times

The gradual trend of the Castro regime toward a form of socialism that will be indistinguishable in time from some form of communism is now forecast by Premier Castro himself. He made this clear in long talks with The Times correspondent, Paul Smith, last week in Cuba.

The basic decision that a social revolution of the Cuban type could only be made by centralization of power came early. This meant a personal leader to start with, the steps from centralization to authoritarianism to totalitarianism followed. The existence of the Cuban Communist movement and the fact that Cuba is under effective trade, financial and technical help from the Soviet bloc if Cuba were in conflict with the United States as she would be necessary by the invasion on the part of the Cuban exiles.

The invasion as we know, was an utter fiasco. The Castro regime is in time firmer and entrenched and so completely allied to the Soviet bloc that there is no possibility of overthrowing or displacing Castro, short of armed invasion by American marines—which is unthinkable except in the unlikely possibility event of establishment of a Russian base there, and then we would need a good deal more than the marines.

This situation leaves us with the unpleasant necessity of finding it possible to live with a Communist-type regime in Cuba so long as the latter does not try forcibly to spread its ideas. At the same time, and this is true under any circum-

When Needle Was Precious

Montreal Gazette

The days when a darning needle was a possession beyond price were recalled at a recent meeting of the Aylmer Historical Society.

This meeting had to consider whether the society should take the darning needle to the Government of Canada, when the nation's centenary is celebrated in Ottawa in 1967. Some members were concerned that the society might not get it back.

The question may be asked: what can be considered about a darning needle.

Jack Lemire, president of the Aylmer Historical Society, told how the needle came from England in 1815 and was brought over by Mrs. Ben Simmons when her ox-bullocks. It was the only one among the new settlers in that year.

This darning needle had to serve 50 square miles of the then wilderness for the period it was rotated. The number of days it was allowed to remain with any family depended upon the family's size. If there were seven members of a family to a log cabin, it could stay five days, and so on, until all the needs of the area were served.

If a settler's wife kept the needle longer than the allotted time, or allowed a speck of rust on it, she was considered a thief and was shunned. She would have to do some special penance before she would be allowed to have it again.

Steel was a precious metal to the pioneers. In these days when the prosperity of a nation depends on millions of tons of steel, it is a contrast to recall that a steel axe so much value was placed upon a piece of steel so slender, but so extremely rare, and so indispensably useful.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY
DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS.

STUMBLING

St. Paul in his Epistle to the Romans (14:21) warned his fellow Christians not to do anything that may cause others to stumble.

It is well for us to note that he does not warn his followers against doing something that may cause others to fall, but to stumble. Stumbling is the first circumstance in the painful act of falling. We stumble, then sprawl. If stumbling could have been avoided, then painful and perhaps injurious falling would have been prevented.

Christian morality is based on the principle that the place to stop evil is at its source. Keep evils from getting started, was our Lord's constant warning. Control anger and there will be no murder. Control thoughts and furtive glances and there will be no adultry. In Paul's warning to the Romans, he was speaking of the eating of certain food and drinking of wine. He warned Christian converts against tempting their fellow converts to eat food which they had been brought up to regard as ceremonially unclean. Also he warned against the danger of encouraging other people to drink wine, which was the only intoxicating drink of that day.

Watch out, he said, lest you cause a brother to stumble — not to fall, but to stumble. We know today that one out of every ten persons who start to drink ends up an alcoholic or a problem drinker. Be careful, says Scripture, lest you lead others to stumble — and we might add, in view of the many bars in modern Russia, more particularly your own children.

Strictly Personal

Feminine Approach Is Unique

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

A handy little guidebook that nobody seems to have written yet would be a pocket dictionary of phrases, translating Feminese into English for the husbands.

Ordinarily, it takes a husband several years to decipher what his wife is saying and what he is saying to her. This little guidebook would permit him to become expert at marital double-talk in a few days.

For example, when a wife asks after a party, "But did you think she was really pretty?" a husband is supposed to answer, "No, not really." What this wife means by this oblique question is that the woman under discussion is undeniably pretty, but her character is so loathesome, any clear-thinking, outstanding husband could see right through her "surface" prettiness.

Again, when a wife tries on an old frock and inquires wistfully, "I wonder if this dress still becomes me?" she is not asking about the dress, but about herself — and the put on too much weight? Is her age beginning to show? Has childbearing done her in? The trained and seasoned husband should quickly reassure her that she is going to buy a new one anyway, but concentrate on reassurances about youth, weight and the ripening charms of a woman who has gone through parturition.

Men, poor simple creatures, are used to obvious questions and blunt, direct answers. But when they enter the cobweb of matrimony, they must be prepared for a whole new linguistic work, so subtle and devious that only a Talleyrand would feel quite at home in it.

When a wife asks, in a particular tone of languor, "What should we have for dinner tonight?" — I can't think of a thing that sounds appealing!" the alert mate will immediately translate the question into the plaintive wail, "Let's go out for dinner tonight — I'm sick of meals!," and he will gallantly offer a night on the town before his wife is forced to drag the issue into the open.

For some obscure reason, a woman likes to believe that all ideas come from the husband; if she is forced to state them directly in plain American English, she feels she has lost even when she wins.

The female of the species is particularly fond of the lateral approach to basic matters — she sidles up to questions by way of far left field, and before the man is aware of what is happening, a casual remark about Aunt Hattie's old trunk in the attic has suddenly turned into a vigorous discussion of a trip to Europe next winter.

There are a lot of books on marital relations, most of them bad. But communication still is the key to a flourishing marriage and it's time some shrewd womanticist provided young husbands with a Dictionary of Feminese.

The Art of Getting Along With Bifocals

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Please write concerning bifocals. I'm on my third pair, and I wonder if others have the trouble I do. — Miss W.B."

Some people have trouble with bifocals just because they resent 'em — just as they resent wrinkles, silver streaks in the hair, and other signs that they've grown up.

Incidentally, if you don't want to give away your age, learn how to handle bifocals properly. Personally I don't care a rap. I'm now old I am, and proud of it. But one sure way of showing that you wear bifocals is to keep bobbing your head every time you switch from looking through the top part of the glasses, or looking through the bottom part to read fine print.

The trick if it deserves so dignified a term, is to move the eyes, not the head. Or if you still accustom yourself to the head, do it naturally, not jerkily.

There's no give-away in looking down to read something and no doing, looking through the lower part of the glasses.

There is, to be sure, a little difficulty at first, in getting used to curbs and stairways, but once you are accustomed to that, there's no great problem in any other use of bifocals.

Some people, because of their jobs, need sharp vision at a point between near and far. The range less than the 12 or 18 inches at which we hold a book or newspaper, and out to the "distant vision" which can be anything from 10 feet to the horizon.

For such individuals, a good solution is available — trifocals, with segments of the glasses ground to give sharp vision at three ranges.

Another solution is one which some people call using "double two pairs of glasses, one for reading, one for far vision. This seems like a lot of bother, keeping track of two pairs, but regardless of my opinion, I know that some people prefer it that way.

Of course a great many people don't need glasses for far vision, but only for close work, like reading the telephone book. For them, reading glasses alone are adequate. Or, if they have bifocals, the upper part of the glasses is just plain glass, not grounds a prescription.

Anyway I repeat what I said in the beginning I think Miss W. B., need glasses for far vision trouble with bifocals, will probably find that the "art" of getting along with them begins with accepting the fact that as we grow to maturity a tremendous number of us need reading glasses. It isn't a disease; it isn't "weak eyes." It's just that the muscles which focus the lenses of the eyes for us can't exert the pressure needed to focus the telephone like the shape needed to read small type. After all, eyes were designed when books didn't exist.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What is the best treatment for hangnail? Please don't laugh. I have raw, bleeding hangnails, and cracked, chipped nails continually. I use the advertised remedies don't help. Besides being ugly, the condition is painful. — Mrs. R. R."

Remedies aren't likely to be the answer unless you mean by the basic step — which is adequate but careful manicuring. The cuticle tends to grow up with the nail. Softer the skin by soaking fingers often, gently push cuticle back with a clean orange wood stick.

Note to D. E. E. : As long as you are in good health, by all means give blood. Being a donor does not harm you: it does, however, mean that you should allow enough time for your body to replenish the amount given.

THE PACKSACK

By GREGORY CLARK

The explosion of world population is terrifying the conservationists half as much as the explosion of outdoor-luxury tourists and campers is worrying cottage owners in formerly secluded and idyllic little Muskaways in the backwoods.

A colleague of mine who has had a cottage for thirty-five years on a formerly almost inaccessible lake except by vertical spirits like himself who were willing to go to a lot of labor and expense to reach the lake over cordurory lumber road is grieved to find canoes and outboard boats on the lake and tent camps in his shores. Seeing a party of anglers camped for lunch on the point just back of his cottage, he went in a fury to remonstrate with them.

"Please be sure to put out your fire," he said. "Last year a party had the point with their fire and this bush caught fire."

"Do you think I am a fool, head?" demanded the head man of the party.

Do you really reioned my friend. "That the fellow who left his fire last year thought he was a fathead?"

When the party departed he went around to inspect the point. He found two sticks of stove wood beside the fireplace, and a new can of beans. The stove wood from the woodpile at the rear of his cottage.

START AFRESH

Every race is from scratch. That is, from an equal footing. The loser must take his chance for success with the rest.

But in time that loser will be the winner.

The good sport is the one who smiles and says he will take that chance, and he will.

Every day we start another race, another year, another life. But even with this assurance, many of us carry over the mistakes of our former defeats and discouragements into the new day.

What a world of men and women this would be if we could all start afresh each day!

It isn't an easy thing to obliterate the trend of our thoughts, the scars of our mistakes and blunders, but it is entirely possible for us to keep from as reminders to walk straight and keep our eyes open, face front, look ahead and start afresh as though life had just been under our care.

Keep starting afresh. Over and over again start afresh. And some day our life itself will take upon itself freshness and beauty and strength. You will find that the mistakes of the past, even the occasions of your rebirth.

We are too much troubled about the mistakes and regrets of pains of our daily life. We think of them as the result of unnecessary beings with which we must consort in greater or less degree. As a matter of fact, we should pass them by, put freshness into our imagination, and will our bodily servants to clean house — to start afresh.

It is never too late to mend, to start afresh.

A Life For Living

Responsive and Responsible

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

James Boswell in his memorable biography of Doctor Samuel Johnson tells us that Johnson spent all his days under the shadow of one stupendous text which hung over him like a daily, judgment. This was the text: "Unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required."

Every thoughtful decent person feels himself judged by that statement of Our Lord. Like Doctor Johnson he feels responsive to what has been given him and he feels responsible for what is required of him. In order to make good in life, we must be both responsive and responsible.

How the mother watches her infant child for the lithl signs of response to her care. When that first smile of recognition steals across the baby's face, the other's heart bounds with joy. The teacher in school may be irritated by a mischievous pupil, but she is baffled by a child who shows no response. When a pupil begins to respond, the learning process starts.

Perhaps you have tried to entertain an unresponsive guest. You have taken him around your city and shown him all the things of which your townspeople are proud. Yet he shows so response. It is rather irritating, isn't it? It is exhausting business trying to kindle a fire of enthusiasm under a "dead pan" face.

One of Jesus' most difficult problems was in dealing with unresponsive people. We can almost hear the note of exasperation in His cry, "Having eyes, see ye not? Having ears, hear ye not?" He went around pouring out the passion of His soul for his oppressed and suffering people while the well-to-do and comfortable looked on unconcerned, until finally He shouted, "Woe to them that are full!"

Christ made and makes men more alive to nature. We walked through the fields with His countrymen who were longing to see the ancient glory of Solomon revived in their land, and he said, "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin; and yet I say unto you that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

Christ also makes life fullermore alive to human nature. He met one day by the temple treasury a poor widow putting in her gift of two mites — an act which the average person would have passed without notice. But Jesus saw the significance of common things and beyond the overtones of a seemingly humdrum existence.

Jesus helps His followers to see the meanings beyond the appearances, the heroic fortitude of uncomplaining sufferers, the smile of human kindness given by unselfish persons in trouble places, the human appeal which Jane Addams could find in the dirtiest slum, and the lovable in unlovely people.

We in the United States are about to celebrate our nation's birthday. Firecrackers are boys' play, and a fleeting show. But fitting our own imaginations in a man's job — and a needed one. Let's rekindle our appreciation of the blessings around us.

Has marriage gone a bit stale? Any fellow who can afford it can ignore the brand and seek temporary thrills away from home. It doesn't take brains to do that. But to rediscover the romance of one's own marital love is a real achievement. Let's be more responsive to the life partners for whom we are responsible.

Silence has reigned too long before the Vermont farmer broke it by saying to his wife as he sat whittling on the porch, "Do you know, Sarah, you have meant so much to me that sometimes its almost more than I can stand not to tell you about it." Silence sometimes is golden, but sometimes it is leaden.

Let's wake up the wonders of our home towns. To be sure, Main Street gets a bit monotonous and the little cliques of the community often seem petty. But we do not have to be always running away on trips in order to see life.

With our wonderful means of communication we have the same news and the same styles on Main Street and on Fifth Avenue. We can blend large outlooks with local loyalties. And that is what makes a strong citizenry.

Stories of Famous Hymns

O MASTER, LET ME WALK WITH THEE

O Master, let me walk with Thee
In lowly paths of service free;
Tell me Thy secret, help me bear
The strain of toil, the fret of care.

Help me the slow of heart to move
By some clear, winning word of love;
Teach me the wayward feet to stay
And guide them in the homeward way.

Teach me Thy patience; still with Thee
In closer, dearer company,
In work that keeps faith sweet and strong,
In trust that triumphs over wrong.

In hope that sends a shining ray
Far down the future's broadening way;
In peace that only Thou canst give,
With Thee, O Master, let me live.

Weddings

LEPPINEN—THOMPSON

On Saturday, June 10th, 1961, at 4.30 p.m., in Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, the marriage of Ada Lewis Thompson, Belleville, and Elmar Eino Leppinen, R.R. 1, Worthington, Ont., was solemnized in a double-ring ceremony by the Rev. Duncan G. McFarlane. Baskets of white Shasta mums, snapdragons and lilies adorned the chancel.

Mrs. J. B. Ledingham, church organist, provided the wedding music. The soloist, Mrs. Douglas Sharp, sang "The Lord's Prayer" before the ceremony, and "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register.

The bride, given in marriage by her son, Mr. John A. Thompson, was becomingly attired in a French blue organza ensemble and matching organza hat with white accessories. She wore a white orchid corsage and carried a white Bible.

Miss Ella Paige of Ottawa, maid of honor, was beautifully gowned in a dusty-rose organza sheath with a full back panel. She wore a matching hat and white accessories and a corsage of gold-tipped bronze.

Mr. George Goforth of R.R. 1 Worthington was best man; Mr. Jack Layne of Peterborough and Mr. Richard Leppinen of Sudbury, both nephews of the bridegroom, acted as ushers.

The reception was held in the church parlors where the guests were received by Mrs. John Thompson, daughter-in-law of the bride, wearing a white linen sheath with matching three-quarter lace coat and accessories. Her flowers were a corsage of pink and white tiny tea roses and feathered carnations. She was assisted by Mrs. Irene Goforth, sister of the bridegroom, of Worthington, wearing a mauve linen sheath dress with white accessories and a corsage of white 'mums.

The bridal table was beautifully decorated and centred with a three - storey pillared wedding cake, crested with a nosegay of rosebuds and lily-of-the-valley.

Out of town guests attended from Sudbury, Worthington, Copper Cliff, Ottawa, Peterborough, Whitby, Toronto, Frankford and Highland Grove, Ont.

For the wedding trip to the Adirondack Mountains and Lake Placid, the bride chose a gold linen sheath with a matching tweed-cardigan jacket and olive green accessories.

The bride was entertained prior to her marriage, by the staff of the Unemployment Insurance office; at an afternoon tea at the home of Mrs. Fisher, and also a presentation by the Bethlehem White Shrine.

Mr. and Mrs. Leppinen will be residing in Espanola, Ontario.

Leather Guild Enjoys Dinner

The Leather Guild of the Belleville Arts and Crafts Society celebrated the end of a successful season recently by entertaining their husbands and wives to a turkey dinner at the Hastings Club near Maple. In spite of inclement weather and slippery roads, some eighteen persons made their way through the bush to the beautiful estate in the midst of hunting and fishing territory to enjoy the hospitality of mine host, Mr. Robert Burns, and as excellent meal prepared by his chef.

The members were much delighted with this unusual conclusion to a year's work and most grateful to their president, Jack Layton, for arranging it.

Seventeen pupils graduated from Picton Public School with honor standing of 75 per cent and over. They received special awards from Supervising Principal Carl P. Reid. The honor pupils are shown above, left to right, seated; Kathryn Dean, Donna Lou Miller, Lynda Morrison, Susan Nourse, Linda Martin, Linda Lou Hobson, Janice Minaker. Standing: David Runnels, William Bundle, Tony Prinzen, David Riddle, Christine Carter, Janet Hamblin, William Pearce, Richard Dolmage, Wayne Fyffe. (Hodgson, Picton).

By HARRIET STEVENS

The celebration of our national holiday seems to have become very vague. This vagueness set in with the controversy over the name of the holiday. Canada Day was proposed, but it did not catch on—it was a bit awkward to say. It is most often referred to today as the First or July.

Dominion Day is being used by many people again; surely we can reason it through that we Canadians in a way dominion "from sea to sea" as the motto on our national crest says. It is for this that our big national centenary celebrations are being given such emphasis.

It was a coincidence that within the last week, we have had two young people born and the other who has come to Canada from Europe—talk about being a Canadian. The native-born Canadian has just recently returned from an extensive trip taking in some of the Pacific islands, New Zealand, Australia, Singapore, Hong Kong and Japan. She said, "I was happy to be home again" and it's wonderful to be a Canadian. A Canadian passport can open the doors so easily wherever you go."

The other woman said they were going for a business trip to England and Europe this summer and she added: "For me this will be the last time; we love it in Canada and we would not now live any other place." After this trip, I want to see every bit of this country."

This particular family also believes that the Quinte district is the best part to take place in Canada, too. One of the living relatives is determined to stay here although in his particular line of work he could be in Canada or elsewhere. This lady showed me with justifiable pride her son's report card which placed him first in his class with an average of 97 per cent.

It is interesting to read that the president of the Fathers of Confederation Memorial Foundation, Dr. Frank MacKinnon, has announced that the construction of a national memorial will be started in Charlottetown in April of 1962. The edifice, to be known as the Fathers of Confederation Building, will take the form of a cultural centre and will include an auditorium of about 1,200 seats, art gallery, museum, archives and library. The Canada Council has already contributed money to establish a nation-wide architectural competition.

The memorial building is to be erected next to the Province House Building where the 1864 conference was held in a chamber which is nationally respected as the "Cradle of Confederation." It will occupy a block and a half, being the area embracing the old Market Square, the old post office and the public library, both of which will be demolished. April, 1964, is the goal set for its completion, and the official opening, at which Her Majesty may officiate, will be held during the first week of September, on the 100th anniversary of the conference that led to the union of the colonies into one great nation.

It is anticipated that the building will be truly national in character, the material, funds and ideas coming from the Federal Government and the Provincial Governments, as well as from private citizens and industry.

Cradle Roll Mothers Enjoy Talk on Ecuador

A most enjoyable time of fellowship was held on Wednesday afternoon when 32 Cradle Roll mothers and children met in the Sunday School rooms of the Alliance Church. Mrs. G. Willard, cradle roll superintendent, was in charge of the program and welcomed the mothers who were present.

The meeting opened with prayer by Mrs. L. Vardy and this was followed by the singing of hymns led by Mrs. W. Leonard. The speaker of the afternoon was Miss Cecil Smith, missionary from Ecuador, who gave a challenging message. She stressed particularly the needs of both mothers and children in Ecuador and told of many of their customs in bringing up children. After her message there was an opportunity given to ask Mrs. Smith questions concerning missionary work and this proved most interesting and helpful.

Mrs. Sandra Palmer closed the devotional part of the meeting and the ladies were then invited to the lower auditorium of the church to enjoy refreshments, convened by Mrs. L. Vardy.

While Mrs. Smith was speaking to the mothers the children were supervised in another room by Miss Pauline Clarke and Miss Joanne Rogers. Mrs. W. Leonard brought them their Bible story.

Following this, the children also enjoyed refreshments in their room.

St. Joseph's C.W.L. Hears Fine Convention Report

After a brief executive meeting, the general meeting of St. Joseph's C.W.L. was held in the school under the direction of the vice-president, Mrs. C. Murphy.

The opening prayers were led by the spiritual director, the Reverend J. J. Buckley, and minutes were heard from committee chairmen.

Mrs. H. Clarke informed members of two retreats to be held in the fall in Toronto and Ottawa. Anyone interested in participating in this worthwhile and spiritual project should contact Mrs. Clarke as soon as possible.

RERUM NOVARUM

Highlights of the annual convention which took place recently in Kingston, were reported by the delegates, Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. G. Whalen. The theme of the convention was "Rerum Novarum" to coincide with the theme of the 41st annual national convention.

Mrs. Whalen gave a detailed account on all activities during the business period. The information given by Mrs. Clarke was a C.W.L. membership of 4,630 in the Diocese of Kingston.

Mrs. Whalen, second delegate to the convention, spoke enthusiastically regarding the guest speaker, Miss Marguerite Burns, who is the national president of the C.W.L. Miss Burns, tall and stately, with vibrant personality, had captured the complete attention of her audience. She told of her visit to the Jubilee Congress in Rome which she attended as the official delegate from Canada. This was the Congress of the World Union of Catholic Women's Organizations.

The main theme was "The Catholic Woman, Instrument of Unity in Christ and His Church."

THREE WORLD HUNGERS

At the congress there were discussions on the three hungers of the world: physical hunger for food; spiritual hunger for faith; intellectual hunger for education. The Catholic woman must be the source and instrument of unity in the family and in social municipal, national and international life.

An address was given at the congress by the Reverend Fulton J. Sheen, who spoke on the three phases of motherhood, physical, spiritual and social.

Highlight of the congress was the audience of the delegates with the Holy Father, Pope John XXIII. Miss Burns spoke of the emotional reaction in the presence of His Holiness as though in the presence of sanctity itself. The audience lasted for 20 minutes.

NEW PARISH CHURCH

After these interesting and inspiring reports of the diocesan convention had been given by the delegates, the meeting was turned over to Father Quigley, who gave complete details on the contracts for the new parish church to be called "St. Joseph, the Worker." Completion of the building is expected by October.

Members were reminded of the annual bazaar to be held in the fall and were asked by Mrs. Quigley, who is doing the interviewing months towards another successful event this year.

Chi Rho Club Closes Season With Slob Party

The last regular meeting of Christ Church Chi Rhi Fellowship was a party — a rather unusual party. The notification, a ragged chunk of newsprint, informed all and sundry to come dressed as "a slob or slobette", which put the shindig in a classification considerably below a hard times party.

Prizes for the "worst dressed" went to Al Gardiner and Mary Legaal. Don Butcher and Herb Cavelier won the pie-eating contest and Norman Irwin was the most adept at handling a quarter with her feet.

Art Keliar decorated the hall (one member referred to the decorations as "something all over from a rummage sale"), and Kay Ingraham and Barb Kelsey supervised the musical portions of the evening. Al Gardiner handled the record player.

Refreshments for the evening were taken care of by Kay Ingraham, Marion Bailey, Betty Gardiner and Mary Legaal.

The only meeting slated for July will be a "Get Together Supper" to be held in memory of the Boyne.

Whatever It Is You Want New York City Can Provide

By Shirley And Bob Sloane

New York — Now that the New Yorkers have started to desert the city for the summer, thoughtfully making room for visitors, let's take an unhurried look at the non-tourist's New York.

RESTAURANTS — There are two kinds of restaurants in New York — for food, and for food plus display. Both will feed you well and both can be expensive. But for no-nonsense good eating, as well as a fighting chance for your pocket book, the first is your best bet.

You can go to the unpretentious kosher style delicatessen where the working people eat and have hot corned beef and salami and pickles and fresh homestyle bread as you'll find in nowhere else in the world. Or you can graduate to the likes of Lindy's, where the homestyle cooking is refined, lavishly served and still comparatively inexpensive.

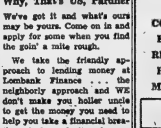
The Chinese restaurants here are better than they ever were in pre-Communist China. Together with the Italian restaurants some of which are at least as good as they ever were in sunny Napoli, even before the tourists, they offer the best bet for salvaging your budget and still dining as you never could in most North American cities.

WALKING EXPENSE

ACCOUNTS

The showy restaurants are popular almost entirely by virtue of big expense accounts. For conventional food, which is what they specialize in, there are many fine French restaurants at various price levels, rare outside of France.

Sticking to these unique gastronomic ventures will go a long way towards making your visit memorable as well as affordable.



Night clubs! Also for the human chief books, and generally not for the human stomach. A good rule is to go where there is only to offer esoteric or specialized entertainment. For what you have in New York, try Las Vegas.

The best guide in New York is a weekly magazine called Cue, which reviews restaurants, play, movies and current attractions.

HOTELS — For the budget minded, the small hotels on the side streets in the 40s and upper 50s are picks. Some good choices in the theatre district are the Taft and the Edison, both of which are commercial, but reasonable and well run.

For the more luxury type atmosphere, such hotels as the Essex House, St. Moritz and Barbizon Plaza facing Central Park, are moderate and comfortable.

Sophisticates these days prefer small elegant sort side hostelries like the Gramercy where singles start at $18 and every room has color TV), and the Sherry-Netherland and Pierre.

NEED A FRIEND WITH MONEY?
Why, That's US, Pardner
We've got it and what's ours may be yours. Come on in and apply for some when you find the spot you're ready.
We take the friendly approach to lending money at Lombank Finance . . . the neighborly approach and WE don't make you jump through hoops to get the money you need to help you take a financial breather. And we don't make you put up everything you've got to get a loan. So, come on in. Of course, if things have been real tough and your credit's maybe a mite shaky right now, we do not ask for security. Maybe, old car or some of the furnishings . . . and they don't have to be completely paid for yet, either.
So, stop in at LOMBANK if you're having a money problem.

ENTERTAINMENT — Tickets for the most hard-to-see plays can usually be had from agencies (most hotels have one) at a reasonable premium. If not, investigate the so-called off-Broadway houses, which often have less commercial and more beguiling shows.

You'll also find the largest choice of foreign movies in New York. For television shows, consult your local station at least before leaving. They can probably do more for you there than you can when you get here.

WHAT TO SEE — After you get Chinatown, the Empire State Building and the Statue of Liberty off your chest, try these for something different: World's Greatest Street

See Fifth Avenue, the world's greatest street, two ways — on foot and from a bus. Note the ponderous mansions of the old-line wealthy along Central Park, and gasp a while in Washington Square among the beatniks. The most expensive merchandise in the world is displayed for all to see in the glittering windows of the shops on Fifth Ave.

Ride out to Idlewild Airport and watch the majestic jets of every nation arrive from all over the world. It's an impressive place with its vast complex of terminal buildings and runways built over highways.

Ride the subway, especially if you've never done it before. A good place to go: the cantilevered bridge built on lower Broadway and Wall St.

Above all, walk wherever the spirit moves you. Its city is as varied from block to block as New York, none offers so much stimulation to the just plain curious — the noisy garment district of seventh Ave; the contrasting quiet and dignity of Murray Hill, a small town with skyscrapers; the view of the East River from the esplanade along the shore; the ocean liners nuzzling right up to the drive along the Henry Hudson Parkway; and the great apartment residences along the same highway.

For something unusual, try one of the Sunday walking tours of the Museum of the City of New York - (phone LEhigh 4-1672 for reservations, get Ex-50). They take small guided groups through little known but interesting, colorful and historic spots.

Shopping — Generally expensive but there isn't anything legally for sale anywhere in the world that you can't find in New York. The best bargains are at the discount houses, tops for luggage, photographic and sound equipment, clothes, appliances and sometimes jewelry, such as in Hong Kong or Houston, you've got to know what you're about. Among the most reliable bargain stores are S. Klein, Ohrbach's, Peerless Stores, and E. J. Korvette.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

Mrs. P. C. — I promised her family to introduce her around.

Muriel S. — I purposely sought a job in the city away from the pressures of home for me to marry one of my local suitors and settle down. What do I find, however, but that my mother has asked her old friend, Daisy, to keep an eye on me and see that I meet nice fellows.

Daisy is a darling, but she doesn't know me at all. She has put me through some 8gonised evenings, pairing me up with bores and goons. Maybe I'm too fussy, but I have a certain type of boy in mind and when I bump into him I'll recognize him. Mean while, Daisy's blind dates and very pointed dinner parties are wasting my time and upsetting me.

Mrs. P. C. — Muriel is as dear to me as my own. Her mother is my best friend, and, even though we are separated by half a country, we keep in close touch by mail, and by occasional trips.

When she told me that Muriel was leaving home to work in the city, I offered to be a second mother to her daughter. I knew that at 27, the girl was unhappy working in a small town bank, and eager for wider contacts, including introductions to men of the world. She's ambitious and the idea of marrying a home town boy, without meeting others, didn't appeal to her.

Despite her objections, I know she's had no dates except the ones I've arranged for her.

The Council — We're with Muriel, at 27, and in New York. Well-intentioned Mrs. C. is using the "desperation" method that might be in order when a girl is, say, 39 and alone in a whistle-stop town. Time then, perhaps, to call in the reserves, the marines and "super powers".

Despite the absence of a "village person", big cities of 7 or 8 countless ways for unattached people to mingle and become unnecessarily "attached." These awkward parties where the modern bride has it much easier than when I was married. Today the bride rings the dinner bell with assurance and confidence that the quick and easy, prepared and frozen foods at her command will be delicious and ready on time.

"Well, from what I hear, the young husbands are sort of missed on," declared Mr. Smith. "They say, because of all these mixes and frozen foods, they haven't a clue as to whether their wives can really cook or not. On their own, that is."

"The men needn't worry and the girls shouldn't fret," insisted Mrs. Smith. "Their brides won't have frightening experiences like the pre-frozen-food bride whose cook book said to "rewet crumbs and knead with care" and what bitter tears she wept when the bunny's fur remained on the rolls and the chicken feathers."

"H'mm!" Mr. Smith grunted reluctantly. "I look at it the time the bride nowadays will have on her hands? What will she do with it?"

"Oh, never fear, she'll find plenty to do," his wife assured him. "For one thing, if she has any sense, she'll have time to whip up one of those new satin vests, so popular with you men just now. One salesgirl told me she knew of one wife who made her husband a lovely one from some brocade left over from a chair being upholstered with it! Isn't that original."

Mr. Smith admitted it sounded like fun. He knew a thing or two about the difficulties and hazards of experience for brides to eventually learn that all most men want is a good steak, potatoes and for dessert, just a piece of pie, no fancy stuff."

"In your case, it's walnut cake, isn't it?" said Mrs. Smith gave her husband a special smile. "Tell the folks about the walnut cake they've admired." and together they described how Mr. Smith left a basket of walnuts in the woodshed, to ripen, for his favorite cake, then quite forgot them. Meanwhile, the mice toyed with the walnut and the result was a very lacy, swiss-cheese effect, with holes bored (or gnawed) all over the shells in a most artistic fashion, and clean as a whistle, inside.

"A just dessert, indeed, the cake for which they were responsible was made, though a matter easily remedied. But we've had lots of fun with the shells, which make wonderful key-rings. You find it without fail, in your purse," she boasted proudly, as though her husband's helplessness was the most delightful mistake in the world. Together, their spill of nostalgic laughter implied the joy of shared experiences, be they comic or not, a rich harvest, "just desserts" so to speak such as only a post-altar mass of happiness of 30 years can reap.

"Ha, ha," exclaimed Mrs. Smith returning again to the subject matter of bride and desserts, "until I relish the recipe I cut out the other day from Earl Wrightman's column in the paper (the Gault Reporter) and thus we have it, she read in aloud:

"It has been told that a woman from Virginia while visiting New York City, dined at the Waldorf-Astoria and at the end of a very elaborate dinner was served what was known as "Red Cake". The cake was so delicious that the woman asked the waiter if it would be possible to secure the recipe. The waiter reported the inquiry to the chef who in turn requested that the name and address of the patron be secured and the recipe would be forwarded by mail. Received with the request was also an invoice for $250, and upon referring the incident to a lawyer, the woman was informed the amount of $250 had to be paid to the chef for value received. We received the recipe indirectly from a friend who also got it indirectly from a Preston party who whom the woman from Virginia was visiting. Now aren't you lucky. Here it is, gratis:

½ cup Crisco or butter
1 cup white sugar
2 eggs
2 tsp. red cake coloring
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon vinegar
1 teaspoon soda
1 tablespoon cocoa
2½ cups cake flour
1 cup buttermilk

Cream sugar, eggs and shortening. Add cake coloring, vanilla and vinegar. Add dry ingredients and buttermilk. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes only. Cook.

Dressing: Cook one cup milk, ½ cup flour until like sauce. Let cool. Beat until fluffy one cup white sugar and two-thirds butter. Add to milk and flour.

Then Mrs. Smith went on to explain that Mrs. Wilfrid Nember, Cathay Street, Galt, had written to Mr. Wertzline to say that she had tried out that recipe for "Red Cake"... and from her experience she ascertained that 1½ tablespoonful of red coloring would be plenty and that the baking requires more than a half hour."

JUST DESSERTS

"What is the price of Experience? Do men buy it for a song? Or wisdom for a dance in the street? No, it is bought with the price of all that a man hath."—William Blake

"Well, June's wedding bells, by now, no doubt, will have given way to the patter of little feet," stated the husband of the couple, whom we shall name the Smiths. We had come to call, for they had just celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, and were enjoying a delightful hour with them in garden chairs beneath a shady tree on their lawn.

"Quite so," agreed his wife, softly, "though I must confess, the modern bride has it much easier than when I was married. Today the bride rings the dinner bell with assurance and confidence that the quick and easy, prepared and frozen foods at her command will be delicious and ready on time."

"Well, from what I hear, the young husbands are sort of missed on," declared Mr. Smith. "They say, because of all these mixes and frozen foods, they haven't a clue as to whether their wives can really cook or not. On their own, that is."

Today Won't Come Again

By ALMA MASON

If each of us were to say upon arising each morning, "This may be my last day on earth, I must make the most of it," how sharp and clear each small event of the day would become. Not a single minute would be wasted. Not a evil thought would possess the mind. No criticism or envy or selfishness or greed would darken the windows and doorways of the precious house.

All the kindly, thoughtful deeds we mean to accomplish "some other day" would be hurriedly gathered and distributed. The friendly nod or pressed, the praise not uttered, the love not shown would suddenly be assembled into a gigantic heap, too huge to be fenced or take the confines of a few precious hours.

Someone said to Pasteur that he lived as if each day might be his last on earth. He replied that believing so made no goal unattainable; no wall of endeavor insurmountable.

Edison filled each waking hour to capacity. He slept infrequently and ate sparingly. His unfailing concern was the happiness of mankind. Each day became a day of great price, more costly than its predecessor.

I recently read a poignant story written by a woman dying of cancer. It was published after her death by her family. She told of how each second of her day gathered momentum in value. Each hour became a richer, another ruby or diamond to the slender chain of her ebbing life.

She daily thanked God for shelltering her with a cloak of protection as she walked along with earth and heaven. She saw her husband and children as she had never before seen them. Each small consideration and thoughtful attention of her behalf rang a million silver bells of gratitude in her willing heart. Each sunset, each bird, each green summer field, a lovely gift. Each moment of pain became a promised ecstacy of the world to come.

Heartache, illness and disappointment are measured into the beautiful gift of many of our days. If we say as we reach out to grasp a new dawning, "Here is a new day. I will live it as ifcmorrow will never come. I will fill it with beauty and love and kindliness," life will take on a magnificent new lustre and become full and rich and happy beyond our most exalted dreams.

Tomorrow, dear, may never come.

But if, perchance, it should dawn clear and bright — With promise of long hours, I will soon slip into night.

Today is here — each hour a jewel

Priceless, to cherish on a slender chain;

Polish each gleaming pearl;

Today won't come again.

Readers' Friday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

LETTER:

I'm glad you enjoyed the recipe for the jam turnovers. I have just cut out your column so I am sending along a recipe for unbaked lemon squares. They have to be made at least 8 hours ahead (the recipe says 12) so the moisture of the filling will go into the graham crackers.

LEMON SQUARES
(Courtesy Elinore Van V.)

Place graham crackers close together on a cookie sheet with an edge — set aside equal amount of crackers for top. Filling: Mix in a saucepan; 1 can sweetened condensed milk, 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind, ½ cup lemon juice, 2 egg yolks. Cook and stir until mixture thickens. Spread on crackers. Cover with crackers set aside. Ice all over with a very thin icing (so they won't be too sweet). Place in refrigerator for at least 8 hours (12 preferably). Cut into squares. Following edge of crackers, or cutting these in halves if desired . . . Elinore Van V.

ANSWER:

Thank you again Elinore. The unbaked cookie addict will welcome your Lemon Squares.

LETTER:

I enjoy your column immensely and use so many of your recipes. It is very interesting hearing of your family and we extend our very best wishes to the newly married couple — we feel that we know them and shall be interested in hearing from them time to time.

Rylstone

RYLSTONE — Mr. Bill McKeown of Hamilton spent the weekend with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKeown, Paul and Agnes. Miss Eleanor Baxter was also a guest at the same home.

Several from here attended the shower for Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Barker, in Springbrook Orange Hall, on Saturday evening.

Fred Petherick sustained two broken toes one day last week when a silo block fell on his foot while loading his truck.

Harold Spencer, Campbellford, and his nephew, Bob Spencer, supplied bagpipe music for the "Decoration Service" at Stirling cemetery on Sunday, under the auspices of the Odd Fellows.

Mrs. Jessie Finch and son, Earl, visited Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McKeown and family on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Pollock, Glen, Nancy and Tommie, of Burnbrae, were Sunday guests of his sister, Mrs. Percy Reid, her husband and family.

Mrs. Carmen Thomson, Kathy, Karen and Stevie, and their aunt, Mrs. Ellis Jones, called on Mrs. Will Rutherford on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. Harry Seymour, who has ministered at Rylstone, Sprucedale and Sanwood charges since last autumn, delivered his farewell sermon on Sunday morning at Rylstone United Church.

There was a good attendance and all expressed their regret at parting with Mr. and Mrs. Seymour so soon. They have been called to Gore's Landing.

At the close of the service, Mr. and Mrs. Seymour were presented with an etched aluminum cake or cookie basket. Both replied feelingly, inviting all to visit them at Gore's Landing.

The Seymours have been popular in their short sojourn here, and all wish them health and happiness in their new home and church.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Petherick visited their daughters and their families, Mr. and Mrs. Wally Jackson and daughters, also Mr. and Mrs. Roly Jackson and daughters in Oshawa on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. James Palmer, Mrs G. W. Jones and Mrs. Thelma Tulloch, Stirling, were Sunday evening callers with Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Jones.

The Union School pupils and their teacher, Mrs. Cora Reid, held the annual school picnic at Chard's Bridge, on Monday. An item of interest on the program was the presentation of a book to Mr. Seymour, in appreciation of his religious training in their school. He and Mrs. Seymour stopped off for the picnic en route to their new charge at Gore's Landing.

Schools is about over for another term. The high school students will know by the time this reaches print whether they "made the grade" or not. Here's hoping all did.

The Ninth Line School will hold its picnic at Oak Lake on Wednesday. Mrs. Miller is leaving and her place will be taken by Mrs. Jim Heath of Marmora after summer vacation. Mrs. Reid is remaining at the Union School.

Mrs. Jeff Jennison Bailieboro, and Mrs. Teresa Rutherford, Campbellford, attended the Riley - Rutherford wedding in Marmora, on Saturday, and the reception in Campbellford, and spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. William Rutherford.

Can Girl Share Cost?

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I make as much money as my boy friend does. Sometimes I think it would be nice for us to go to a very special play (when it comes to our city), or to have dinner at one of the more expensive restaurants. As he can really afford right now is a cheap movie.

I have hinted that I could contribute to such an evening, but he ignores this and I don't want to do the wrong thing or make him feel I am being critical. Don't you think there are times when a girl could contribute to her own good time?—SHARON.

DEAR SHARON:—For a special occasion, like a birthday or graduation, couples sometimes pool their "special" money. Tactfully telling him you want to share expenses for this one time, and that others do it, might work.

For the most part it is better to carry your share by providing dinner for him at your home or by inviting him in after an outing for coffee.

DEAR DORIS:—I am 43 and have never married. My job as a salesman is one I fell into accidentally when I came out of school and while I make a living at it, I'm no howling success. Doubt if I could support a family if I had one.

Do you think I should give up the idea of looking for a wife, and think even now of finding out what kind of a job would suit me better? If I changed horses in midstream, it might mean a long period of lean rations before I get going again.—BRIEF CASE.

DEAR BRIEF CASE:—Finding your niche in your forties is better than not at all. You have special talents. Spot them and use them. If this means taking further training and you can manage it at all, do it. Your work can be fun instead of drudgery.

But you don't have to be a hermit. Keep looking for that elusive mate. As you grow older you'll need her company more and more.

DEAR DORIS:—What about little white lies? Don't you think there are times when we cannot be strictly honest or we will hurt someone's feelings?—SOFTY.

DEAR SOFTY:—You don't have to be brutally frank.

When an acquaintance asks whether you like her hat, and is obviously delighted with it herself, you don't have to tell her it looks like a dishpan on her. You can say you like the color, or that it is a lovely dressy straw, or mention something you do like. This will probably satisfy her.

If your good friend, or your sister, wants your opinion, that's different. You don't deliver a crushing blow when you say, tactfully, that the hat doesn't bring out her best points, that a smaller one would be more becoming.

We count on honesty from those who care about us, or we wouldn't ask. So-called little white lies can make habits in us which later produce big black lies, by dulling our consciences and sense of true-or-false.

Science at Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: A rocket ride over the Atlantic, a U-2 plane over the Arctic, and a coming rocket ride for man around the globe.

OFF WE GO, AGAIN

Within a month another U.S. astronaut may ride a rocket some 300 miles over the Atlantic—but this time he will have a first-hand report of what to expect.

Reports from Alan B. Shepard's pioneering flight showed these moments of stress:

During the rocket's powered climb, the astronaut feels the gravity forces build slowly until his body weighs six times as much as it does at rest. Then comes weightlessness for 4½ minutes when he weighs nothing at all.

Then as the rocket plunges downward and is slowed suddenly by the earth's blanket of air, the astronaut again feels a sudden gravity buildup, and for seconds his body weighs up to 16 times its normal weight.

DOMESTIC DUST

A high-flying U-2 airplane swept through the arctic sky last November on a strange mission: Collecting dust.

It brought back what scientists believe may be the tiniest of meteorites ever collected—in a sense the dustiest of dust.

On collecting films, the plane found at some 60,000 feet large numbers of the puny dust particles which measured less than 200 - millionths of an inch apiece.

Scientists say the micrometeoroid particles are 1,000 times smaller than the expected size of micro-meteorites. They might be a product of fragmented larger meteorites—or, as scientists believe, they may have originated as moon dust.

DOWN, BUT FAST

When the first U.S. astronaut orbits the earth—perhaps this year—he will use a group of small rockets to slow his speed so that his capsule can begin its downward trip.

If the space capsule's speed is orbit is some 17,300 miles an hour, it will have to slow down only some 300 miles an hour to fall out of orbit and down toward the earth.

Some new chemicals used to combat insects and control plant growth are dangerous to wildlife and even domestic animals, scientists report. Within a week after some of the chemicals are applied, three-fourths of the animal deaths occur, a report said.

VICTOR STANDARD 4-DOOR SEDAN

ALL THE LUXURY!

Every Vauxhall has its share of quality appointments but the Cresta tops them all. Here is the ultimate in spacious 6-passenger comfort—in right-size driving perfection at a sensible price.

ALL THE PERFORMANCE!

This is especially true of Vauxhall's Velox and Cresta series with their responsive 6-cylinder power, which also offer the refinement of famous Hydra-Matic automatic transmission as an extra-cost option.

ALL THE CONVENIENCE!

Vauxhall's famous for it. Such thoughtful things as four wide-opening doors, steering column gear shift, are standard—at no extra cost! And Vauxhall boasts a family-sized trunk, too.

ALL THE COMFORT!

Generous, foam cushioned comfort and a smooth, level-ride suspension are standard features on every Vauxhall. Big, wraparound windows, front and rear, make driving safer, more pleasurable.

ALL THE VERSATILITY!

This goes for Vauxhall's handsome Estate Wagon in particular, with its practical interior and fold-down rear seat. A real boon for family travel and businessmen.

ALL THE ECONOMY!

With Vauxhall it starts with low initial price. And on the move you save every mile thanks to Victor's thrifty 4-cylinder power and rugged dependability.

A GENERAL MOTORS VALUE.

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Your Ideas About Retirement May Change as Day Draws Near

By THOMAS COLLINS

Here is a progress report on but I do have to pay on what the retirement of one individual he company contributes? Hugh Mr. Jones. Perhaps you know You say I'll get $114 Social! it.

Twelve Months Before—It's Retirement: "They're not going to get me into that gold watch routine. It's just a scrubbing salve that those bloodless, profit-mad companies rub on sentimental, old men. I'll have my pension papers in order and be out of here before they know what's happened."

Nine Months Before: "I'm not going to retire. The best part of my working career will start when I leave here — with them, my company certainly much more money than I ever does treat its retiring employee made here. My plans are about as well. It has offered to let worked out. . . No, I can't tell the company lawyer help me you what they are. They are all of a confidential nature. But I can tell you I won't be working with such squares as I've been with here...."

Eight Months Before: "My friends all tell me they don't believe I'm nearly 65. It's not that I'm going to one of those pension towns and sitting in the sun would be an awful life. Don't you think so?"

Five Months Before: "It's this the Personnel Office? My boss said I could find out about my benefits there...On my pension, you say I get the first check on the first of the month immediately after I retire? Good. And the hospital insurance? Oh, I have to transfer it over to a personal policy? And at a higher rate? I didn't know that....

"That's good about the vacation credit. You mean I'll get an extra check for three-weeks' salary if I don't take my vacation before I retire? That's generous. But no severance pay? No. That's in the pension? Yes...

"No, I am not interested in Social Security. I have some plans in the works. Oh yes, there will be income, much too much for me to collect Social Security. Well, I think I've got How's that? If I don't apply now and then don't get the income...I'll lose some payments? ...What did you say the Social Security address is?"

Four Months Before: "Didn't Will Smith and his wife retire to some town in Arizona? You don't know what it costs a couple to live down there, do you? Have you got Will's address?"

YOU'RE NICE, BUT...."

Three Months Before: "You're nice, but I don't really want a flury about me in the house organ. You think I should? Well...."

Two Months Before: "I hate to bother you Personnel people again but could you tell me a few more details about my benefits? You say my pension is going to be $187 a month. Now, I don't have to pay income taxes on the part of it that I contributed to the pension plan,

Birth of New Cigaret Set Back 3 Months

OTTAWA (CP)—The birth of the genuine king size Canadian cigaret was set back three months Thursday night.

The proposed last-minute making the longer cigaret possible was altered by the government on the floor of the Commons—deferring the effective date to April 1, 1962, from the original Jan. 1.

Finance Minister Fleming explained that cigaret manufacturers sought the delay to give them more time to install the machinery necessary to turn out the king-sized product.

Canadian king-sized cigarets at present are longer than ordinary cigarets—not because they contain more tobacco but because the filter is long.

Under the tax change proposed by the government manufacturers can increase the amount of tobacco in each cigaret without being liable for higher taxes.

Mr. Fleming said tobacco growers had sought the amendment, which would mean an increase of eight or nine per cent a year—or 10,000,000 pounds—in the amount of tobacco purchased in Canada.

Parliament At a Glance

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Thursday, June 29, 1961

Government fiscal and economic policies were approved 116 to 35 in the fifth day of budget debate.

Conservative Leader Pearson wound up a scathing Liberal attack on government tax and economic policy with a demand for an immediate general election.

The theme of an early general election was taken up by succeeding Liberal speakers in the dying hours of budget debate.

Liberal MP Judy LaMarsh of the Niagara Falls launched an attack on Prime Minister Diefenbaker—"the 1961 model of hatchetation."

Friday, June 30

The Commons meets at 11 a.m. in debate on budget resolutions—the 166th day of debate. The Senate is adjourned until 8 p.m. Tuesday.

SOCIAL REFORMER DIES

Angry Eichmann Denies Ordering Jews Shot

JERUSALEM — Adolf Eichmann flared into anger for the first time in his trial here today as he denied giving the order that 4-yr. athletic Dawidowski and "absolutely impermissible."

Nevertheless, diplomats experienced in Chinese affairs see a possibility the Geneva talks will be willing to negotiate a Laotian agreement which would leave small Indochina kingdom a degree of neutrality.

They also see the possibility that Peking believes not only has it the other Southeast Asian neighbors as South Viet Nam and Cambodia will eventually fall into the Red Chinese

Russian-Chinese Conflicts Seen by Many Diplomats Attending Geneva Parley

By JOSEPH MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A fascinating hobby of diplomats at the 14-nation conference in Geneva is trying to spot differences or conflicts between the Soviet Union and Red China. The presence of Foreign Minister Chen Yi gives Western hopes a rare chance to observe a top Peking dignitary at work, especially since Chen has remained at the conference—which opened May 16—longer than any other foreign minister.

His continued presence raised speculation on whether Peking might be more willing than Moscow to negotiate a settlement of the Laotian question.

But some diplomats have noted privately that Chen, no doubt, is aware of this speculation and may be playing a double game by fostering hopes on the Western side while, in fact, following a hard line.

Certainly Chen showed no sign of relaxing Peking's ultra-militant attitude toward the United States when he rejected Washington's ideas on Laotian neutrality in a "cynical" and "absolutely impermissible" way.

Nevertheless, diplomats experienced in Chinese affairs see a possibility the deadlock will be willing to negotiate a Laotian agreement which would leave small Indochina kingdom a degree of neutrality.

They also see the possibility that Peking believes not only has it the other Southeast Asian neighbors as South Viet Nam and Cambodia will eventually fall into the Red Chinese orbit as an inevitable development of history.

In this thinking, Peking wants most of all to keep the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization from moving into Laos, with troops. Why should Peking pay any price of conquest for something it would otherwise get in time almost automatically.

Some diplomats see Peking's settlement of its border dispute with Burma as evidence of the regime's wish to create an "image" of reasonableness.

Others can find little in all this to cause Moscow strategists to turn handsprings of delight. They note the Soviets never have come down in support of Peking in its long dispute with India over border territory.

The Peking leaders, it is said, have developed their Communist state with less assistance from Moscow than any other foreign Red chiefs, including the independent-minded Reds of Yugoslavia. They know how to use communism to achieve national ends.

But the same diplomats who think Peking also say it would be utterly unrealistic to imagine now that there are any serious divergencies bet w e e n Soviet and Red Chinese foreign policy.

They contend that despite its boasted "great leaps forward," Red China is a weak power, far back on a foreign policy independent of Soviet Union, as a source of heavy machinery—and, above all, arms necessary to defy the U.S.

Admits Putting Cheques Into Own Account

WHITBY (CP) — Mrs. Doris Holliday, 39, a former Whitby councillor charged with stealing $233.90 from mental patients, admitted Thursday depositing patients' cheques into her own account.

Mrs. Holliday told a county court jury she deposited an Ontario Hospital Services cheque in patient's pay cheque into her own account after the patient had cashed his requested the money be given their daughter.

Mrs. Holliday is out of theft. Mrs. Holliday said she always returned the patients' money. She said she paid a dentist bill for one patient and returned the balance of a cheque.

"I have never stolen money from any patient," said Mrs. Holliday, a hospital social worker for more than 17 years. The trial continues.

Montreal Police Take Bombing Most Seriously

MONTREAL (CP)—Real estate man Leo Scanzano was taking the booby trap on his doorstep relatively lightly, but police were deeply serious about the device that injured their expert Thursday morning.

Scanzano chatted with reporters in his hospital room while photographers at his cracked doorstep.

The device, which contained a killing dose of nitroglycerine, exploded as Detective Sgt. Pierre Plouffe gently pulled it from the doorstep.

Plouffe was about 45 feet away but the blast left him badly cut and bleeding from gashes. Neighbor h o o d windows were shattered.

Plouffe, interviewed in hospital later, said the booby trap was activated the first person soon to touch it at close range.

Scanzano discovered it about 8 a.m., when he arrived home from a fishing trip.

He took a close look, heard a ticking sound, and quickly called police after moving his wife and two children to safety.

Plouffe said the cheap box contained a gold - colored, clock and nitroglycerine.

Neither police nor Scanzano, who is listed in the 1960 city directory as manager of Aldo's, a downtown club, linked the incident to recent violence in the city.

Chief Det. Insp. William Fitzpatrick said there was apparently no connection between the incident and an attempted shooting, two beatings of night club figures, and the discovery of a bruised, naked body still unidentified on a lonely road 70 miles north of Montreal.

Scanzano was unable to put forth a motive.

"I haven't been in the night club business for five years," he said. "I'm in real estate now and have no interest in clubs."

BELT BILL DIES

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—A bill to require installation of safety belts in front seats of all new automobiles sold in Illinois died in the Senate Thursday night. Senator Robert Cherry, the bill's Senate sponsor, moved to strike the bill from the calendar after it became obvious it would not get sufficient votes for passage.

Judy La Marsh Says Statistics Or P.M. Wrong

OTTAWA (CP) — Judy LaMarsh attacked the biggest political lie she could find—Prime Minister Diefenbaker — in the Commons Thursday night.

The freshman Liberal member for Niagara Falls described Mr. Diefenbaker as "the 1957 model man of vision" who has become "the 1961 model of hallucination."

She said a recent television broadcast by Mr. Diefenbaker was a "half-hour of half-truths."

She quoted the prime minister as saying that 267,000 more Canadians were employed in May than a year earlier.

She said the bureau of statistics figures showed that 113,000 more Canadians were employed in May than in May, 1960.

Either the prime minister or bureau of statistics was "deliberately lying."

Finance Minister Fleming was in the debate only on his feet demanding withdrawal of an "unparliamentary expression." Miss LaMarsh said Michener supported Mr. Fleming.

Miss LaMarsh said she would hope Mr. Diefenbaker was correct and the bureau of statistics wrong.

Mr. Michener said this remark was amusing.

Miss LaMarsh said the speech-writer for Mr. Diefenbaker may well have been incorrect.

Mr. Fleming again demanded a withdrawal.

Miss LaMarsh said the computers in the bureau of statistics are completely wrong.

Mr. Diefenbaker said he hoped that at the beginning of her parliamentary career Miss LaMarsh wouldn't break the rules.

Miss LaMarsh repeated that the computers were all wrong and that she would abide by the rules. She did not withdraw the original remark.

At other points, she referred to Mr. Diefenbaker's television broadcast as a "Cheshire cat recital" and a "sheer flight of imagination."

Gall Bladder Removed From Marilyn Monroe

NEW YORK (AP)—Marilyn Monroe had her gall bladder removed Thursday night in a two-hour emergency operation at Polyclinic Hospital.

Early today, the 34-year-old blonde was reported in good condition.

Seven doctors were in attendance during surgery, including Marilyn's personal physician.

Under sedation, the movie queen was wheeled into her private room where her former husband, former baseball great Joe DiMaggio, waited.

A hospital spokesman said "there were no complications and she is resting well."

Marilyn had been stricken Wednesday with a gall-stone attack, and, accompanied by DiMaggio, was taken by ambulance to Polyclinic. It was her fourth hospital confinement in the last five months.

A hospital spokesman said the normal convalescence period from gall bladder surgery is 10 to 12 days.

Kuwait Armor Mans Border Facing Iraqis

KUWAIT (AP) — Armored reinforcements moved up to Kuwait's ill-defined northern border Thursday as the new face-off between Iraqi armor reported here at sundown.

British - built armored cars with Kuwaiti crews rolled through Kuwait City 30 miles from the border during the predawn hours.

The border so far has been reported quiet, but officials said Iraqi forces had been reinforced along the frontier since Iraqi Premier Gen. Karim Kassem last week laid claim to the oil-rich sheikdom of the Persian Gulf after Britain gave it independence.

FIGURE

Steve rushed in excitedly and threw a wad of bills on to the table. "Just take a look at that," he told Ann. "Money!"

His wife gasped. "So much," she exclaimed. "How come?"

"It's the Boss's fifty-ninth birthday, and he divided up two thousand dollars amongst us to mark it. I'm in with a hundred yourself."

"Yes, I've been with him the longest," explained Steve. "First he handed us all equal amounts from the pile. Then he shared out the rest amongst the seven of us on the basis of fifty-nine bucks for each completed year with him. And I've got seventeen amounts."

That was indeed a generous gesture. But how much did Steve get?

Commission Urges Stricter Laws for Quebec Hospitals

MONTREAL (CP) — The three - man commission appointed by the Quebec government to investigate the administration of Montreal's Jean Talon hospital is expected to hold its final session today and begin preparing its report to the government.

Two commission lawyers, presenting a review of the evidence Thursday at the investigation entered its final stage, recommended stricter laws governing Quebec's public hospitals.

"Such legislation is essential and urgent," said lawyer Jerome Choquette.

Although the hospital was financed "almost entirely by the public," he said, it was run by only one man, Dr. George Hori.

Andre Villeneuve, the other lawyer, said Dr. Hori was a trustee of public funds that were not always spent "wisely" or "responsibly."

Mr. Villeneuve said the appointment of Henri Cournoyer as manche — now a senator — as the hospital's lawyer in 1954 apparently was made for the sole reason that "he had access to officials in Quebec."

In the hearings, Mr. Cournoyer's manche was accused of asking for and receiving 10 per cent of all grants — both federal and provincial — made to the hospital.

Romuald Belhumeur, a former business manager of the hospital, stuck to his testimony despite Mr. Courtemanche's denial.

Mr. Villeneuve said there was "probably never any clear agreement about this 10 - per-cent business.

"It is strange, nevertheless, that the hospital corporation did not pay its lawyer on a regular basis and never demanded an accounting from him of services rendered."

Mr. Courtemanche testified earlier that he never presented a bill for his services, but left the matter of payment up to Dr. Hori.

"I know I could rely on the generosity of Dr. Hori," Mr. Courtemanche said at the time, admitting he received $8,000 from the hospital over a six-year period.

Marks 103rd Birthday Saturday With Memories of Confederation

MORRISBURG (CP) — John Crites, already in his 104th year, recalled the day Canada was born, made his third birthday Saturday with vivid memories of the day 94 years ago when Confederation was voted in by parliament.

Mr. Crites, oldest resident of this St. Lawrence River town 60 miles southeast of Ottawa, can remember the 1867 boat races, parades, bulldog fights and cock fights which marked July 1 in the early years of childhood.

He remembers Sir John A. Macdonald, first prime minister of Canada, as "a cute old fella and a smart man, I guess."

"My father took me to see him one time. Sir John was speaking to a large crowd and was making quite a fuss about joining with Quebec."

Some yelled 'Go back to Quebec' and Sir John pulled an orange handkerchief from his pocket to wipe his brow," he said with a chuckle.

LIQUOR PLENTIFUL

His clearest recollection of election campaigns was the Confederation era was that "there was a lot of liquor going."

"I was too young to drink but at meetings during an election campaign there were always pails of liquor with a tin cup to drink from."

On election days, he says, party workers would call at the farms in buggies to drive voters to the polls.

Near the polling stations groups of Tories and Grits would hide behind trees with barrels of pork.

"They would pass pork out to the farmers before they went to vote. Then the farmers would go back to an open window and tell who they were voting for. That was before the secret ballot."

The campaign shenanigans included voter-buying.

"My brother-in-law was working for the Grits. He'd walk into a man's house and put a $5 bill on the mantel and walk out without saying a thing. That man voted Grit."

Mr. Crites was born near Cornwall and moved to this area as a boy. Until retiring from farming he had never taken a drink, "but now I take a small one now and then." He began smoking a pipe at 6f.

Savings Plan Cheques Distributed

More than $2,415,000 is being distributed today to the 3,600 employees of Union Carbide Canada Limited in the bi-annual cash distribution of the company's savings plan. Of this amount, the 152 employees of the Bakelite Division, Belleville and Toronto, received cheques totalling $116,685, of which the employees contributed $84,986 and the company added $36,706. The difference in the total represents interest on investment. The greater portion of the cheques is received by the Belleville employees.

The savings plan contains provision for short-term savings under its general savings fund, with cash distribution every two years and for long range investment with a choice of purchasing Canada Savings Bonds or Union Carbide capital stock. The employees have been participating in company savings plans since 1935.

An employee may authorize payroll deductions up to 7 1-2 per cent of his normal straight-time earnings with a maximum allowable deduction of $53.00 per month. The company contributes 10, 20 or 30 per cent of the employee's payments, depending on whether he has one, two, three or more years' service credit. The plan is one of several welfare and benefit plans available to Union Carbide employees.

Rhythm Method Of Birth Control Said Inhumane

LONDON (Reuters) — Baroness Summerskill told the House of Lords Wednesday night that the rhythm method of birth control is inhumane and frustrated women's "natural desires."

"It advises abstinence at the very time when a woman is least disposed to be abstinent," Lady Summerskill said during a debate on birth control. "It is in the interests of marital harmony to starve her when she is hungry and feed her when the appetite is diminished?"

Lady Summerskill is Dr. Edith Summerskill, a physician and former Labor party member of the House of Commons. She was a minister in post-war Labor governments and advocates birth control. Her husband is also a physician. They have two children.

She said the rhythm method is far from certain.

"The very laws of nature are violated," she said.

She also urged that the "unusual theological distinction" drawn between the method of birth control and another should be carefully examined.

NO LONGER DIVIDED

She said that apparently birth control is no longer a matter which divided the churches.

Lord Fisher of Lambeth, the former archbishop of Canterbury, recently said in principle he and Pope John are in agreement on the subject.

Lord Iddesleigh, a Roman Catholic, said the rhythm principle is also approved by the Church, but he could not approve of contraception.

After he had spoken at length on systems of birth control, Lady Summerskill expressed surprise that he had not elaborated the rhythm principle which he advocated.

She walked across the chamber and handed him a booklet on the system which she said is available to any young man or woman.

At this point, the leader of the House, Viscount Hailsham, interrupted to say they are getting "bogged down."

He said he does not think they want a detailed description of the various methods available to mankind."

Garden Notes

Some Flowers Smell Terrible

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Do you know the Stapelias? They are quite common as a house plant, often classed as a cacti, but they are really succulents. The stems are oddly edged and have sharp looking points even half buck. The points never harden or have spines, as in the cacti do. The flower is a sticky star shaped flower of odd spots. The star-shaped blossom is beautifully formed but the odor is quite repulsive.

A story is told of a king in one of the Middle East countries. He lived long ago and was a collector of succulents and cacti. In his country weather conditions favored these plants and they bloomed profusely. The king to test the sincerity of his friends and servants would ask them if they did not think the scent of the Stapelia beautiful. It has been described as the odor of spoiled meat. The small attracts flies which pollinate it.

VILE SCENTED FLOWERS

Many of our treasured plants have vile — scented flowers. Some will be described in absolute terms. We can compare odors and use such phrases as cloying, spicy, sweet, sharp, bitter acrid and pungent but beautiful. It has been described as the odor of spoiled meat. The small attracts flies which pollinate it.

We can compare odors and use such phrases as cloying, spicy, sweet, sharp, bitter acrid and pungent but beautiful. It has been described as the odor of spoiled meat. The small attracts flies which pollinate it.

"Oue ma's meat is another man's poison" could certainly apply to the garden lily and the carrion flower.

Many lilies have a strong smelly sweet or even overright obnoxious. These can be used in the garden but never indoors in the flower arrangements. Lilium martagon is a beautiful purple lily of Europe, Asia Minor to Lake Lake Baikal and L. amabil and L. pomponium.

Then we have Lucinate L. auratum platyphyllum with its odor of ginger but not in close quarters. The same applies to D. cardiocrinum gigasteum. The common lemon lily and Asiatic lilies if it is used in flower arrangements. The brown imperial fritillaria has lovely bronze or yellow flowers on three or four foot stems. The odor is foul, but it smells like a foxes den. Flowering current, ribes sanguineum is said to smell like cats.

NAMED BY NAME

The unsavory smell of some plants is recognized in their botanical names. Stinking iris. It has arum-like flowers, in fact they belong to that family. Not only the flowers, but the leaves too have a bad smell. Another member of the arum family Solenodiscrow, has a pungent spathe. The inside the purple of raw liver, the outside a pale green. Dracunculus has a reddish purple spathe a foot and a half long. Both of these plants have a carrion smell. This is to attract the flies which will pollinate them.

There are other members of this family that have unusual and rather lovely plants for the pool side.

Cleveodendrum foetidium has umbels of lovely purple blossoms which smell quite pleasant, but the leaves have a very unpleasant smell when crushed.

Many find the odor of marigolds quite impossible to stand. Others object to the pungent odor of the chrysanthemum leaves, tomato foliage, pear or hawthorn blossoms. It is all a matter of taste in smells.

Moments in History

Producer Says TV Can Be As Habit Forming as Drugs

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — "What did people do before they had television?" playwright and producer Dore Schary asked. "Well, probably read more books. We probably went out to the movies more often. We played cards more. And, one thing I'm sure we all did: We talked more."

Television, Schary believes, can be as habit-forming as a drug.

"It's so comfortable to sit there in an easy chair," he said. "It's easier to watch something you're only mildly interested in than it is to move."

Last winter during a long siege of hepatitis, Schary's wife, Miralam, had only one source of entertainment: TV.

"She watched every thing," Schary said, "and she found that she became extremely interested in programs she had never bothered to watch before. The daytime serials, audience participation shows, even westerns. The interest continued when she was well, too, so much so that she decided that she'd have to break TV viewing like a bad habit."

ACCENT ON SOUND

Schary, former production head of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, successful film writer and author of two Broadway hits, will produce the first of a series of 12 specials on three networks last season which will be sponsored by an electrical company. The program is called The Sound of the 1960s and will use sounds—the beep of a satellite, the song of birds—as a basis for a commentary on modern living.

"I'm interested in television and I find there are so many things it does well, News, comment and the like. But if I have a good piece of fiction I want to produce, I still prefer to take it into a theatre—the stage or motion pictures. For one thing, it will not be interrupted three or four times with the commercial. And it can be done better."

FLINT, Mich. (AP) — Joe Campbell sank a 25-foot shot from a sand trap on the 18th hole Thursday and seized a one-stroke, first-round lead in the $53,000 Flint open golf tournament.

Campbell had a four - under-par 35-33—68 and led Stan Sikes, a rookie on the pro tour.

Campbell and Sikes rocketed past more experienced pros Lionel Hebert, Toronto's Jerry Magee and defending-champion Mike Souchak.

This trio fired 70s as the 159-man field had trouble breaking par 72 on the 7,280-yard Warwick Hills course in suburban Grand Blanc.

Toronto's Al Balding was in a group three strokes off Campbell's pace at 71. Vancouver's Stan Leonard came in with a 73 and Montreal Johnston was another stroke back.

Maria Schell Enjoys Home In Bavarian Countryside

By DON THOMAS

MUNICH (AP)—You drive to Maria Schell's home through 40 miles of Bavarian countryside, past the green, rounded hills and stacks of drying hay.

You turn up a country lane, wind among farm houses and come to a walled estate. Once you are announced, the gate swings open and you descend a steep driveway to the Schell chateau.

The setting befits a queen, and Miss Schell is one of the rulers of the European cinema.

Maria Schell, teased from a cruise among the Greek isles, showed me about the house, which was gleaming with marble and filled with paintings and art objects she has collected during her travels about the world.

BUILT HOUSE

"My husband (writer Horst Hachler) and I built the house three years ago," she said. "We saw the view and realized we must have it. We live here too little—only four months of the year. But it is good to have a place like this to keep in the mind when you are working far away. It is a great comfort."

Why does she choose to live in Germany?

"That is strange," she said. "All the German stars are living in Switzerland now, and I, a Swiss, am living in Germany. I like the life better here. There is more stimulation, more intellectual activity.

Track Stars For Europe

By BOB TRIMBEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four young British Columbia track stars and a veteran from Calgary head for Europe next week to meet some of the world's greatest runners. Their aim: Experience.

They will make a six - week tour of five countries, the first such venture for a Canadian group since the 1930s.

"For the last 20 years Canadian track and field men and women have been found wanting because they didn't have this kind of experience," Lloyd Swindells, who accompanies the group as manager - coach said Thursday night.

"Canadians don't get enough toughening because they limit their competition to Canadian and United States meets. They need to face the rough going of a truly foreign track. The Americans do this and the advantages show in the Olympics."

Heading the contingent will be Harry Jerome, 20, of North Vancouver, Canada's outstanding sprinter since the heyday of Percy Williams.

BACK IN FORM

Jerome, on the long road back to top form following a leg muscle tear that flattened him in the 1960 Olympics in Rome, where this year he has run 100 yards in 9.3 seconds, the world record until Frank Budd of Villanova did it in 9.2 last week in New York.

Jerome equalled the world mark of 10 seconds for the 100 metres in the Canadian Olympic trials at Saskatoon last year.

With him will be middle-distance runners Sig Ohlemann, 22, of Vancouver, Canada's best outdoors at the half-mile, and Don Berriola, 21, of Rossland, B.C., Canadian indoor 880 champion Veteran Doug Kyle, 28, of Calgary will compete in the two and three-mile, 3,000, 5,000 and 10,000 metres.

The fifth member is Lynn Eves, 19, of Victoria who has chased Jerome to most of his good finishes.

The group leaves for London July 4 with the first meet at Duesseldorf, Germany, July 6. Other competition will be in Ireland, England, Scotland, Denmark and Sweden. The group returns Aug. 20.

Jets Nip Leafs 4-3, Bisons Win

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The props supporting Columbus Jets' first-place lead in the International League may be just a little weaker today but McBean has gone up to the parent Pittsburgh Pirates.

Bean proved Thursday night that he was a mainstay in the Columbus bullpen when he saved the Jets' 4-3 victory over Toronto Maple Leafs and picked up his fourth triumph in seven decisions. The victory, coupled with a 7-4 loss for the second-place Charleston Marlins at the hands of Syracuse Chiefs, Inter cand Columbus lead to four games.

Buffalo Bisons defeated Richmond Virginians 6-3 and Rochester Red Wings beat Jersey City 4-2 in 10 innings.

Nino Escalera's double drove in Dick Gray and broke a 3-3 tie in the ninth inning to give the Jets their victory after they blew a 3-0 second-inning lead Ed Sado's seventh home run of the season drove in two of their runs, and this was matched later by Steve Demeter's 18th with a man on that tied the score, Rudy Hernandez was the loser in relief.

CHIEFS CONNECT

Syracuse got four home runs — by Joe Altobelli, Angel Scull, Ted Lepcio and Frank Lejo—to overcome the Marlins. Al Schroll stopped Charleston for the second time in two nights.

Felix Torres had his usual feast against Richmond pitching, hitting his 14th homer of the year and No. 7 against the Virginians. It was his third circuit blast in three nights. Tony Curry of the Bisons hit No. 17 as Babe Birrer won his fifth game.

John Powell and Luke Easter both homered to drive in al. Rochester's runs and overcome a 3-0 Jersey City lead. Easter hit his with two men on base, breaking an 0-for - 10 batting slump during which he never hit a ball out of the infield. Gordon Jones (4-3) was the winner.

FIGHT DATE SET

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP)—Olympic champion Cassius Clay will meet rugged Alonzo Johnson in a 10 - round boxing match July 22. Promoter Bill Kinz said the heavyweight bout will be televised by the American Broadcasting Company. Clay is unbeaten in seven professional fights and Johnson has a 18-7 record.

David Hurst Wins Kingston Tennis Final

Belleville's David Hurst of the Quinte Tennis Club won the final round in Junior Boys' Division of the Kingston Junior Tennis Tournament qualifying tournament. He will now advance in the Telegram Junior Park Tournament to be held in Toronto July 3 to 7, along with Belleville's Bill Morton who qualified in the junior men's division.

In the most crowd-pleasing match of the tournament, Hurst, finalist in the 1960 Ontario Open, established his experience in defeating Rick Cunningham of Kingston 6-2, 6-4 and 6-0.

Tail Setting

Harness Racing Bits

By Phil Stewart

The June 17 race meet in Belleville was the biggest success in the history of the Quinte Driving and Riding Club as a record attendance more than tripled the handle at the betting stand over any previous meet. The next meet here is on July 8th and if every fan turns out and brings a friend a new record should be established. Remember the Quinte Driving and Riding Club is not interested in making a lot of money but only in presenting good racing for the horsemen and good entertainment for the fans. The increased interest from a good fan support will be plowed back into the sport in the form of increased purses for future races. Already slated for the July 8th meet is the addition of a fourth race making 8 heats instead of six each night.

An interesting note from the June 17 races was the win in the first match of John and Ken Weeks' "Dale Mite." The five-year-old gelding by "Budmitte" out of "Dale Hanover" was the first of his career to not only take a personal record but to pace one of the faster district mile tracks in the season. Also of interest was the double win of "Johnny Dale" to run his unbeaten string to eight straight heats at Peterborough and Belleville. The roan gelding won the first heat of the P.T.A. at Peterborough again on Saturday, June 24, but was finally beaten as he finished 3rd to "Sarasha Lee" owned by Brethour Bros. of Sunderland and "Carl W. Gratton," owned by S. Downs of Pontypool in 2.13. "Blackjack's Pride," owned and driven by Larry Zebedee of Belleville was 5 and 4 in this race.

"Cragway," the 3-year-old "MacDuff" trotter, owned and driven by Bernard Hunt of Tweed, put on another of his famous running displays in the first heat of the Keith Brown Invitation Trot at Peterborough and finished eighth. "Dictator Pick" of Peterborough was the winner in a time of 2.21. However, "Cragway" went away good in the second heat to trot to the half in 1.07 and won with ease in 2.19. "Dictator Pick" finished fifth in this heat after making a break at the start.

I recently returned from a trip to Halifax, N.S., where I had the pleasure of attending the races at "Seckville Downs." This nice little track races three times a week all summer under the lights. Of interest to local fans was "Billie Elgin," formerly raced in this area by John Hunsback of Batterses. "Billie" had started a couple of times this year but was a little short. Last season he made over $1,300 in the Maritimes. Other Ontario breds included "Ambro Aileen" and "Slow Hope," formerly from Armstrong Brothers, Brampton, and "Lou Gale's Boy," a "Jimmy Chief" who was started in Ontario and is racing with the best in the Maritimes.

FILM NEWCOMER PAT STANLEY LEADING LADY TO JERRY LEWIS

Every so often a fresh, exciting newcomer bursts upon the Hollywood scene, heralding a career of great promise. The latest to step into the film spotlight is a young lady named Pat Stanley, who hails originally from Cincinnati and arrived in the cinema city by way of Broadway. Unlike many a newcomer, however, the petite Miss Stanley is starting her film career at the top. She plays leading lady to Jerry Lewis in his new Paramount Technicolor comedy, "The Ladies Man", playing tonight and Saturday at the Belle Theatre.

So highly thought of is Pat by studio executives that she was signed to a five-year, one-picture-a-year-film contract. Pat says "It all seems like a dream". It is a "dream" which actually began one night in New o'rk when Pat was seen as Dora in the hit Broadway musical, "Florello". The head of Paramount studios watched her performance and was so very much impressed that he immediately set in motion negotiations that led to her top-casting by Lewis in "The Ladies Man" and subsequently to the contract.

The five-foot-three bundle of bounce and personality launched her show business career as the dancing lead in a summer stock production of "The Touch of Venus". Dancing roles in several other shows followed and led to a top part in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn". Pat then went on some popular television shows including Ed Sullivan's, Omnibus and Arthur Murray, and subsequently hit the jackpot with her casting as Dora in "Florello". She withdrew from the still-going-strong show to seize the Hollywood opportunity that suddenly presented itself.

"The Ladies Man" features 30 other attractive and exciting females in the all-girl Hollywood boarding - house with Jerry as its only male employee.

Bat-Berserk Willie Belts Three Homers

Blasts Giants Into Second

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

The great Willie Mays is belting the ball again and San Francisco Giants are back in second place in the National League pennant race.

Since manager Al Dark gave Mays a rest 10 days ago, today the Giants stopped the cellar spot in the National League by 11 hits, seven of them for extra bases, 43 at-bats and [illegible] 12 runs.

Mays spread-ready for another rest when he swept 1-for-7 in the Giants' 7-6, 14-inning tie with Philadelphia Phillies Wednesday night. But he walked the daylights out of Jim Hicks.

Willie rapped six hits, five for extra bases, and drove in seven runs as the Giants swept a doubleheader from the Phils Wednesday night. He hit three homers in the opener, winding it 8-7 in the 10th with the 290th home run of his major league career. Then he tagged a triple and a double in a 4-1 victory in the second game.

GIANTS OUST DODGERS

That put the Giants in second place by .003 percentage points over Los Angeles Dodgers, who lost 4-2 to Pittsburgh Pirates. It also put the Giants within 2½ games of the league - leading Cincinnati Redlegs, who dropped their third straight game, a 15-8 decision to Chicago Cubs.

Mays increased his batting average 13 points to .331 in the sweep and drove in five runs with his three circuit clouts. His first two, both two - run shots, were off reliever Dallas Green and gave the Giants a 4-4 tie after three innings. Mays won the engagement with his 20th home run of the season, off Frank Sullivan (3-8).

In the second game, Mays tripled home the Giants' first run as they scored three in the fourth inning off loser Art Ditmar (7-8). Ed Bailey capped the burst with a homer. Billy Pierce (5-5), wishes for more than a month and knocked out as a reliever in the opener, took the nightcap with a five-hitter.

KEPT PITCHERS SECRET

The first game, incidentally, was a battle before it started. Dark and manager Gene Mauch of the Phils kept their starting pitchers a secret. Lefthander Billy O'Dell and righthander Sam Jones warmed up for the Giants, southpaw Ken Lehman and righthanders Green and Mahaffey for the Phils.

Lehman started, gave up a single and a walk, then departed. O'Dell started for the Giants, yielded a single to the first man he faced and gave way to Jones in a four - run first inning. Juan Marichal (6-4), working in relief for the first time, was the winner.

The seventh - place Cubs collected 17 hits, four of them homers, and beat Jim Maloney (4-4).

ALTMAN LEADS LEAGUE

Don Cardwell (7-5) was the winner, although giving up 11 of Cincinnati's 23 hits, including three home runs. Cardwell slugged one of the Cubs' homers along with Billy Williams, Al Heist and George Altman. Altman batted 5-for-13 in his last three games and leads the league with a .322 average.

Earl Francis (1-2) and reliever Elroy Face checked the Dodgers on three hits while the Pirates, blanked on four hits for seven innings, came from behind and beat Sandy Koufax (10-4) with four runs in the eighth inning. The rally began with two men out. Bill Virdon and Johnny Logan singled and were scored on a deadlocking double by Roberto Clemente before reliever Larry Sherry came on and gave up a clinching single by Dick Stuart and a triple by Don Hoak.

All three Dodger hits were off Face, who struck out 10 men in his eight innings and gave Pittsburgh runs on three walks and a single by Tommy Davis in the first inning.

Wimbledon Tennis

Canadians Win Tough Doubles

LONDON (CP) — Upsets by United States players in the men's and women's singles and a narrow victory by Canada's men's doubles team in a gruelling match were standouts at the 75th Wimbledon tennis championships Thursday.

Chris Crawford, 20, a Piedmont, Calif., college student, turned the ranking tables on Italy's Nicola Pietrangeli with a 2-6, 6-3, 6-4, 6-4 victory, Pietrangeli, a seasoned player who made the semi - finals here a year ago, was given the third seed—ranking just behind Australians Neale Fraser, the defending champion and top seed, and Rod Laver, rated No. 2. Both won their matches Thursday.

Another Californian, hard-volleying Mimi Arnold from Redwood, surprised the gallery with a straight sets victory over Australian Jan Lehane, rated No. 4 in the women's singles. Little Miss Arnold took it 7-5, 6-4 in a brisk 53-minute contest.

Bob Bedard of Sherbrooke, Que., and Francois Godbout of Waterloo, Que., gave the Wimbledon crowd two hours and 36 minutes of tennis thrills as they won a hot battle with the U.S. team of Donald Dell and Clifford Henry in a first - round match. The score was 6-3, 3-6, 8-6, 6-8, 11-9.

SUN FELLS 79

The Canadian Davis Cuppers showed real fighting spirit in the 83-degree heat that sent 79 spectators to hospital tents for sunstroke treatment. They had to battle back from match point in the final set to hang on to the win.

Bedard, ice cool despite the heat, played a sharp, accurate game in all departments. Godbout, a bit shaky in his service, turned in a great game at the net.

In the 20th game of the final set, Godbout uncorked a booming return of Dell's service that saved the Canadians on their opponents' second match point and they went on to win.

Bedard and Godbout were knocked out of the singles in earlier play.

Nineteen-year-old Ann Haydon-Jones, Canada's only hope, was defeated in the first round after a stiff battle in the Wimbledon qualifying rounds, went down 6-4, 6-4 to Mrs. Jill Mills of Britain.

Still and running in the women's singles is Victoria's Susan Butt, who had a bye Thursday.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

The fighting black bear and his heavyweight counterpart, the musky, will be fair game starting at the crack o' dawn tomorrow. You can take six bass per day but confine the big bar muskies to two. And don't forget the muskie is the only fish on which there is a size limit. He must not be less than 24 inches.

Where to get 'em? I don't know. I am not a fishing expert, nor an authority unless they are looking up at me from a hot plate, mouth-watering in their golden-brown overcoats.

Personally I do not put too much faith in columnar "experts", with their charts, tables, temperatures, etc. Give me an oldtimer, a grey-thatched veteran who knows the pools, streams, lakes and rivers from experience, as an authority.

I joined two other angling tyros one time and went searching for brook trout. We followed printed directions carefully. They sent us up around the Kawarthas and all the fish we ran into was the annual convention of Carp Unlimited.

A couple of these overgrown porpoises which looked like executives of the mud-carping fraternity would have tipped the scales at between 25-30 pounds.

However, we did not go fish-hungry. We landed some choice British Columbia salmon, thanks to a forsighted member who had brought along a can-opener.

But back to the bass. This is the opinion of a sepuagenarian adviser.

Says he, "generally bass lie on the bottom unless there are lily pads or such on the surface where the fish may lie just under them. Usually a lure must pass pretty close to a bass before he'll bother it."

The earliest fishing of the season is much the easiest, he says. Then, largemouths will be found in six to eight feet of water usually among at least fairly heavy weeds. Simultaneously will be all the same depths bed to open water or among scattered weeds. As surface lure will generally work very well at times, especially mornings and evenings.

He says bass will spend most of the daylight hours on the bottom in fairly deep water except just after daylight and before dark when they can be taken readily as a rule in the shallow water.

Dr. James Henshall, an outstanding authority on fish and fishing, is quoted as saying: "The bass will rise to the artificial fly as readily as the salmon or brook trout under the same conditions and will take the live minnow or other live bait under any and all circumstances favorable to the taking of other fish. I consider six, inch for inch and pound for pound the gamest fish that swims. The royal salmon and lordly trout must yield the palm to a bass of equal weight."

My elderly friend also tells me that the musky is no slouch when it comes to putting on the figurative gloves with an angler.

The best time of the year, he says, to haul in these fighting furies is in mid-August. It seems Madame Musky has a yen to change her quarters and she orders the bass to find a new housing development. They leave their split-level weed bungalows and start housecleaning.

They are not averse to taking a smack at roots and if you're in the vicinity and slow-trolling a tasty tidbit, you're liable to land a lunker.

You can get them in Muscota Bay, the Trent River, the Moira, and the prolific Stoco Lake.

RCAF Flyers, fresh from their win over Cobourg, tangle with the Bobcats at the Fair Grounds tonight at 8.15 . . . . Racing car drivers from Michigan, Pennsylvania, New York State and Ontario will vie for honors at the Shannonville Speedway tomorrow afternoon. The Red Devils bet on a fine show.

Lee Culhane wants exhibition games for the Booths TV midget softballers. Any interested squads should contact Culhane at the Fire Department . . . . Meet High-Flying Orioles

Tigers Chill Chisox, Tribe Skids

By ED WILKS
Associated Press Staff Writer

The first - place Detroit Tigers, after chilling Chicago White Sox, now run into Baltimore Orioles, the hottest team in the American League race.

The Birds are in fourth spot, 11 games behind the Tigers and a half - game out of third. But after winning eight of their last nine games, the Orioles will be bucking a Memorial Stadium jinx as well as title-hungry leaders when they return home for the opener of a three game set with Detroit tonight.

Baltimore has only a 15-19 record at home, wholly playing .2-5 ball on the road. The Tigers, 4-1 over the Orioles in the season series, are 3-0 at Baltimore.

The Orioles,'sended a 10-4 road trip by winning their fifth straight encompassed Thursday night, beating Kansas City Athletics and bonus baby Lew Krausse 6-2 behind the two-hit pitching of Dick Hall.

Detroit handed the White Sox a second straight loss, 5-2, for a two - game bulge over the idle New York Yankees. The third - place Cleveland Indians dropped six games behind with a 3-1 loss to Washington Senators. Boston Red Sox beat Minnesota Twins 9-2.

The Orioles came from behind against Krausse (1-1), a $125,000 righthander who gave up eight hits and five earned runs in 5 1-3 innings. A single by Jim Gentile and an error tied the game 2-2 in the fifth inning and Baltimore broke it up with a four - run sixth triggered by Russ Snyder's two-run triple.

Hall (4-3), a righthander acquired from Kansas City in a trade, walked only one man and struck out eight while putting away his second two - hitter of the season. The walk and Wayne Causey's double in the fourth on a single by Jerry Lumpe and a three - base error by Harry Bright.

Frank Lary won his 11th of the season for the Tigers, beating Cal McCish (4-7) in 83-degree heat at Detroit.

A two - run triple by rookie Dick McAuliffe, off reliever Turk Lown, broke a 2-2 tie when Detroit scored three runs in the seventh. Billy Bruton, who hit a two - run homer in the third, brought in the final run with a sacrifice fly. Floyd Robinson bonehred for the Sox, who slipped back to sixth spot after reaching fourth place with a 13-game winning streak.

Frank Malzone hit a pair of home runs for the Red Sox, one a three - run shot that clinched things as they came back behind with six runs in the fifth inning off Bert Cueto (3-3). Article Early, recalled Wednesday from Seattle of the Pacific Coast League, won in relief.

Washington clipped Cleveland on home runs by Billy Klaus and Marty Keough behind the six - hit pitching of winner Johnny Gabler (2-2) and reliever Dave Sisler. Wynn Hawkins (5-7) was the loser for the Indians, who scored in the seventh inning on two errors.

Bookies Raided by Tax Boys

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States internal revenue service Thursday staged a coordinated series of raids aimed principally at horse race bookmakers and lottery operators.

It said its agents had so far reported 56 raids with 35 arrests in 13 cities in as many states. In addition to the arrests, the agents seized $31,000 in cash and three automobiles.

Those arrested were charged with conducting gambling operations without holding the $50 annual gambling stamp which gamblers are required to purchase.

North Burlington Site

Plan Major Ball Stadium

HAMILTON (CP) — A syndicate of Canadian investors is considering building a major baseball stadium in North Burlington.

The investors, some of them from Toronto, have already started purchasing property on their planned site.

Jack Kent Cooke, owner of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, said Thursday the syndicate is already at work on the stadium plans. Mr. Cooke has been seeking a major league baseball franchise for several years.

"I am not directly concerned in acquiring the property but the project has my complete blessing," said Mr. Cooke.

"The only reason Toronto does not have a major league ball club is because it lacks a proper stadium.

"The new plan, however, would serve a larger area than the city of Toronto," he said. "It would provide a park for a ball club which would belong to the large metropolitan area known as the Golden Horseshoe."

The investors believe a major league club in this area would attract fans from Southern Ontario and the Buffalo area.

Burlington reports indicated a group of 66 property owners have been, or shortly will be, approached in connection with the plan.

J. Gordon Blair, director of business development at Burlington, described Thursday that some property owners are already negotiating. He said he is not yet free to indicate the exact area where the stadium is planned, except that it is what would be readily accessible from the Queen Elizabeth Way and Highway 5.

Joyces Get "Works" In Peterborough

Joyce Real Estate is in high dudgeon today over the treatment they received last night in the Peterborough softball tournament!

Joyces' sanity defeated People's Credit Jewellers of Peterborough by a 9-3 count.

Then they were told by the tournament that they had lost the game by default, for using an ineligible player, and were thus eliminated.

The "ineligible" player was Ken Kibblewhite, borrowed from the RCAF Flyers for the tournament.

Kibblewhite pitched a two-hundredth game for Joyces, according to catcher Claude Carr. He gave up just four or five hits and struck out 14 batters.

The Joyce manager sent and written a letter to [illegible] secretary L. G. Pinhard, giving permission to use Kibblewhite in the tournament.

The Peterborough secretary was called up "quest" tournament and when manager Bill Shaw made arrangements to borrow the team, nothing was said about borrowing players.

Prince George Indians, of Kingston, were said to be borrowing Jim Desmond, pitching for them. An Oshawa team, which lost to Joyces by a 6-0 score last night, had at least one member of another Oshawa city team, Bishop. The player is a member of the Toronto Beaches Football league.

One of the Peterborough teams was said to be bringing in Mahoney, an ex-Peterborough pitcher for the tournament, according to the Peterborough Examiner. In all three tournament writeups, such pitching was said about borrowing players.

The Miracle of Birth

By ROY L. SMITH

A famous heart specialist was addressing a great audience of business executives on his favorite theme, and in the course of his remarks he said, "We know a normal way to stop a heart from beating, but no scientist in all the world knows how to start it beating in the first place. The beginning of life continues to be as much a miracle as it was the first time it occurred. As a matter of fact every birth — whether among animals or men — is a miracle.

"Let me invite you to look over my shoulder, while I lay bare the working of the mystery under the microscope," the great surgeon continued. "Notice the junction of those two cells — egg and the sperm. Watch them as they become a single identity. Then watch them as the cells begin to multiply. Do you see that itty little blob taking together like a family reunion? Watch them — formless at first, and altogether unorganized. Now they are going to take shape. Watch them, and you will see them assuming form, like an organization. They are taking a shape. No one is telling it for them — they are doing it for themselves. Now look! The whole mass is moving, as a unit. It's beating! regularly and rhythmically! It's a heart! It's alive! What did it? Who did it? Where did the life come from?"

According to demographers the "miracle" is happening on an average of three times every second around the world. They call it "the population explosion", and the scientists are worried about it as are also the statesmen of the world.

EVERY MOTHER A MIRACLE

Let it be said, without detracting in any way from the fact that is Mary's, that every mother represents a miracle. Inside the sanctity of the womb where a human being is coming to birth a holy work is in progress. The amazing functioning of the lungs and the chemistries out of which personalities emerge represents the creative power of God in its most astounding form.

The Uniform Sunday School lessons for July 2 is "MARY, THE MOTHER OF JESUS," Matthew 1:18-25; 12:46-50; Luke 1:26 through 2:52; John 2:1-10; 19:25-27; Acts 1:14.

To become a partner with the divine in introducing a human being into this world is the last word in wonder and worth. Churches have formulated their doctrines, and the theologians have debated the details. But when all has been said, and all the facts have been weighed, the greatest tribute that can be paid to any human being is the one that was paid to Mary when she was chosen, out of all the women of the earth, to become the mother of Jesus!

ONE MOTHER AT THE SCENE.

There is something very significant, and at the same time very thrilling, about the story of the crucifixion of Jesus. His mother was there!

There were three crosses raised on the barren little hill just outside the gates of Jerusalem. A man hung, dying, upon each one of them. And in the mocking, jeering, callous crowd that milled about on the rocks below there was the mother of one of them!

The conjecture can be pressed too far, of course, but one is compelled to speculate on what the role of the two members might have been if they had had brothers who would have accompanied them to Calvary. By the confession of at least one of Mary's cousins, they both deserved to die, and according to the word of the same unfortunate cousin, the third Jesus of Nazareth — had done nothing worthy of death.

It is too narrow a base upon which to build a doctrine, but at least one can get a glimpse of the character of Mary. She continued with the divine child to the end.

And it was exactly as the old saint had said, when the child was presented in the temple at the age of eight days: "A sword shall pierce thy heart because of him."

Lightning Ignites Meter Box

DESERONTO — Shortly before midnight Friday the fire department was called to the home of Bert Coles on Green Street. The meter box for the electrical circuit entering the house had caught fire and flames shooting on several feet from the box alarmed neighbors. When the firemen arrived the fire was out, but a thorough check was made of the house and wiring to make sure no damage had been done other than to the meter box and the wires. As far as can be ascertained, there was no cause for the fire other than the electrical storm shortly before.

The firemen cut the wires leading to the home so that no other short circuit could occur and the Public Utilities replaced the meter the following morning. Other damage done by the storm the same night was to blow the lightning arrester at the Metcalfe factory and the Hawley factory.

DOLLAR MOVEMENT-Finance Minister Fleming in his June 30 budget announced measures to lower the value of the Canadian dollar.

Graph shows how the dollar has changed value since 1914. This comparison of the Canadian dollar in terms of the United States dollar is based on monthly average quotations.

Last month shown is May. Thus graph does not include changes which followed the budget.

The Canadian dollar has changed value for a variety of reasons.

Until relatively recent years the biggest changes followed similar action by the pound sterling.

After the first world war the Canadian dollar dropped, reflecting a drop in the British pound, a drop in the prices of commodities and in the total of Canadian exports, and in increased imports of consumer goods.

The Canadian currency recovered along with the pound after most of the 1920s was close to par.

In 1931 Britain went off the gold standard and the pound fell sharply. The Canadian dollar followed, in more moderate fashion, to around 89 cents. Some banking circles felt it might drop to 80 cents, but didn't. There was a generally feeling that the Canadian currency was being undervalued, so bought it in large quantities as an investment and this helped steady the price.

In 1933 the U.S. devalued its currency by raising the price of gold, an anti-depression measure. The pound sterling shot up, and the Canadian dollar followed.

VALUE REGULATED

From Sept. 16, 1939, to Oct. 2, 1950, the value of the currency was regulated by the Foreign Exchange Control Board.

In 1949, when Britain devalued the pound, the Canadian dollar was revalued from par to about 10-per-cent discount. This time, however, the old relationship with the pound (no longer was effective. American cents started buying Canadian currency until its valuation became unrealistic.

On Oct. 4, 1950, it was set free to find its level according to market operations, but with some action kept on dealings. Since Dec. 15, 1951, it has been altogether free.

DESERONTO

Parade Will Feature Bands And Equipment

DESERONTO — If the weatherman will co-operate, it seems sure that Deseronto will be in for a lively weekend to celebrate Dominion Day. Plans for the two-day event have been almost completed and there will be fun for all ages.

On Friday there will be poofy rides for the children and also go-carts for those who like speed. Course of all description will be offered for the entertainment of the adults until ten o'clock. Then the teenagers will have a chance on the street dance begins. The dance is to last until 12.30 and the music will be supplied by the Quintones.

According to chairman Al Fraser and fireman Doc Hubbs, who are in charge of the parade, Saturday will be one long entertaining. The parade will begin at seven in the evening and will travel down Main St. to Fourth and then along Thomas to St. George and again along Main. There will be a band from Port Hope, the Sea Cadet band and an Air Cadet band from Trenton. There will also be a band from Picton and two groups of majorettes are also in the line. Seven fire departments are sending apparatus for the parade also and one of the most interesting will be the Belleville contingent with the old time two helmets.

Following the afternoon there is a fishing derby for the Isaak-Walton of the area. There will be a prize for the largest small mouth bass caught in the bay area.

Group Finds Assiniboines Practised Occult Burials As Well as Cannibalism

By CAREL MOREAU
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—A scientific expedition has opened an unusual pocket in the Canadian shadowy pre-history with evidence of occult burials and rituals among the Plains Indians of Assiniboine Indians seven centuries ago.

A four-member team from the Royal Ontario Museum turned up the evidence early in June while sifting through a "wonder" burial ground in the Rainy River district of Northwestern Ontario.

The grave held about 13 skeletons, including those of children. Small adult skulls bore traces of elaborate "death masks" made of clay coloured with red ochre, black and white.

Four of the skulls were broken open in such a way as to suggest the brains had been removed—perhaps eaten—in prayer to magical and special qualities of the men who died.

Skulls with similar features have been found in other ancient graves, particularly in burial caves along the Philippine Islands of the Pacific and in a grave at Jericho. But the site of the biblical city of Jericho. But expedition leader Kenyon Kenyon says there is also a unique in northeastern North America, possibly in the continent.

MAY FILL BLANKS

Mr. Kenyon confesses there are blank spots in the story the skulls tell, chiefly because they do not fit in with known Indian customs of India. But the stocky, bearded museum researcher is certain the discovery "will modify an awful mess of the Plains Indian problem he completes his study."

Mr. Kenyon, who studied anthropology at the University of British Columbia and Toronto, began working in the Rainy River Hill site, named for a former Hudson's Bay post, near Fort Frances.

The grave was a great mound, 100 feet long, 50 feet wide, 10 feet high, covering a pit 10 feet across and six feet deep, the first wrecking visit the 64-year-old archaeologist cut through. Through the mound and located the log-roofed tomb underneath. Radiocarbon tests dated the grave at about 1200 A.D.

He left the tomb unprobed, expecting it to yield only routine information although it held intensely personal interest to Indians. To Indian burial mounds for south along the Ohio River.

INTERMISSION IN MAY

Grants from the museum and the Quetico Foundation, an association of Canadian professional men interested in conservation and research, enabled him to return late this May. He enlisted three assistants, Toronto zoologist Dr. Charles Mrs. Churcher and a student anthropologist, Patricia Gall.

The four worked within the tomb, found human bones, shell and bead-bone beads and, among the remains of the children, they decorated vases about two or three inches in diameter.

Mr. Kenyon recalls he was working about 10 feet down from the bottom of the tomb, thinking "this is a piece of cake—we'll be out in a couple of hours," when he came across a "beautiful face." The days later it was still lying face down in that hole scraping around with a dental probe.

"This fellow," he said, pointing to a skull, "had it covered the clay - filled eye sockets, "was face down when I hit him. I began to work away at him and as I got around to the temple I saw a second layer of clay underneath and it was colored red.

"Then below," indicating another skull with tiny rings of white shell set into the eye sockets, "was lying right beside the first one. I saw his left eye and I knew I had two.

"I started to shout and my voice got higher as I turned out each skull. It was a maximum effort to get the other one first thing I shouted was 'I'll be damned' and I haven't thought of anything better to say since."

GRAVE FOR VIPS

The skulls, beads, vases and cartons full of bones are piled in a back room of the museum laboratory. So far sorted, coated with preservative glue and labelled, Mr. Kenyon figures he will take two years of research before he can interpret the disparity.

He has determined that the Hungry Hall mound was a second grave, prepared especially for important members of the tribe some time after their death. The skulls were found separated from the skeletons in two chutes on opposite sides of the grave.

At least one of the skulls, most of which had small holes pierced through the clay eyes and bore wedge-shaped dents in the nose - clay, probably he longed to a medicine man. It was resting on a clay tube, about eight inches long, which has been identified as a "sucking tube" used by medicine men to draw aches, injuries and illnesses out of an ailing Indian.

The holes in the back of four skulls, about three inches in diameter, are judged by Dr. Churcher and four other experts to have been made shortly after death as that the brains could be extracted. Like some other primitive peoples, these Indians may have believed in "sympathetic magic" — that they could retain the special powers of those who died by keeping or eating their brains.

As for the wider story told by the discovery, Mr. Kenyon can only speculate until he completes his research.

The massive size of the mound suggests that the tribe belonged to a well-organized, well-fed society that could afford to carry manpower from food-gathering. Mr. Kenyon believes the Assiniboine way of life may have declined after 1300 A.D. because a severe change in the climate forced them back to subsistence level.

The Hungry Hall tomb, he says, might even prove to be the northern end of a culture pattern stretching from Mexico, where the great Maya civilization developed such buried mounds into pyramid temples.

GRISLY FIND — Royal Ontario Museum archaeologists have unearthed skulls of Assiniboine Indians, endowed 700 years ago in the Rainy River district of Northern Ontario, that show strange, gruesome burial rituals. Archaeologist Walter Kenyon examines one of 15 skulls found. Seven had been built up with clay on the face and decorated with red ochre. Four had had holes broken in the back of the cranium, suggesting that the Indians had removed and eaten the brains of the deceased to gain their powers.
